Referendum passes on second attempt

DR. SCOTT D. THOMSON: Superintendent

ETHS Board of Education presented a referendum to Evanston voters asking for an increase in the legal tax rates in the educational fund from $1.40 to $1.76 and from 37 to 49.5 cents in the building fund. The bond issue request, held in November, failed due to a lack of student participation and parent interest, according to Dr. Scott D. Thomson, superintendent.

A second attempt at the passage of the referendum was held in March. At this time the bond issue passed in part, the education fund passing by a majority of 85 votes, while the building fund was defeated by more than 800 votes.

Dr. Thomson, accrediting the approval of the educational fund to an increase in student involvement, praised student canvassing of business and residential areas as an important factor in the record turn out, the largest in the history of ETHS.

Cuts in the budget that were prompted by the failure of the first referendum bid were deemed unnecessary by the passage of the second attempt. These cuts had included the elimination of the Frosh and JV athletics, an increase in class size and teacher load, and the reduction of the custodial staff.

Some of the cuts that remained were a smaller Annual Report, a decrease in the number of the teachers hired, and a cutback in consultant fees.

Failure of both attempts to increase the building fund resulted in a cutback of maintenance, a delay in landscaping the remaining school courts, and a postponement of needed repairs. No decrease in personnel was planned.

ETHS faculty participated in the Evanston Association of Prevention of Drug Abuse for Teachers and Parents. The workshops, held on school days, were provided for by an early dismissal of classes. Dr. Thomson felt that racial tension was lower this year than in recent years because of an increase in black leadership in school activities.

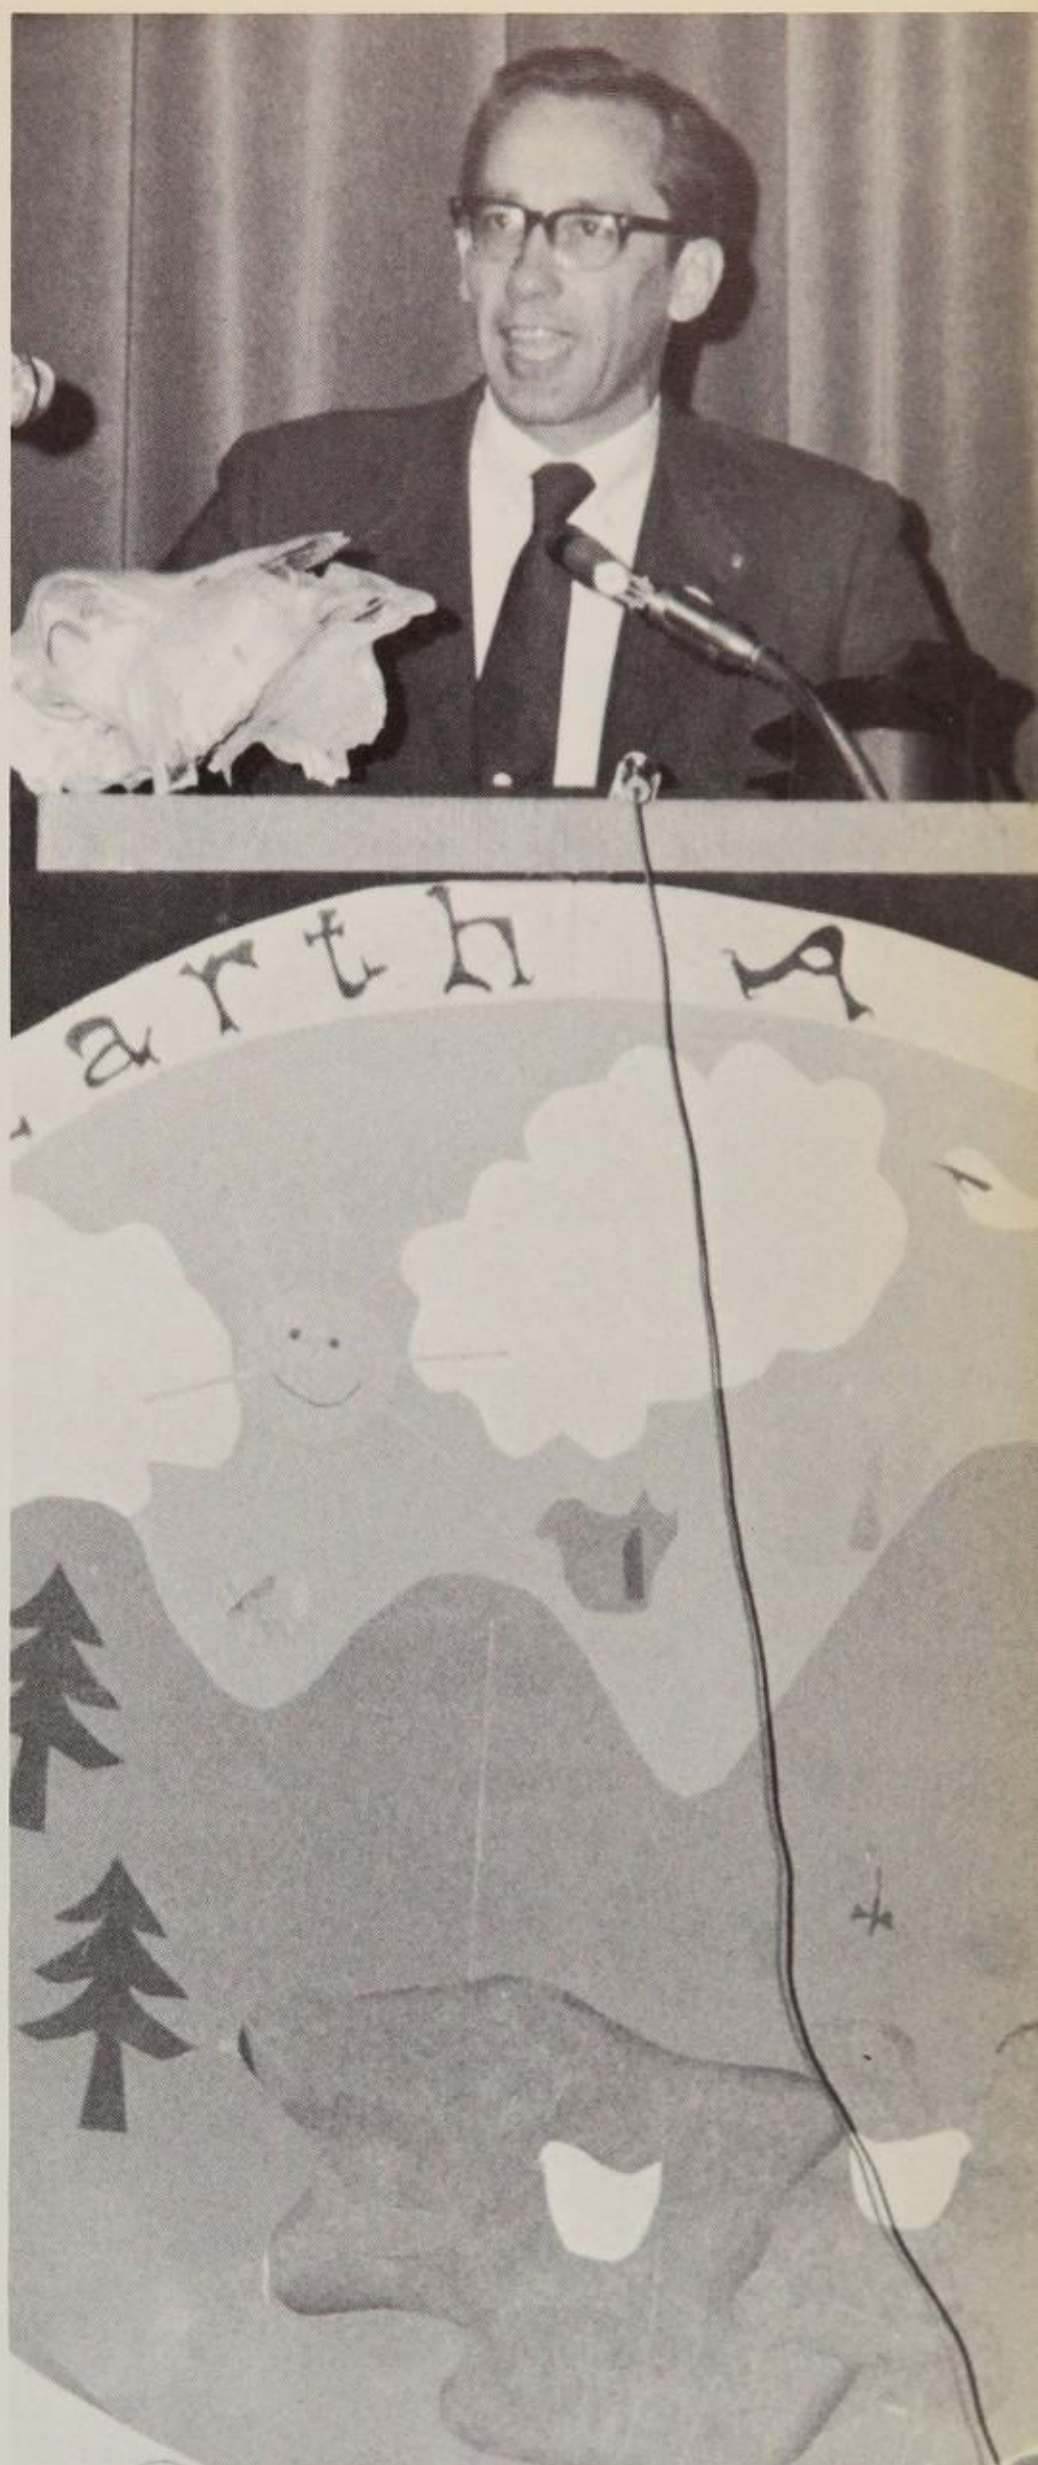

Tom Slosar and Diane Blayney have a serious discussion about the growth and development of ETHS with Dr. Thomson.

Maximum learning environment sought

DR. DONALD TORRESON: Assistant Superintendent

Mrs. Dorothy Magett, coordinator of human relations, worked to promote the development of a school atmosphere conducive to maximum learning for all students through equal educational opportunity. Changes instituted this year included the use of supplementary texts that adequately covered the role and achievements of all Americans, the formulation of in-service education programs for the faculty, the recruitment of black staff members, the maintenance of human relations communication among faculty, students, and parents, and the development of black studies courses in literature and history.

Coordination of the overall communications program of the school district was supervised by Director of Public Information Services Miss Jill Niemoth. The Public Information office provided and maintained contacts with all local and national public media and served as a resource center, clearing house, and dissemination agency for all types of school information.

Data Processing Director Mr. George Stanger supervised all computer services conducted in the Data Processing Center, including financial, library, and student accounting. Mr. Charles Klingsporn joined the staff this year as IBM Systems Analyst in charge of writing programs for the computers.

Personnel Director Mr. Jean Emmons arranged for the recruitment of teachers, office workers, substitute teachers, and student teachers, and provided the school with statistical information regarding staff composition.

Individual schools assume added responsibility

DR. CLYDE SLOCUM: Boltwood School Principal

PHILLIP McDEVITT: Beardsley School Principal

DR. RONALD WALDEN: Boltwood School Assistant Principal

RAYMOND ANDERSON: Beardsley School Assistant Principal

Principals in the four schools combined efforts with students and faculty this year in promoting and enforcing student rights and responsibilities.

The ETHS Disciplinary Code came into effect after having undergone concerted discussion and revision last year. Personal and property rights, school and class attendance, illegal substances and dangerous articles, dress and appearance, classroom discipline, and a provision for grievance channels for students were formally outlined in regard to school problems, policies, and disciplinary actions.

Seniors were given increasing freedom in the management of their time. In Bacon, the student lounge was run completely by seniors, while in Boltwood lounge seniors were permitted to eat during lunch mods.

Freshmen were more heavily scheduled in all four schools to aid the development of good study habits as they relate to proper use of free mods by being required to go to study hall during most of their unscheduled time.

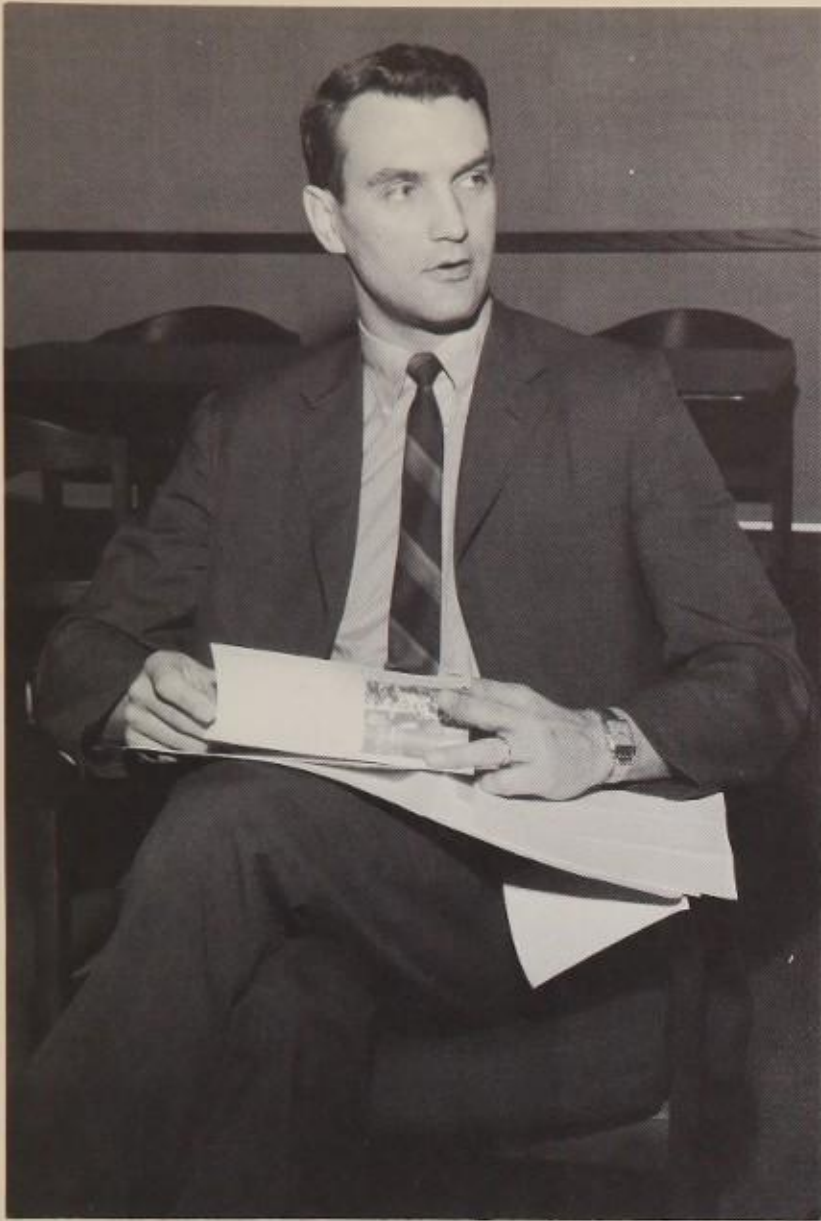

Beardsley Principal Mr. Philip McDevitt set up a School Policy Committee in which students were included as voting members. Three student representatives were selected by fellow students to serve one-semester terms on the committee. Steve Block, Steve Gilford, and Mildred Perrin served first semester and were succeeded second semester by Gail Block, Richard Bowman, and Tony Adler. In Boltwood, proposals were discussed among Principal Dr. Clyde Slocum, the faculty, and students to form a Student Advisory Committee which would be composed of students and faculty who would discuss policy and procedure, curriculum, and student-faculty relations.

Boltwood, Beardsley initiate mini-courses

Students were given a greater part in curriculum planning for Beardsley English this year. Eight students were elected by fellow class members to attend weekly faculty meetings in the resource center.

An English lab was opened in Beardsley Resource Center in which students, upon the recommendation of their counselors, came for special help from English teachers and Northwestern University students.

Beardsley English offered an expanded selection of mini-courses to students. Film as An Art Form, in which students viewed a film each week and critically discussed the techniques employed in its production, was taught by Mr. Michael Bennett for two semesters. Mr. Martin Nystrand, assisted by Beardsley senior Roger Addelson, taught Computer Syntax, a unique course in grammar, also for two semesters. Mrs. Barbara Panwitt, Beardsley English Chairman, presented Chamber Theatre, in which students studied the oral interpretation of prose and fiction from a non-dramatic point of view. Although no formal credit was given for these courses, students did receive independent study credit towards their English grade.

Non-credit seminars offered to Boltwood students included a reading group and a discussion seminar on current movies presented by Northwestern University student teachers once each week.

Mr. Ronald Gearing's course in Afro-American Literature was introduced into the curriculum this year. A cross-section of students from all four schools studied the historic background of Afro-American Literature and the black writer of today and were free to discuss any relevant current events during discussion periods.

Bacon School English Department expanded the curriculum this year to include a wider range of books. Students analyzed many literary works ranging from Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet to the contemporary Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolfe by Edward Albee. A great deal more black literature was incorporated into the curriculum. Classes studied such works as Raisin in the Sun, Black Boy, Black Like Me, Jubilee, Choice of Weapons, and Native Son.

1 English 2 students used no grammar text. Instead Alice in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass were used as aids in the study of satire, parody, grammar, linguistics, and semantics.

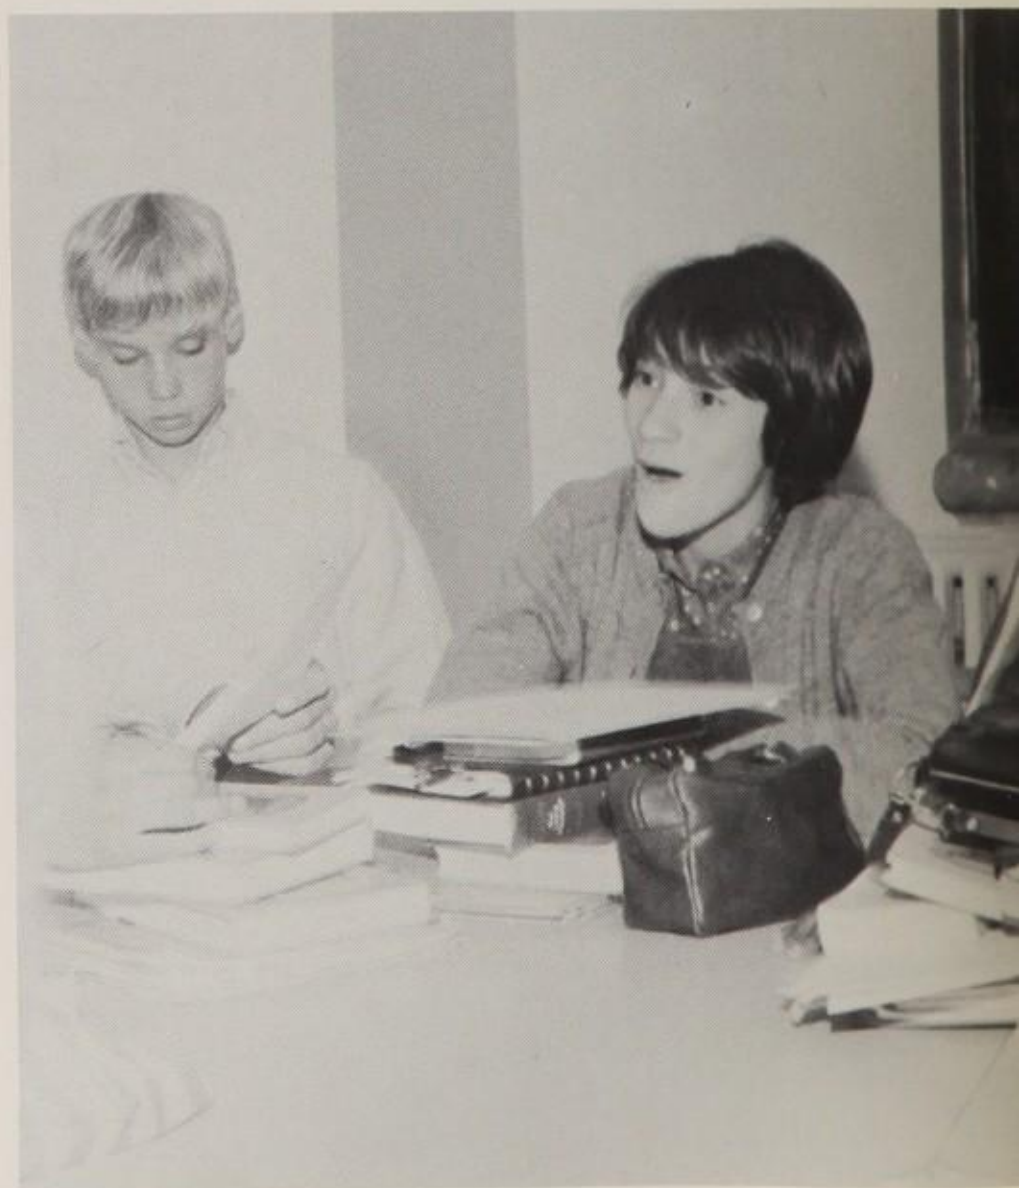

2 English 2 classes stressed response writing, whereby students were exposed to pieces of music or pictures and were asked to respond in a literary form, choosing from prose, poetry, or essay.

Students made use of dial access video-tapes as a supplement to their English classes. Taped lectures enabled those students who missed classes due to absence to catch up on their work.

A movie camera was purchased by Michael School English Department to encourage the use of film-making as an independent study project by students.

Michael School launched a creative writing newspaper second semester. Unlike Word Mosaics, the paper concentrated on prose writings as opposed to poetry.

A special English lab was set up in Michael Resource Center to offer tutoring help to those students who were in need of it. A reading room was also set up in the resource center for those students who were not engaged in research, but who wished to pursue recreational reading.

Man's environment stressed in Human Geography

U.S. History underwent a major revamping of its curriculum this year. A topical approach was tried in place of the traditional chronological approach, with the use of documents and supplementary literature in place of a textbook.

Similarly, the traditional European History course was renamed Ideas of Western Man and concentrated primarily upon the major writings of Western civilization in rejection of the former chronological treatment. European History CL, however, was continued by Mr. Thomas Sharp, Bacon history teacher, for those honor students who wished to receive college credit for the course.

Students made use of dial access video-tapes available for viewing in their resource centers. Mr. Alan Mumbrue created a series of tapes on economic concepts while Miss Margaret Simak devised a tape series for History of Civilization classes.

In the fall, Beardsley history teachers selected students to attend special lectures at the University of Chicago concerning the relevance of history.

Two new courses added to the department as electives included Human Geography and Seminar on the Non-Western World. Students in Human Geography studied the relationship of man to his environment in the areas of overpopulation, natural resource depletion, and urban and ghetto problems. Seminar on the Non-Western World was constructed as an independent study course in which emphasis was placed upon student-teacher contact, with few formal classes.

Bacon and Michael Schools sponsored several activities for history students in all four schools. On May 1, Law Day, Michael Social Studies Department, together with the Illinois Bar Association, held a series of legal discussions. From May 4-15, lectures and discussions pertaining to the history of the Vietnam war, the role of Vietnam in world foreign relations, problems concerning the legality of the war, and the relationship of the war to US domestic affairs, were given by leading educators.

Twentieth-Century Russia, taught by Mrs. Patricia Peterson, Bacon history teacher, was an elective course open to juniors and seniors. Students examined the Bolshevik seizure of government and subsequent control in relation to their totalitarian rule, and their efforts to subvert and control other countries. Soviet industrial and military strength were also covered in conjunction with their implications for the United States.

US History students in Michael School visited the inner-city in connection with a unit on urbanization. Miss Sharon Wilkinson, who taught a course in Afro-American History, also took students on a number of field trips together with students from other black studies courses and from various US History classes.

The former American Problems course was renamed Issues in Modern Society and dealt with the major aspects of modern life as they affect the individual, by testing value systems and analyzing economic forces as they relate to metropolitan and national social problems. Michael history teacher Mrs. Niki Sellers devised a series of mini meetings on the pollution situation in relation to the course, which led eventually to the Pollution Day activities in April.

Combined Studies students in Beardsley and Boltwood Schools, under the direction of chairmen Mrs. Kathryn Davis and Mr. Roman Gales, pursued a four-year sequence of integrated courses carrying credit in English and Social Studies.

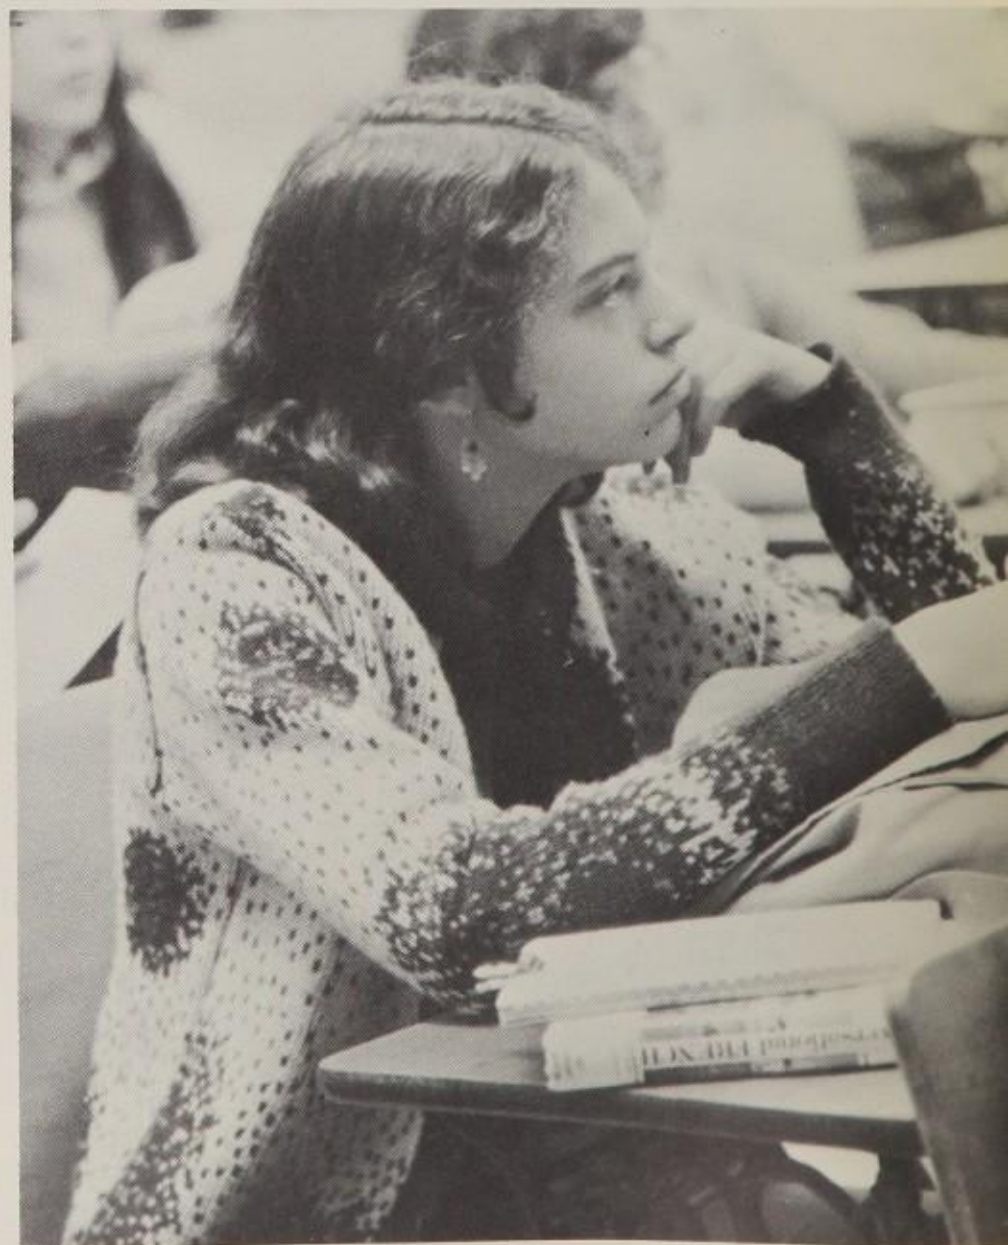

1 Combined Studies provided instruction in both English and History of Civilization. Students were involved in major decision-making in the planning, execution, and evaluation of the curriculum for the course. Unit studies included those on Greece, Rome, the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, the rise of the national state, and twentieth-century Europe. Skills in research, reporting, literary interpretation, and writing were developed through projects created by each class. These included a coordinated slide and tape presentation on the Russian Revolution, a style show of Renaissance fashions, and a student written and produced play about the crusades.

Members of 2 Combined Studies classes covered sophomore English and the history of non-Western society. The development of individual and group planning, research, and problem solving skills was accomplished through the study of non-Western man from the viewpoints of history, the fine arts, literature, and the social sciences.

Sophomores who did not elect 2 Combined Studies were offered 2 Combined Studies English in which literature units were planned and carried out by students through the utilization of written expression and reading interpretation in small group activities.

LARRY OLSON: 3 Combined Studies.

A focus upon the interaction of students in the learning process was stressed in Combined Studies classes in Bacon and Michael schools.

In 3 Combined Studies, units of work centered on the literary and historical heritage of the United States, with an emphasis upon literary and historical analysis and interpretation. Literary works chosen as being representative of society during certain periods in American History included Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter, Twain's Huckleberry Finn, Lewis's The Jungle, and Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath. As an aid in understanding monopolies and trusts during the Progressive era, one of Mr. Larry Olson's 3 Combined Studies classes played the game "Monopoly" as a committee project.

Social problems and related literature were explored by students in 4 Combined Studies. Units studied included methods of social science, semantics, economics, foreign policy, urban problems, and modern philosophies. Golding's The Lord of the Flies and Huxley's Brave New World were studied in conjunction with the unit on social science, while The Great Gatsby, by F. Scott Fitzgerald, and Death of a Salesman, by Arthur Miller, were studied in connection with the study of economics. A Passage to India served as an introduction to foreign policy while Sartre's "The Wall" was used in the presentation of existentialism during the modern philosophy and novel unit.

Science Department attacks pollution

Science courses in Beardsley and Boltwood incorporated independent study as a vital part of their flexible curriculum.

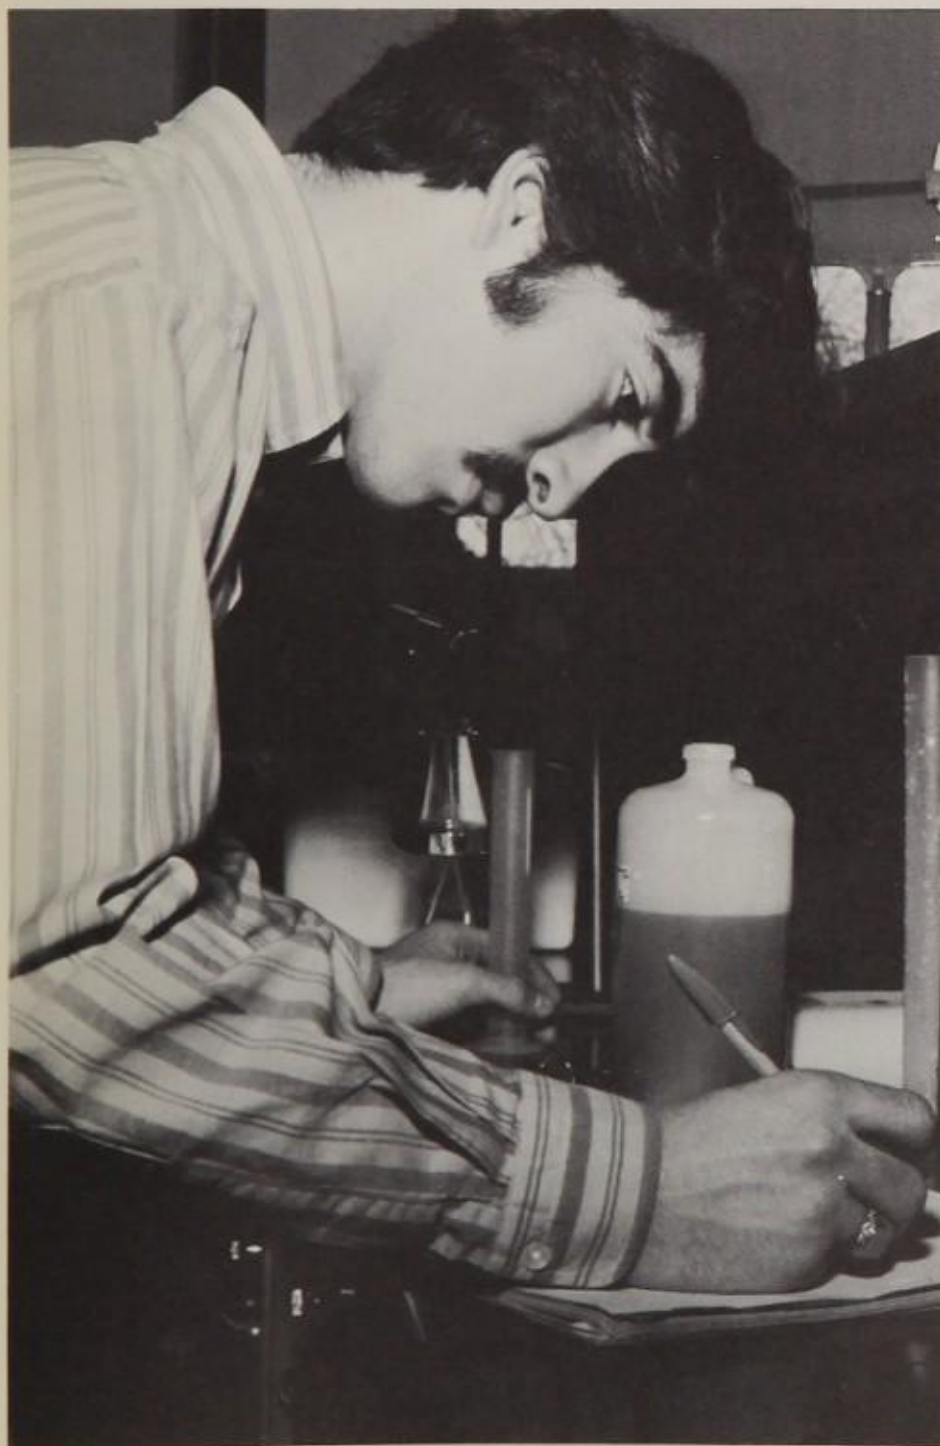

Physical Science 2 was offered to freshmen as a continuation of the 1 Physical Science course they took in junior high. The course will be dropped next year however, because of the disparate range of student background in the area.

Mr. Wallace Evans, Beardsley Biology teacher, introduced a new curriculum in which biology was studied from an ecological point of view. Students went on field trips within the school and made use of the vivarium for observing the interdependence of plant and animal life.

Harvard Project Physics was offered to seniors for the first time this year. Students adapted the program to their own needs and interests and were given the option of describing phenomena either verbally or mathematically.

Boltwood continued to take an inquiry approach to the Earth Science Curriculum Project which it introduced to the school last year.

A unit on pollution was studied by General Biology students in Boltwood, who constructed their own curriculum for the course. Beginning second semester, students collected newspaper and magazine articles, did experiments, and participated in a debate on pollution which was video-taped for later viewing.

Astronomy and Geology were expanded this year to two sections each, because of the increased demand by students for these courses. Astronomy classes met once a week in Michael Planetarium to study our solar system as well as others in our galaxy in a non-mathematical manner. Trips were also scheduled to the Lindheimer Observatory at Northwestern University for practical observations through a research telescope. Geology was offered to juniors and seniors as a lab course including field work at selected sites in Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Illinois as weekend activities.

Michael School made use of the Earth Science Curriculum Project course in which students made measurements and collected data using scientific method.

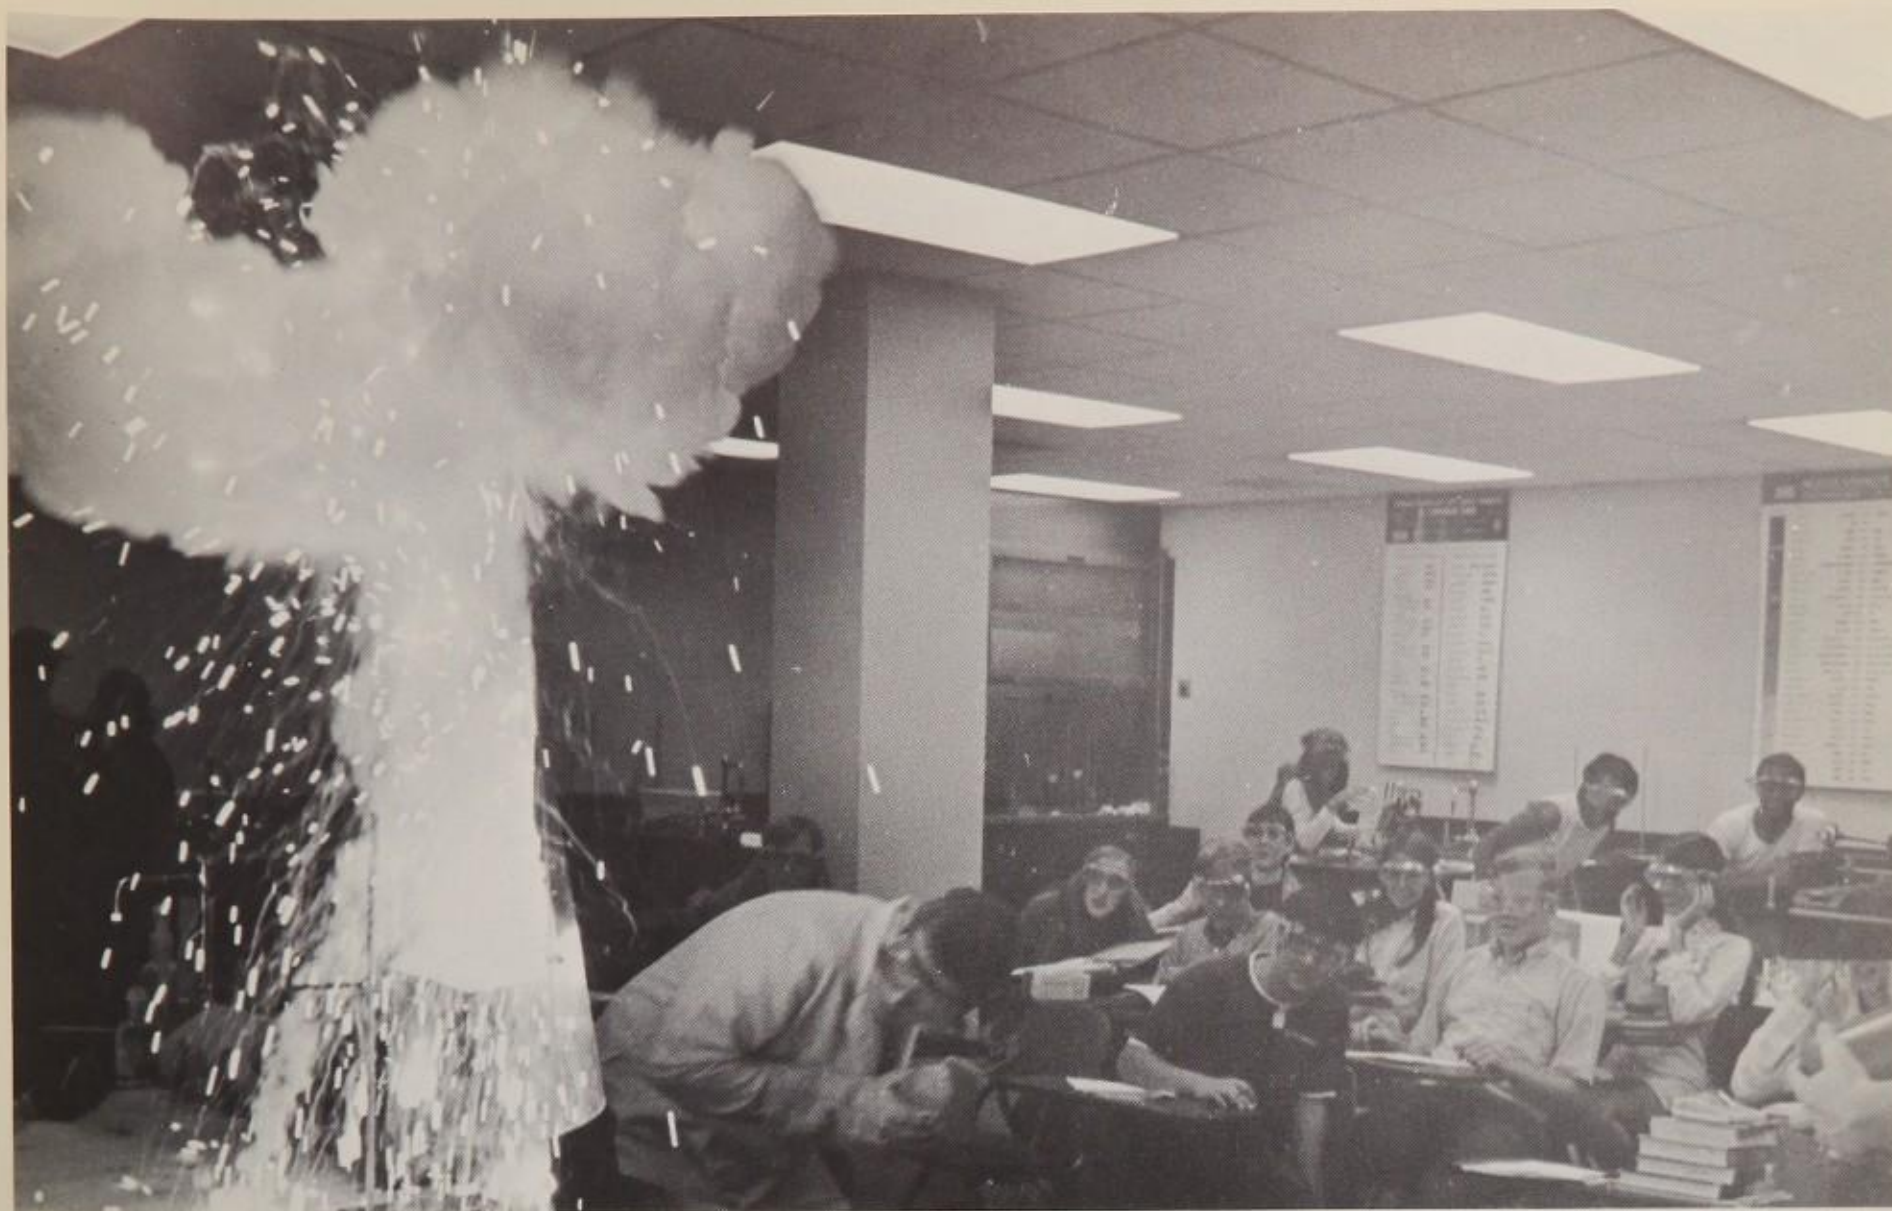

After experimenting with large group lectures, Michael School Science Department decided to drop the procedure next year as the faculty felt that more intensive work could be accomplished in smaller class groups.

A modified Biology course was offered to Michael School students in which a set of options for activities was offered. In a perpetually open lab, students progressed at their own speed and administered self-tests using summary sheets.

Similarly, Mr. Donald Bauder, Bacon chemistry teacher, instituted a qualitative chemistry unit fourth quarter. Students participated in pre-lab independently, listening to audio-tape cartridges, looking at slides, and using a continuous loop projector to learn units at their own rate.

Resource centers adapt to math department's needs

Greater use was made this year of dial-access materials in Beardsley Resource Center by math students. An audio series of 54 lectures on 1 Algebra was made available in conjunction with a coordinated text, together with a video series on geometric constructions.

The math clinic was continued this year in Beardsley Resource Center. Math teachers tutored students in the clinic for 90 mins each week with a blackboard and adding machine readily available.

Students enrolled in 1 Algebra courses in both Beardsley and Boltwood used a new textbook this year, Fundamentals of Math, which brought a new approach to the teaching of this course. Freshmen were not required to repeat the course in summer school if they had failed it first semester, but took 1 Introduction to Algebra second semester and were given the option of taking 2 Introduction to Algebra in their sophomore year.

Seniors were offered a course in Independent Study Probability this year. Plans were being made by the faculty for an independent study course in trigonometry next fall to be offered to honors math students.

Counselors scheduled students who were experiencing difficulty in their math courses to attend Boltwood Tutoring Center. Starting second semester, this practice was dropped and students went instead to a specified section of Boltwood Resource Center's carrels as the faculty felt it provided a better study atmosphere.

1 Algebra Performance Curriculum was offered to Bacon School freshmen. Constructed as an independent study course, it required students to progress at their own rates, mastering one chapter before proceeding to the next. The class met in a combination of large groups and small group seminars for a total of eight mods a week. Students administered self-evaluation tests at the end of each chapter.

Credit in 1 Algebra PC was variable and relative to the time needed by the student to complete the course. If the course was completed in a year or less, the student was given credit in 1 Algebra, while credit in 1 Algebra Honors was given if basic course material were supplemented by additional work during the year. If two years were needed to complete the course, the student received credit in 1 Introduction to Algebra and 2 Introduction to Algebra.

Mr. Frank May, Michael mathematics teacher, directed instruction in Probability, another independent study course. Interested juniors and seniors could elect the course for $\frac{1}{4}$ unit of credit for a period of one to nine months. Curriculum content dealt with statistics and the theory of probability as prescribed in a programmed unit and followed at the student's own rate.

A new textbook was used this year in 1 French, 2 French, and 1 Spanish classes which more adequately worked towards the development of oral skills than the texts formerly used. The new texts were integral parts of a coordinated language program, complete with language tapes available for class and laboratory use.

Beardsley Resource Center was the location of mini-labs for French, Spanish, and Russian which were created so that students in the upper levels of these courses had a means of enriching their study through lecture tapes, records, and current periodicals in each language. Boltwood students were able to receive tutorial help in the Foreign Language section of their resource center, where a teacher was always available to offer assistance.

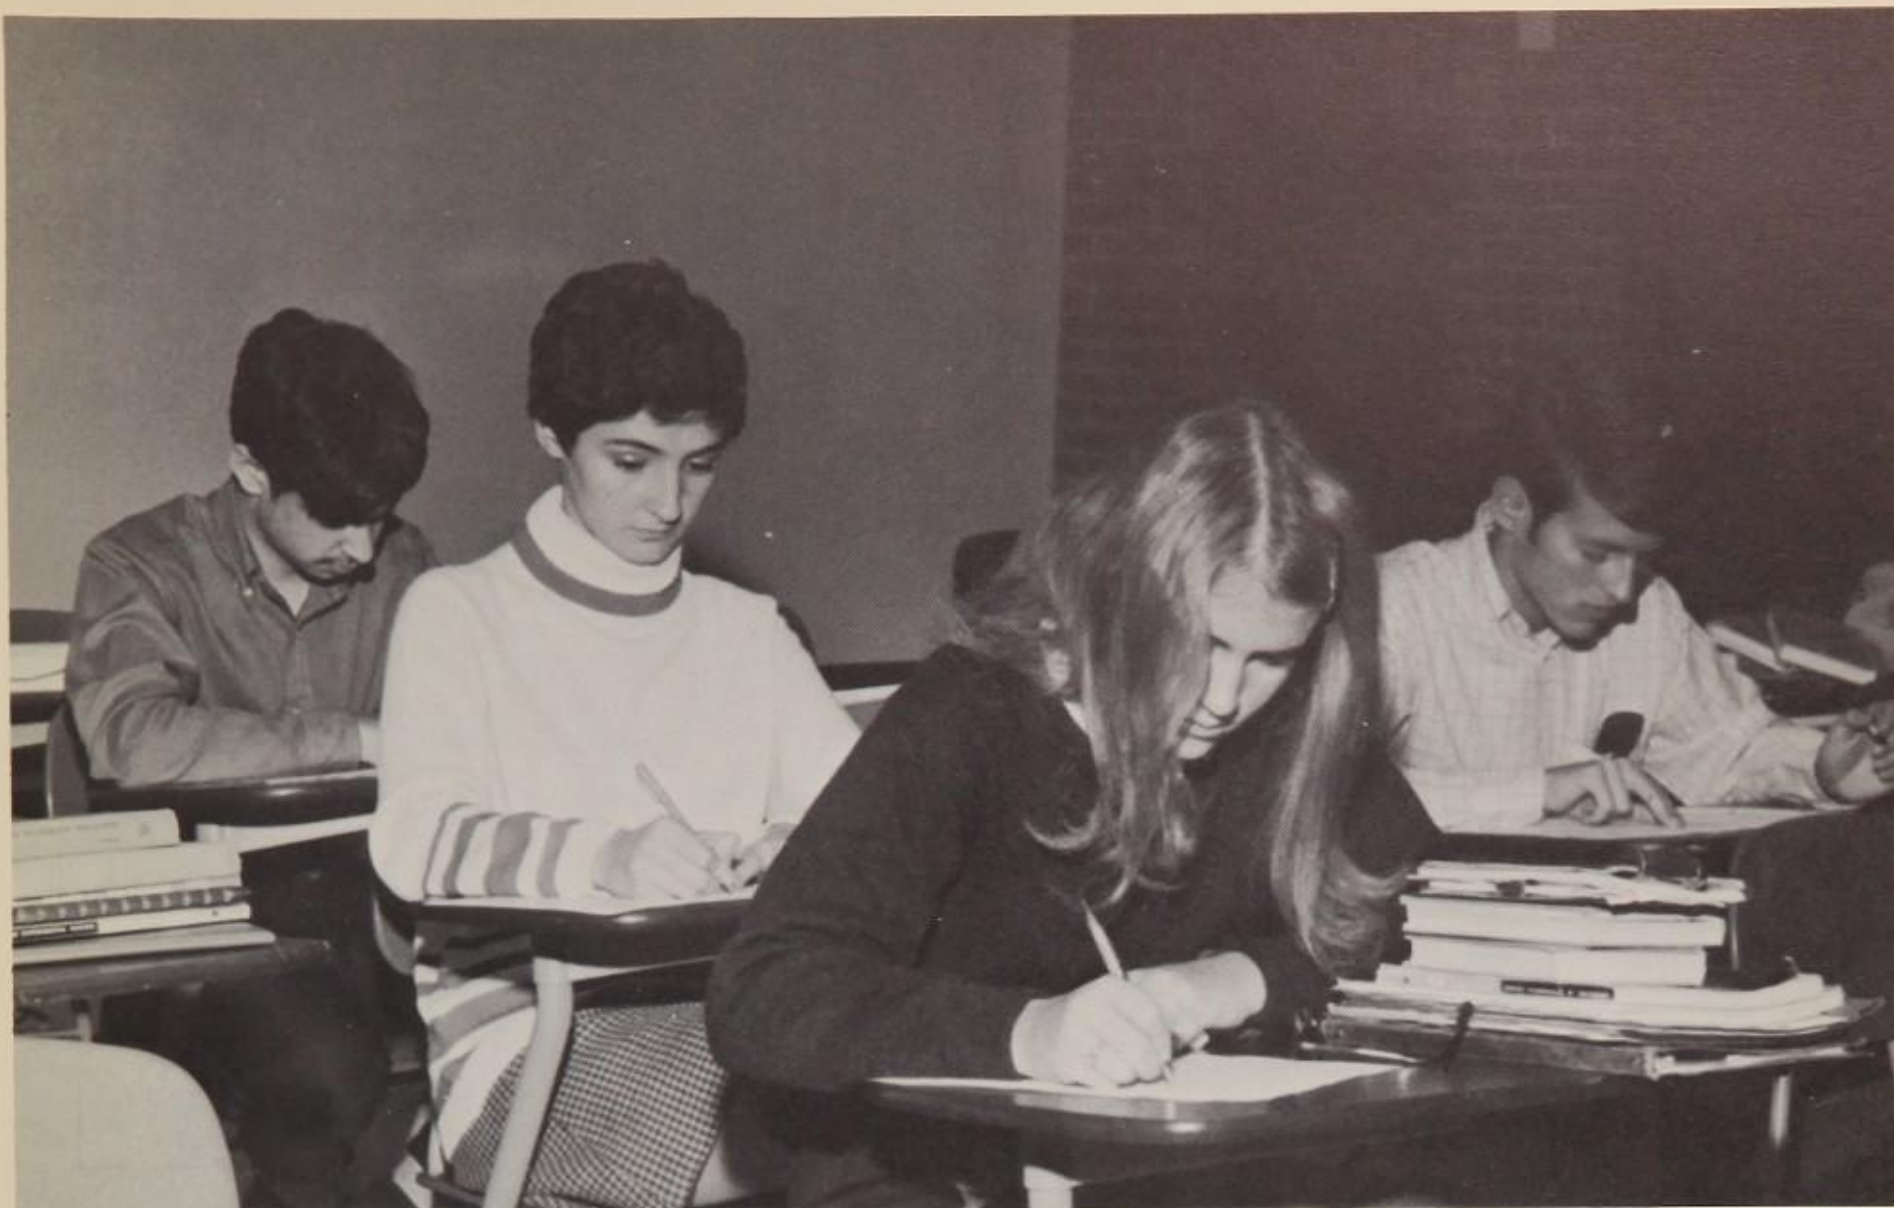

Students made use of a film series on video-tape in the dial access system entitled Je Parle Francais which served as enrichment in culture and language while improving oral comprehension and stimulating student interest.

Standardized tests in French, Spanish, and German were given to students in the spring in order to compare them with national norms as an aid in language placement.

Michael School foreign language teachers were assigned to designated classrooms for three-mod tutoring sessions throughout the week.

Courses in Italian placed an emphasis upon the spoken language through instruction in grammar fundamentals and the development of skills in speaking, reading, and writing. Literary selections were given to students in their second year.

1 Greek and 1 Greek Honors were offered to juniors and seniors with previous study in another foreign language. These courses provided students with a foundation in grammar supplemented by selected readings from the works of Greek writers Xenophone, Herodotus, Plato, and Plutarch.

Similarly, 1 Japanese and 1 Japanese Honors was offered to experienced language students who wished to develop their conversational ability in Japanese by means of the audio-lingual method, with simple readings in the Japanese script.

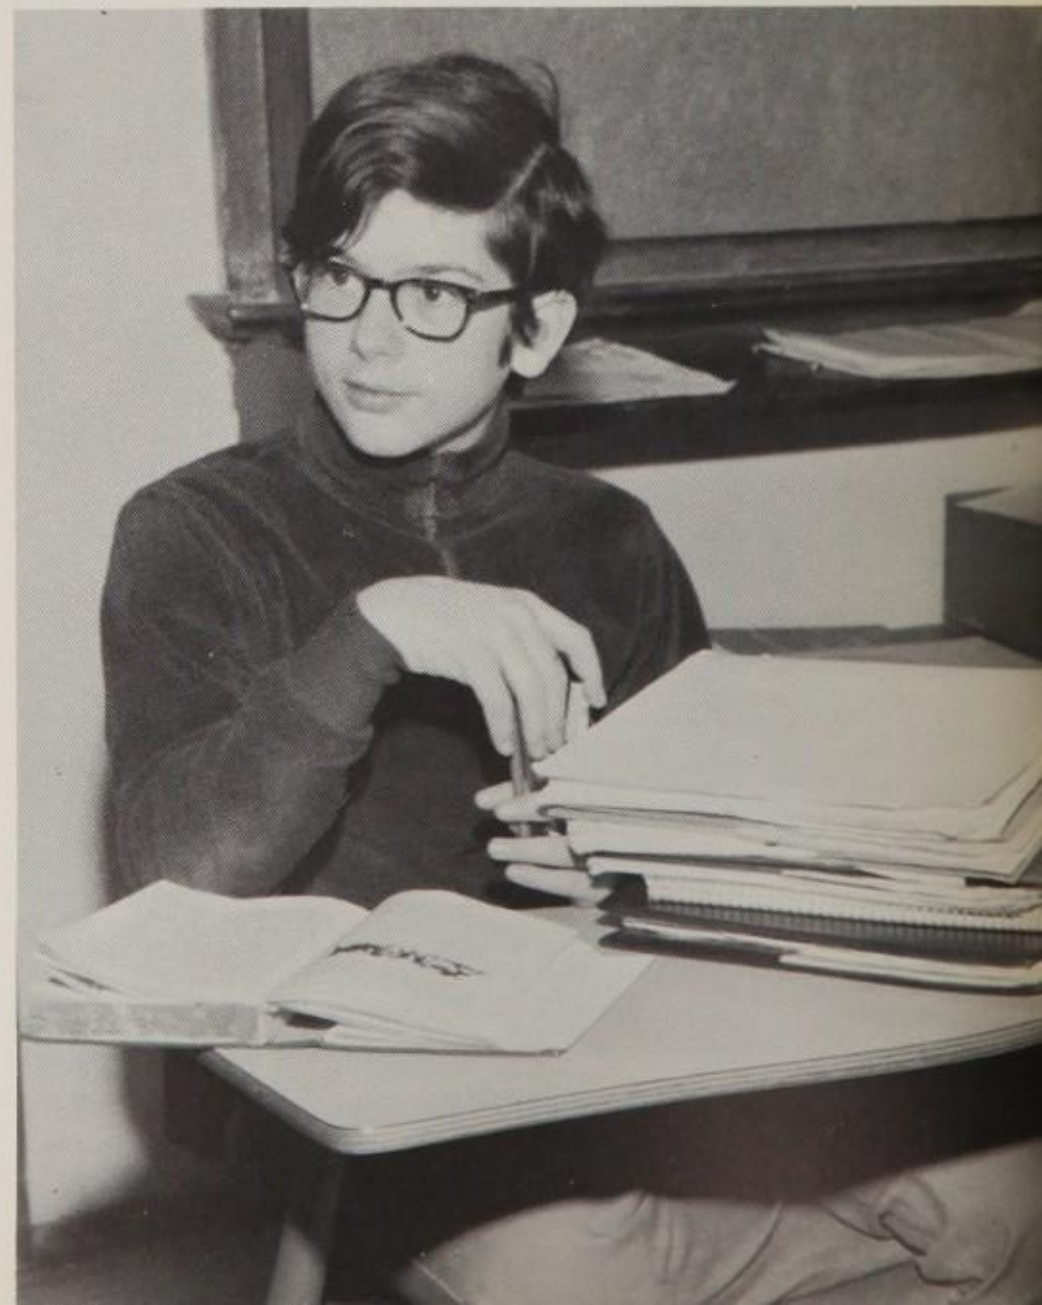

Michael School Spanish and German students worked outside of class to create many displays for the display case adjacent to Michael Resource Center.

Improvisations, script work highlight year

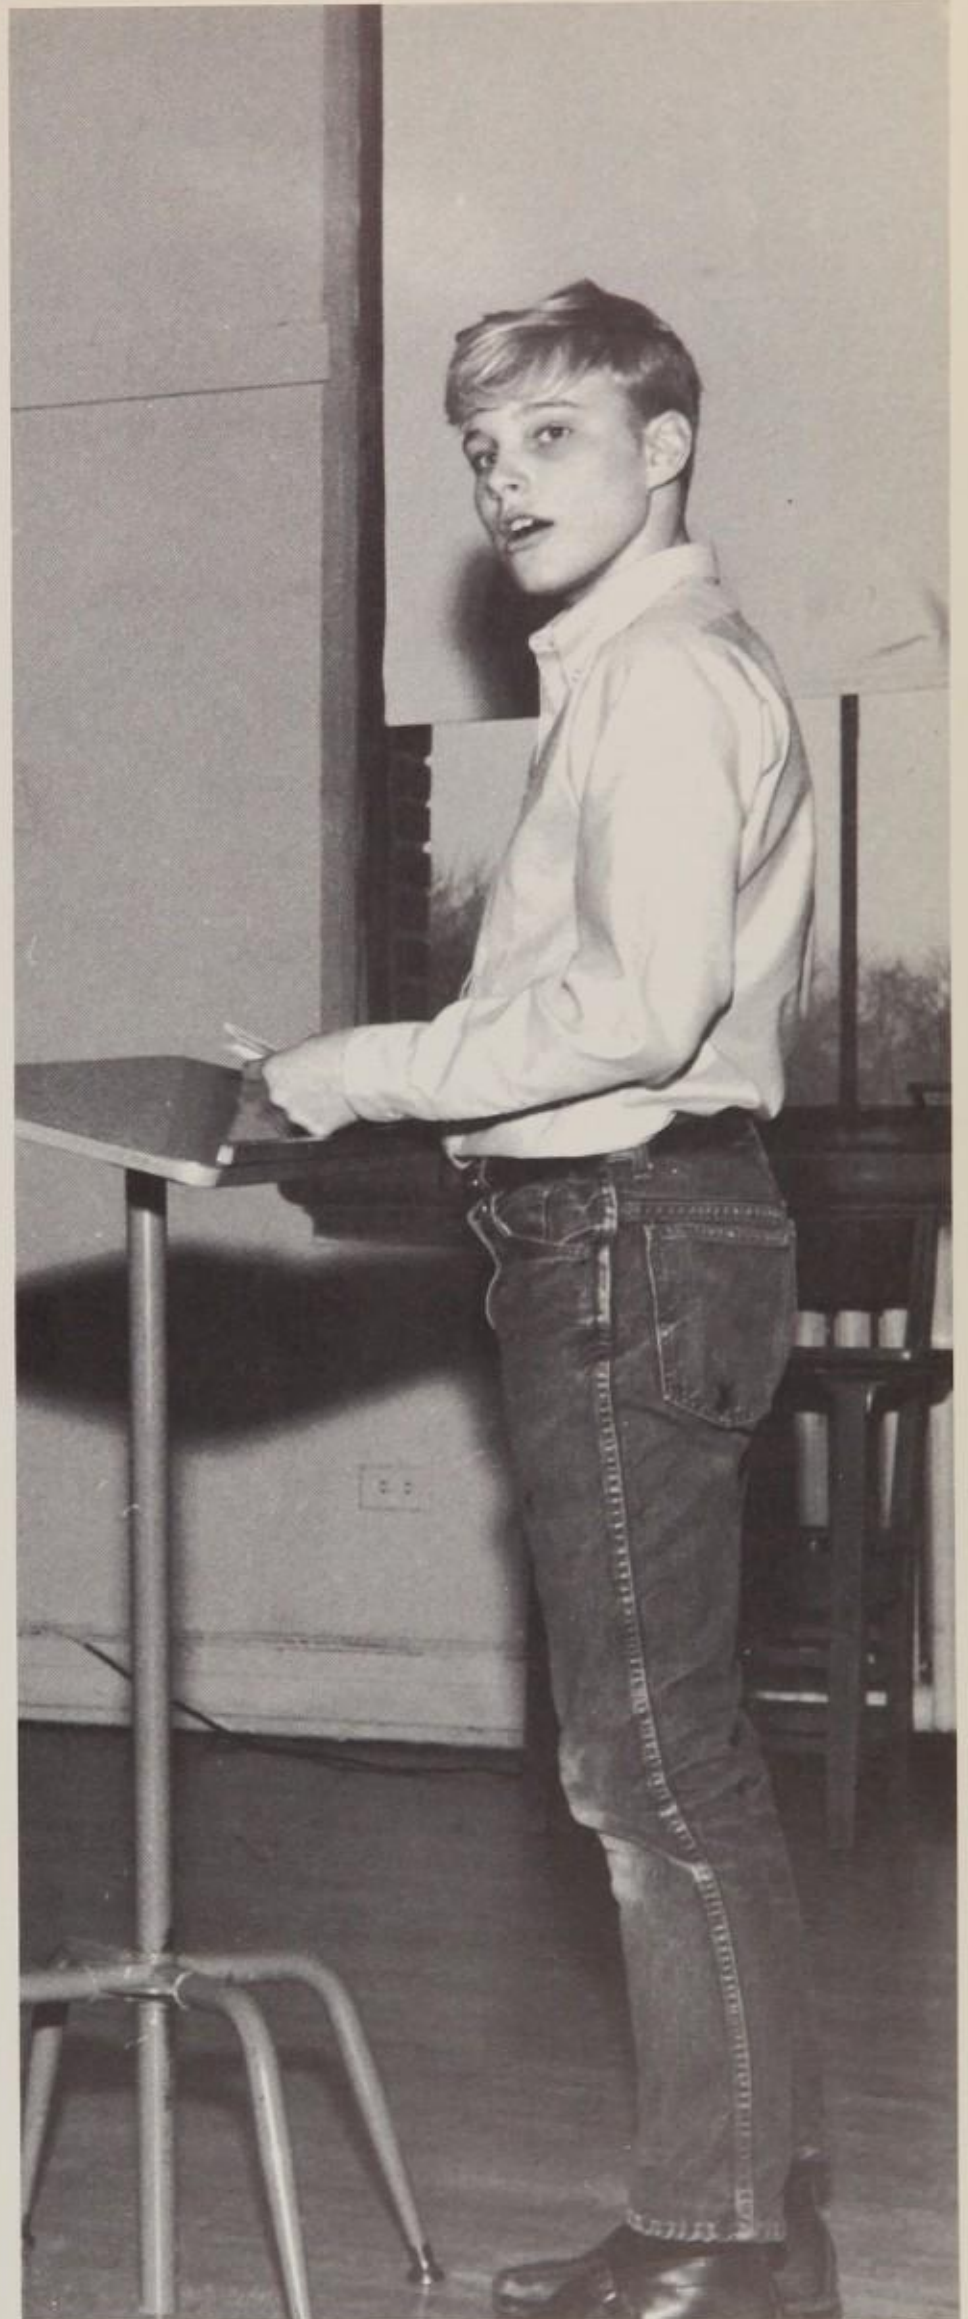

Freshman Speech Arts served as an introductory course to all the work of the Speech Department. The curriculum was divided into four sections of nine weeks each, including theatre, radio-television, public speaking, and oral interpretation, with each unit's being taught by a department specialist in that area.

In Oral Interpretation, emphasis was placed upon the development of the ability to analyze and communicate poetry, prose, and dramatic literature. Students prepared and presented group interpretations in the styles of chamber theatre and readers theatre. The two performances which were given included "Black Is...", presented in February in Little Theatre, and "I Am Waiting," which was presented in Michael Planetarium, making use of all the facets of the planetarium in order to create a mood.

Television Production stressed practical laboratory training in the operation of television equipment with experience in floor managing, script writing, camera presentation, and directing. Advanced television students participated as crew members for a new Title III series, "Talk About...", in which discussions were held on timely topics of interest including drugs, pollution, and "the new morality."

Mini courses invade Speech Arts Department

WILLIAM DITTON: Freshman Speech Arts, Acting, Introduction to Theater; Bacon School Drama Club sponsor, director of West Side Story . . . MICHAEL KELLEY: Debate, Oral Communication; Debate sponsor.

JEREMIAH MADDEN: Television Production; Director of Media Center . . . JOSEPH SCAFE: Title III director.

CHRISTINE FRIEDERICH: Freshman Speech Arts, Oral Interpretation . . . KATHLEEN GALVIN: Communications.

WILLIAM LEFTWICH: Drama . . . ROBERT PROPER: Scene Mechanics, Scene Design, Stage Lighting.

Nine-week mini courses in speech were offered this year for the first time. Mr. Bruce Siewerth taught classes in Makeup, while Mr. Michael Kelley provided instruction in Debate Essentials, and special Actor-in-Residence Mr. Paul Shedd lectured on Contemporary British Drama. Students electing these mini courses did so for their own enjoyment, receiving no credit.

Afro-American Creative Expression, a new one-semester combined art studies course, served as an introduction to the black arts. Team-teaching by members of the fine arts staffs aimed to integrate the graphic arts, speech arts, and music in order to show their relationship to one another and to the development of black culture.

On March 25, 26, and 27, the Festival of the Performing Arts was presented by the four drama clubs in the Social Hall. On March 25, Reflections: Beginnings and Endings, an improvised play by Beardsley, and The Zoo Story, a play by Edward Albee performed by Mr. Bruce Siewerth and Mr. Steven Narland, were presented. Michael Theatre Company presented It Should Happen to a Dog, by Wolf Mankowitz, and Bacon School Repertory Company offered an excerpt from Mrs. McThing, by Mary Chase on March 26. The final segment of the festival contained an excerpt from Arthur Miller's The Crucible, performed by Boltwood Repertory Company on March 27.

Students won honors in individual speech events of the State Speech Competition sponsored by the Illinois High School Association. Allen Friedman, Bacon senior, placed first in district, second in sectional, and third in state competition for radio announcing. Gwen Stevens, also a Bacon senior, placed second in the state verse reading competition.

Art develops skills and talents

Freshmen were offered 1 Art, the Art Department's basic course, in which students surveyed drawing, painting, two-dimensional design, and three-dimensional design through laboratory workshops, lectures, and discussions. Upon completion of this course, students could elect advanced courses in these four areas.

In addition to these courses, Ceramics, Film-Making, Photography, Printmaking, and History of Art were offered. In Ceramics, students worked with clay, glazes, a pottery wheel and kiln in the creation of pottery and sculpture. Film-Making served as an introductory course in motion and animated photography with emphasis upon planning, filming, and soundtracking, while Photography offered basic instruction in use of the camera as an art medium. Students worked with linoleum and wood blocks in creating pieces in Printmaking.

ETHS participated in an art exchange program with Hinsdale South in conjunction with the Demonstration Center. Peg Griffin and Randy Nutt were selected to represent the school and spent three days working at Hinsdale, while that school sent students to Evanston for four days.

Evanston entered 290 pieces in the Scholastic Art Awards contest and won two hallmarks, 84 keys, and 18 blue ribbons. Nicholas Sistler and Donna Doljack were honored by having two out of the five finest pieces in the show. In April, the Evanston Art Center held a contest in which 200 pieces were entered by ETHS students, out of which scholarships were given to three students, Nancy Becker, Molly Bauer, and Randy Nutt and honorable mentions to ten other students. The National Society for Arts and Letters in Evanston and Glenview awarded a $100 scholarship to Peg Griffin and honorable mention prizes to Karen Lewin and Don Coates.

Music appreciation stressed

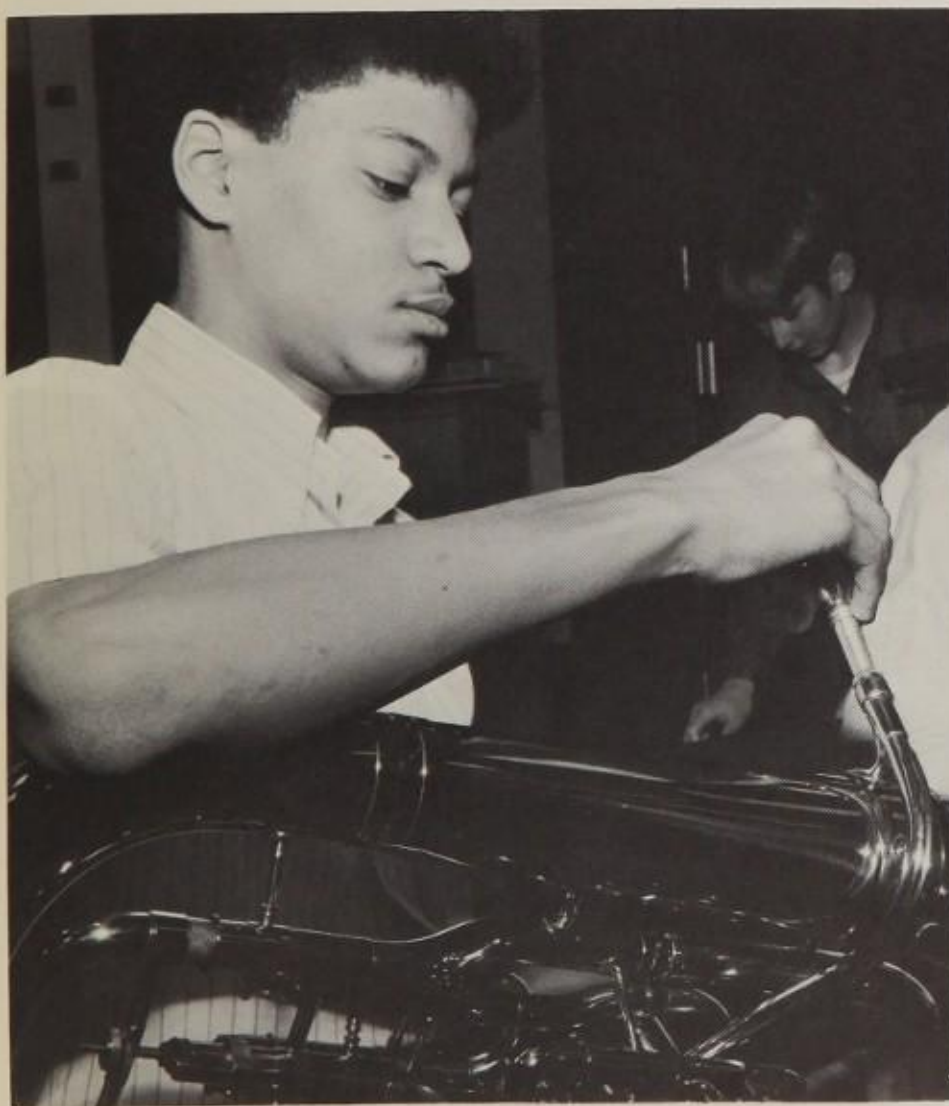

Meeting the needs of as many students as possible served as the goal of the music curriculum this year. A large variety of courses were geared to both students seriously intending to continue their musical training in college and to those students who were enrolled in music courses purely for their own enjoyment. The Music Department offered a diversified curriculum including a wide range of classes covering both the cultivation of technical musical skills and the development of a critical knowledge and appreciation of the history of music in relation to its styles and forms.

Two courses were offered in which instruction in singing technique was emphasized. Voice Class focused its instruction upon techniques in tone-production and diction, while Sight Singing was concerned with techniques in rhythmic and melodic music-reading as an aid to all music students.

Freshmen interested in singing experience could elect Glee Club. Advanced singing groups open to upperclassmen included Chorus, Chorale, Mastersingers, Girls Choir, and ETHS Choir.

Intensive training in instrumentation was offered in Beginning Brasses, Beginning Strings, and Beginning Woodwinds. Students, by audition, could elect Cadet Band or Cadet Orchestra, and, with that experience, could later elect Concert Band and Concert Orchestra.

Flexible scheduling permitted students to requisition practice rooms during their unscheduled mods. The Music Resource Center, originally designed to provide all students with a wealth of musical knowledge through its collection of records, tapes, books, and teaching aids, was restricted second semester to Materials of Music and Music Survey students, so that it could be utilized to its full academic potential.

A required sequence of courses was followed by students enrolled in Boys' Physical Education throughout their freshmen, sophomore, junior, and senior years, including participation in aquatics, gymnastics, weight training, physical fitness, and team and individual sports.

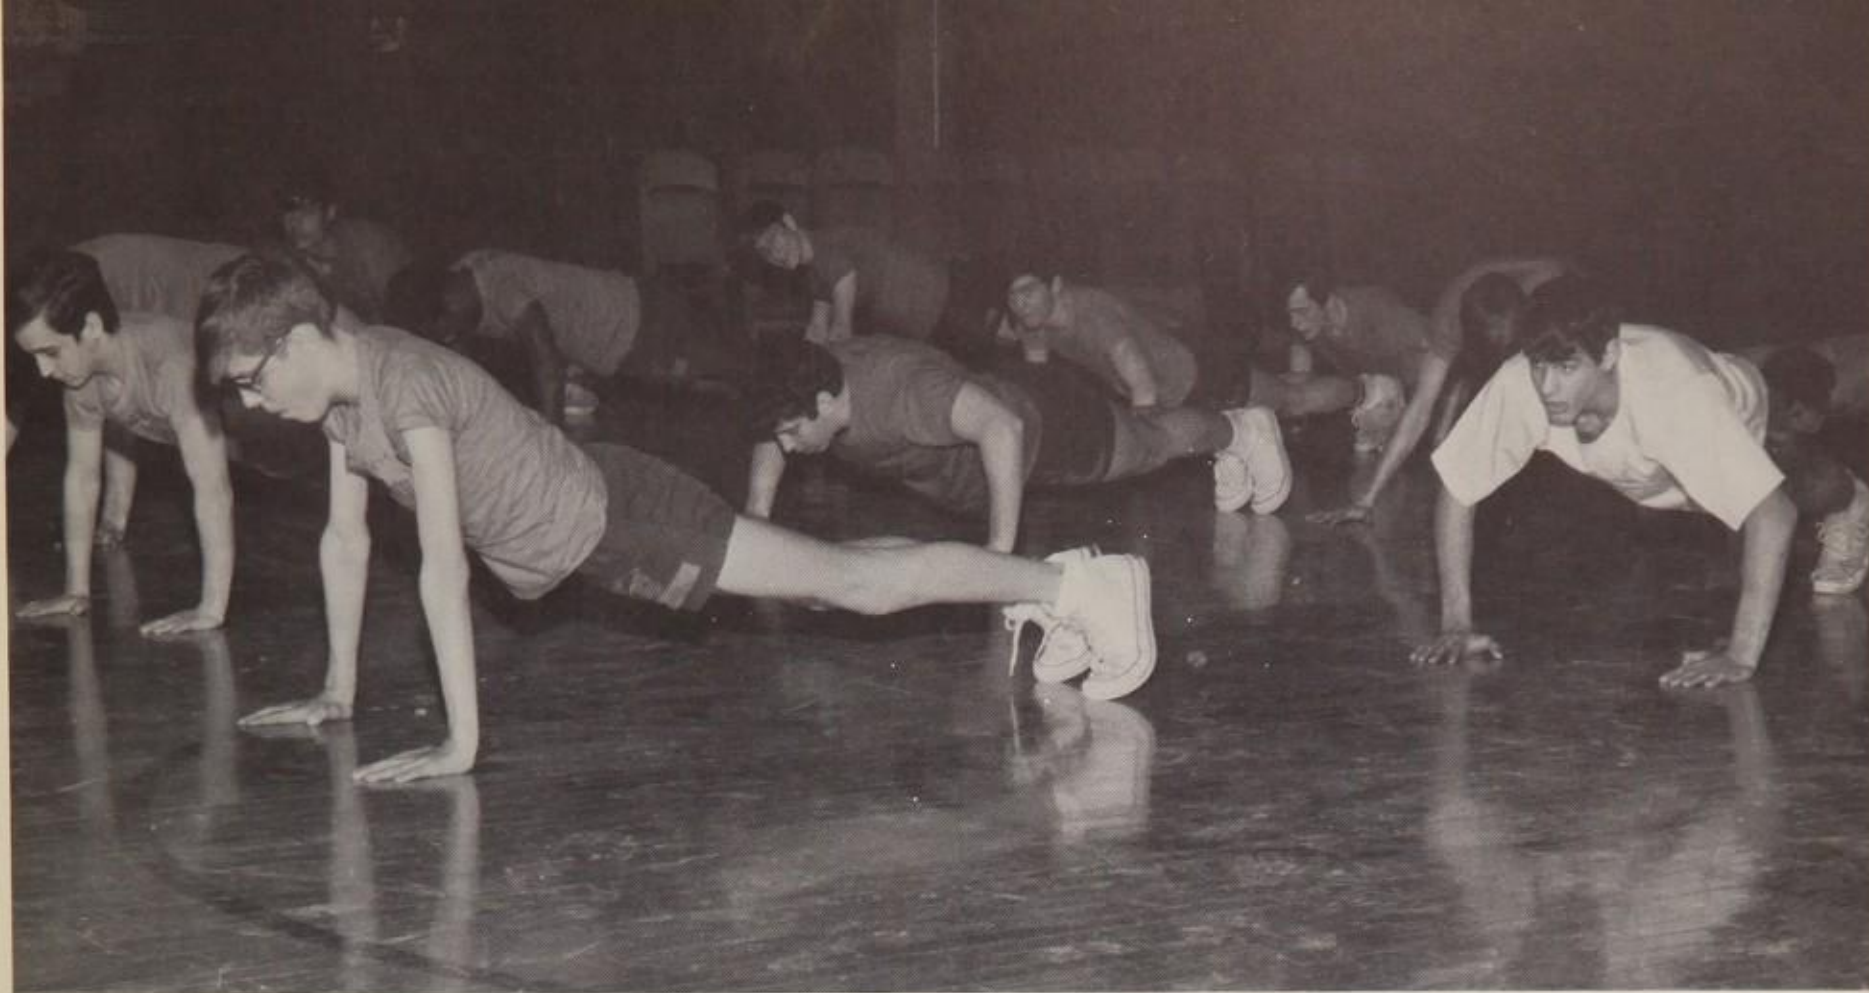

Sophomore boys with above average ability were selected by application to participate in the 2 Boys' Physical Education program. The honors class gave them the opportunity to do work of a higher quality than would be possible in a regular class. During their junior and senior years, the honors students aided the faculty by taking attendance and leading class activities in freshmen classes.

Each class in each of the four school selected two students of above average ability to participate in the Boys' Leaders course, where they directed and set up the policies of the intramural program.

LUCILLE CAPPONI: Health Education.

DONNA GORDON: Dance Honors; Esande sponsor
PRISCILLA HENNING: Sports Board sponsor, Boltwood School.

Girls' Physical Education classes made use of expanded gym areas created last year, including a new gymnasium, a renovated dance studio and multi-purpose room, and new locker facilities.

A six week curriculum section in dance, in which emphasis was placed upon rhythms, modern dance, and folk and ethnic dances, and a six-week section in aquatics, which concentrated on body control in the water, synchronized swimming, and lifesaving techniques, was offered with similar six-week sections in team sports and individual sports.

Freshmen, sophomore, and junior classes were administered a series of performance tests to determine the abilities of each student in order to place her in a class with students of similar ability to promote increased progress and individual success. Senior girls were offered a choice as to the activities they wished to participate in during the year in classes which met for six mods each week.

Physical Education Honors classes were offered to sophomores, juniors, and seniors who desired intensive preparation for assisting in classes and officiating intramural sports. Dance Honors, offered to juniors and seniors, emphasized advanced dance technique and creativity in composition and choreography.

Open labs were offered for the first time to students interested in increased participation in sports of their choice and in strengthening their weak areas of ability.

Male enrollment in Home Ec. doubles

Pineapple upside-down cake is an important recipe to remember for Patricia McCorkle.

The Home Economics department, which doubled its male enrollment over that of the previous year, offered students an expanded program with an emphasis on student involvement in the community.

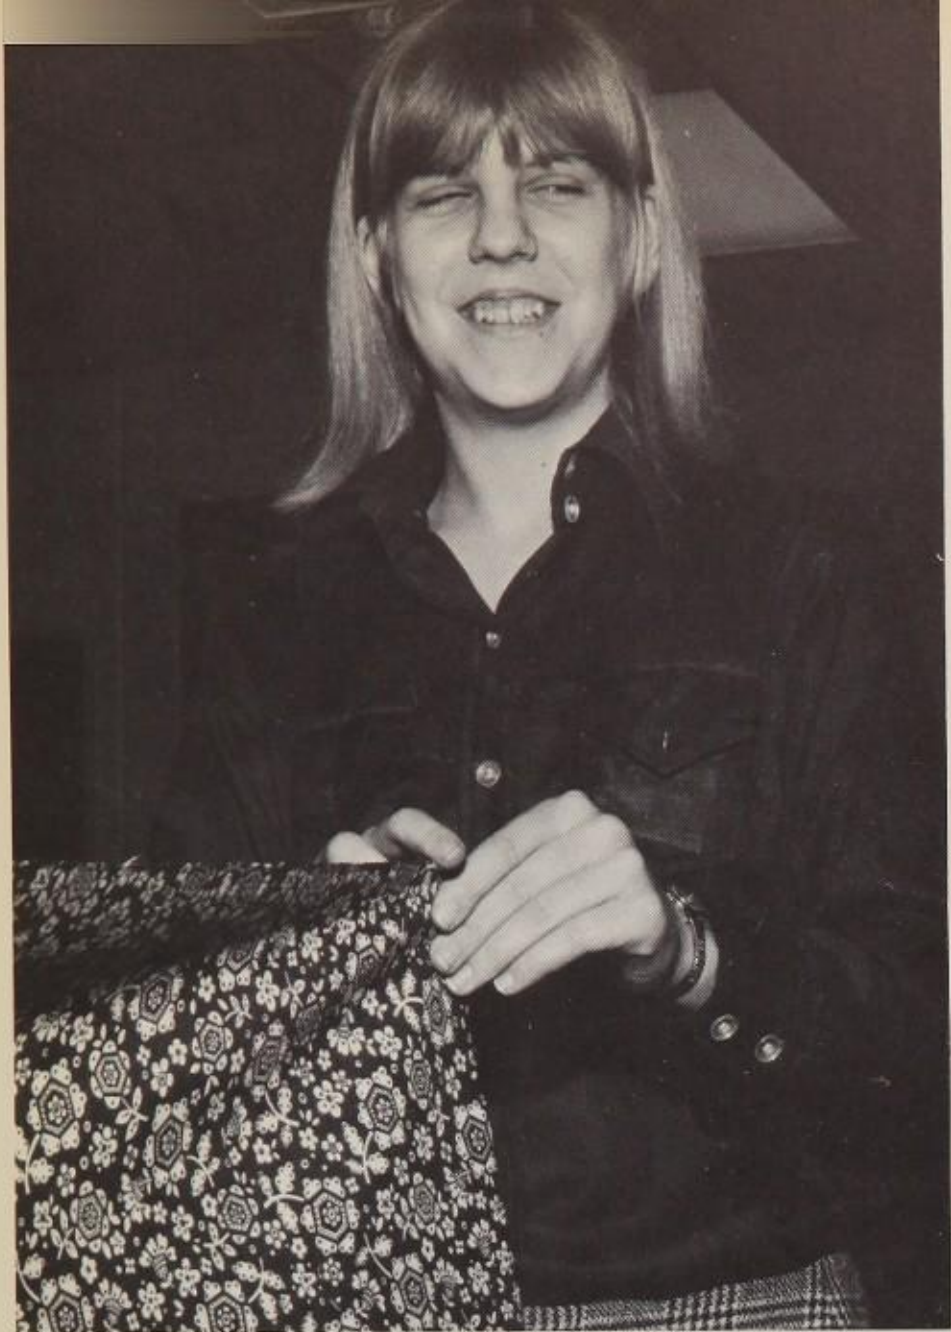

Home Furnishing students worked with a builder in the selection of the wood, tiling, and appliances to be used in a home under construction, while Child Development students aided teachers for one semester in elementary schools in the area. Home Economics students also planned, prepared, managed, and served food at a dessert for the school custodians, a luncheon for the Suburban League athletic directors, and at various teas given throughout the year for teachers.

Advanced Clothing was added to the curriculum second semester in which students worked on tailored coats and suits, created their own patterns, and studied textiles. In June, the Fort Dearborn chapter of the DAR presented awards to those students in sewing classes who reached a high level of achievement in clothing construction this year at a tea to which the girls and their mothers were invited.

Students made use of six video-tapes on clothing construction and one on alternate behavior responses for Child Development classes which were made available on dial-access in the four resource centers and at a special receiving station in the Home Economics department. The faculty began preparing a series of slides this year on elective courses in the department to be made available to students through their counselors in the resource centers.

Industrial Arts improves skills for the future

Through the use of intricate equipment, the Industrial Arts Department added new courses to its curriculum and expanded others this year.

Power Mechanics, an expanded course in Auto Mechanics, in which students pursued an intensified study of power generation from mechanical sources, was recently added to the curriculum together with a new freshman course in Functions of Industry which enabled students to form companies in order to learn the procedures involved in mass production.

Graphic Arts students made use of the dark room and printing press which were added at the completion of the new buildings two years ago, while courses in electronics were expanded with the addition of advanced facilities this year. A new unit, "Hot Metals," was included in the curriculum for the Metals class with the addition of welding equipment in the Industrial Arts area.

Students made increased use of the Electricity-Electronics Lab as they worked in the areas of radio communications; electroplating and circuit-board etching, appliance test and repair, television servicing, and audio and hi-fi test and maintenance. Independent study projects involving the use of selected sets of power supply and test instruments were used by groups of students at work stations while others studied electrical drafting and took diagnostic self-tests in the reference library.

Industrial Arts students served the school through their printing services and through their production of trophies for intramural awards.

Through the use of modern facilities, equipment, and textbooks, the Business Education Department, under the direction of Mr. William Carpenter, continued comprehensive teaching this year. A wider range of courses was offered and geared to both college-bound students and to students who intended to enter the business world immediately after high school.

Accounting and Business Law were offered to students planning to major in business in college. In Business Law, the legal aspects of business organization were covered, with an emphasis upon contracts, insurance, and legal rights. Students planning other college majors could elect Beginning Typewriting, College Notehand, and Accounting Honors. General clerical courses, Key Punch, Computer Programming, and Advanced Shorthand were offered to students interested in working after graduation. Students were given the choice of electing either individual courses or courses organized in a secretarial, general, or Distributive Education sequence.

Office Occupations, a new cooperative secretarial program, was introduced to students which enabled them to go to school in the morning and take secretarial positions with private businesses in the afternoon. This program was limited to a select number of students because there was not enough staff to accommodate the demand. Plans were made, however, to expand the program to include a greater number of students next year.

Cooperative Vocational Educational programs were offered to juniors and seniors 16 years of age or older who wished to pursue a particular career after graduation or following apprenticeship, technical training, or college.

Distributive Education coordinated classroom study with on-the-job training in approved local businesses in the fields of marketing and distribution. In addition to receiving daily instruction in sales techniques, display, pricing, marking, personality development, work attitudes, human relations training, and supervisory training, the student worked from 15 to 30 hours per week on the job. Students were also given the opportunity of participating in various leadership training conferences during the year.

Diversified Occupations was organized similarly, with the exception that the instruction and job experience was received in industrial or trades areas.

Through a coordination of classroom and occupational activities the Vocational Experience course prepared students for career employment after graduation according to acquired skills.

National Safety Council integral part of Driver Ed.

As part of her Drivers' Education course, Linda Wallenberg is required to attend National Safety Council lectures.

Students electing Driver Education this year were the first to use the new simulators acquired by the department. When used with films which confronted the student with various situations and difficulties which may occur while driving, these simulators served as one phase of the four-phase curriculum which comprised classroom seminars, simulation laboratory, multiple-car, off-street driving range, and actual in-traffic experience.

Traffic safety was emphasized in the National Safety Council program which students were required to attend during their free mods. The program was geared to promoting the driver's acceptance of the responsibilities necessary for becoming a skillful, safe, mature, efficient, and cooperative highway user.

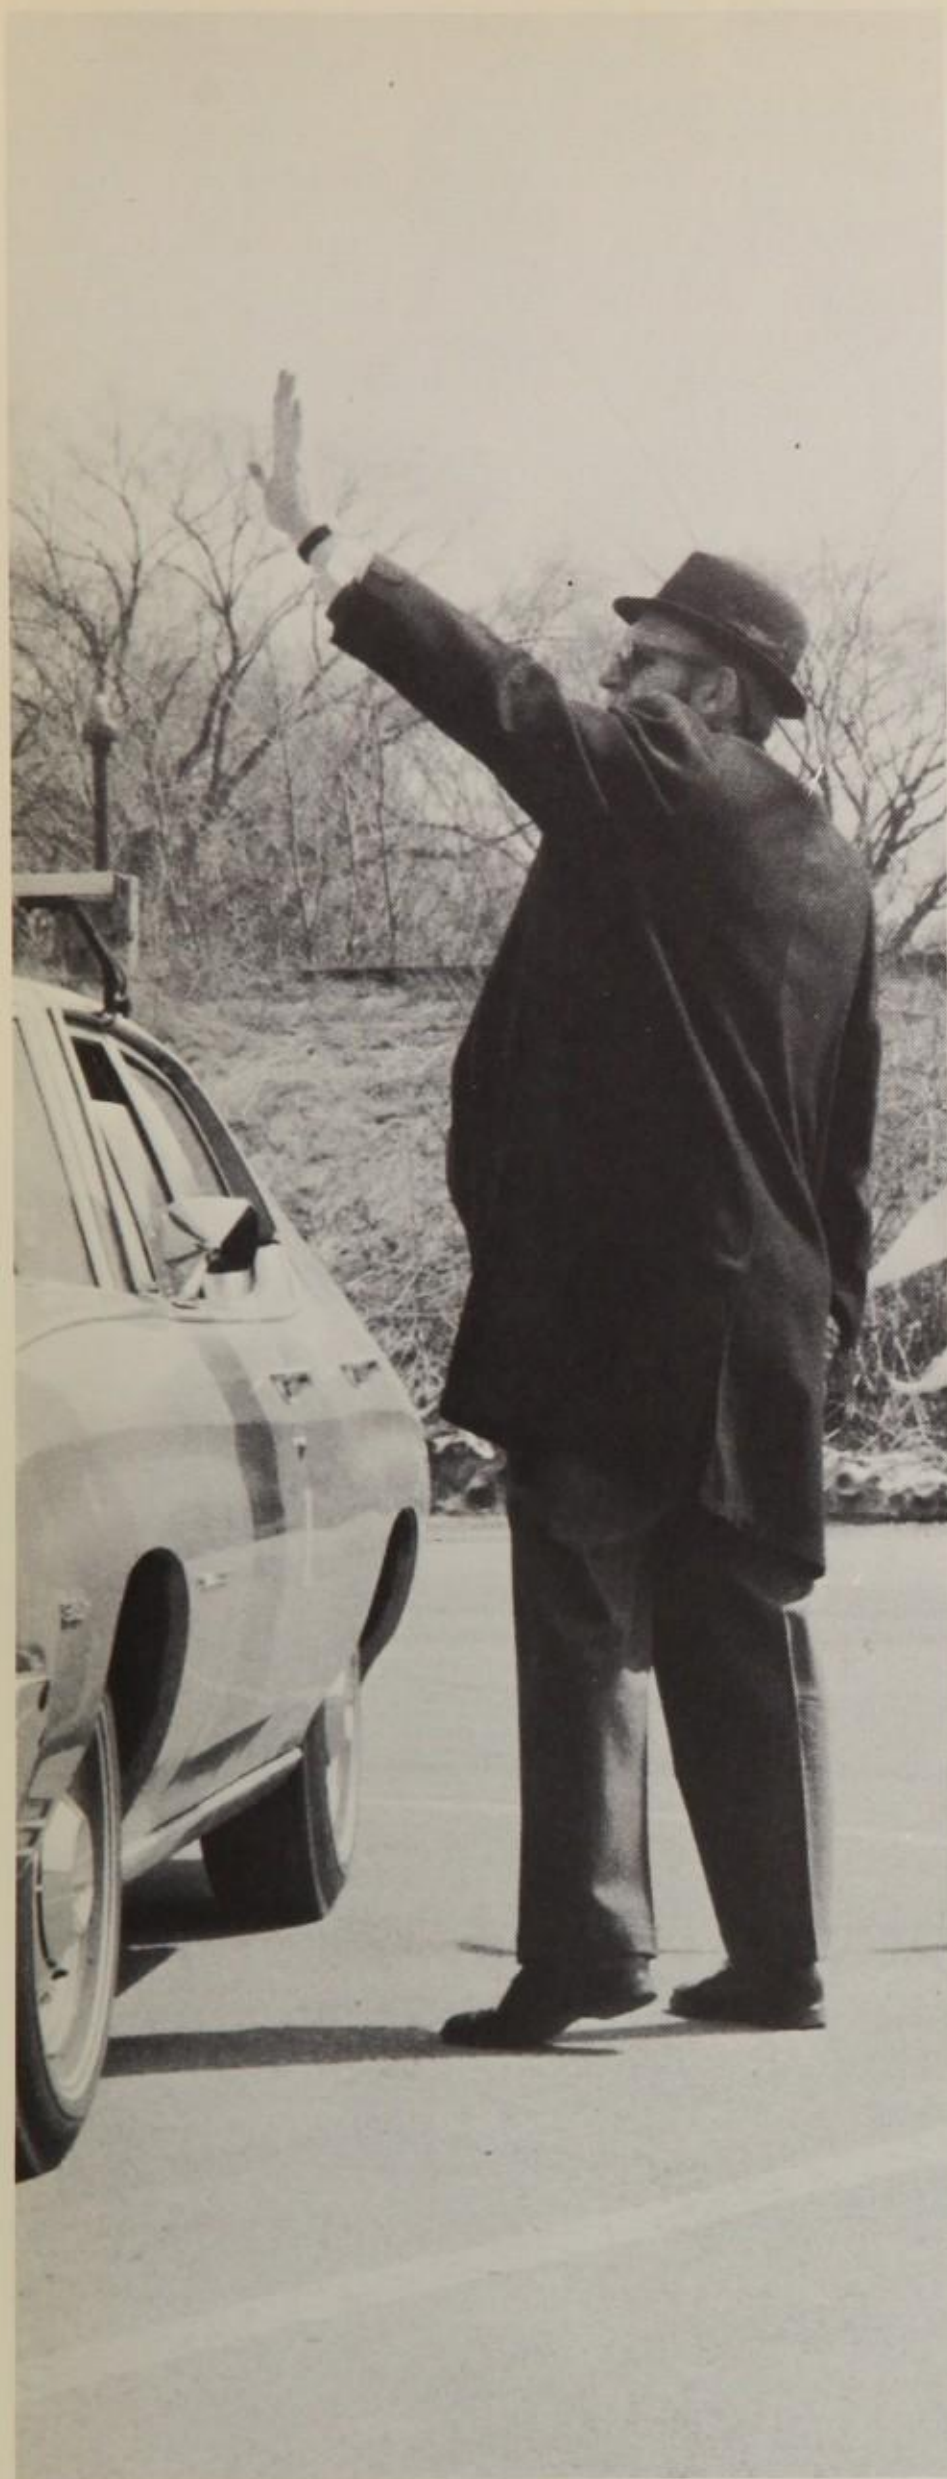

Driver Education Classroom, also a one-semester course, was available to those students who did not elect the Driver Education course. No credit was given for the Driver Education Classroom course as compared to Driver Education which was worth $\frac{1}{2}$ credit. This combination classroom-seminar-simulation-laboratory course fulfilled the requirements for graduation, and was offered to students who already had their licenses.

Special car hand controls were available to those students with physical handicaps.

Upon successful completion of the course, students were given a Driver Education Certificate and testing form in addition to their Learner's Permit and could then go to Elston Avenue or Libertyville testing centers to complete their test for a license. Typically upon completion of this phase of the Driver Education curriculum, future drivers were granted a reduction in their insurance rates.

Over 2500 visitors flock to ETHS

Mrs. Elaine Hirsch, manager of the newly formed Visitors Bureau, served as the official representative of ETHS to over 2500 guests who came from all over the world.

Visitors to the school discussed their specific areas of interest with Mrs. Hirsch, were shown an introductory film about ETHS, and were scheduled on individualized tours which were conducted by retired teachers, Mr. Dave Cameron, Mr. Herbert Sauer, and Mr. Floyd Wilson.

Representatives to national and state-wide conferences, students in inner-city schools, and District 65 PTA groups were greeted by the Bureau and given information on ETHS history, organization, facilities, curriculum, and staff.

The Evanston community was invited to see where their tax dollars were going to during "See Your High School Day," whereby visitors were given schedules and attended "classes" where the faculty gave lectures on the goals, curriculum, and activities of their classes.

Students specially talented in the visual arts, music, drama, and dance participated in programs organized by the Service and Demonstration Center to better acquaint visiting educators from other schools with ETHS programs in the arts.

An exchange program with Hinsdale South was initiated this year. Students from each school spent four days at the exchange school and their teachers spent one day, working intensively with its faculty and students in similar arts programs.

Library materials encourage growth, development

MARY ANN SWANSON: supervisor of library
ALICE JOHNSON: bibliographer, library instructor.

PHYLIS STONE: procurer of public educational materials . . . LEORA TAYLOR: technical processor.

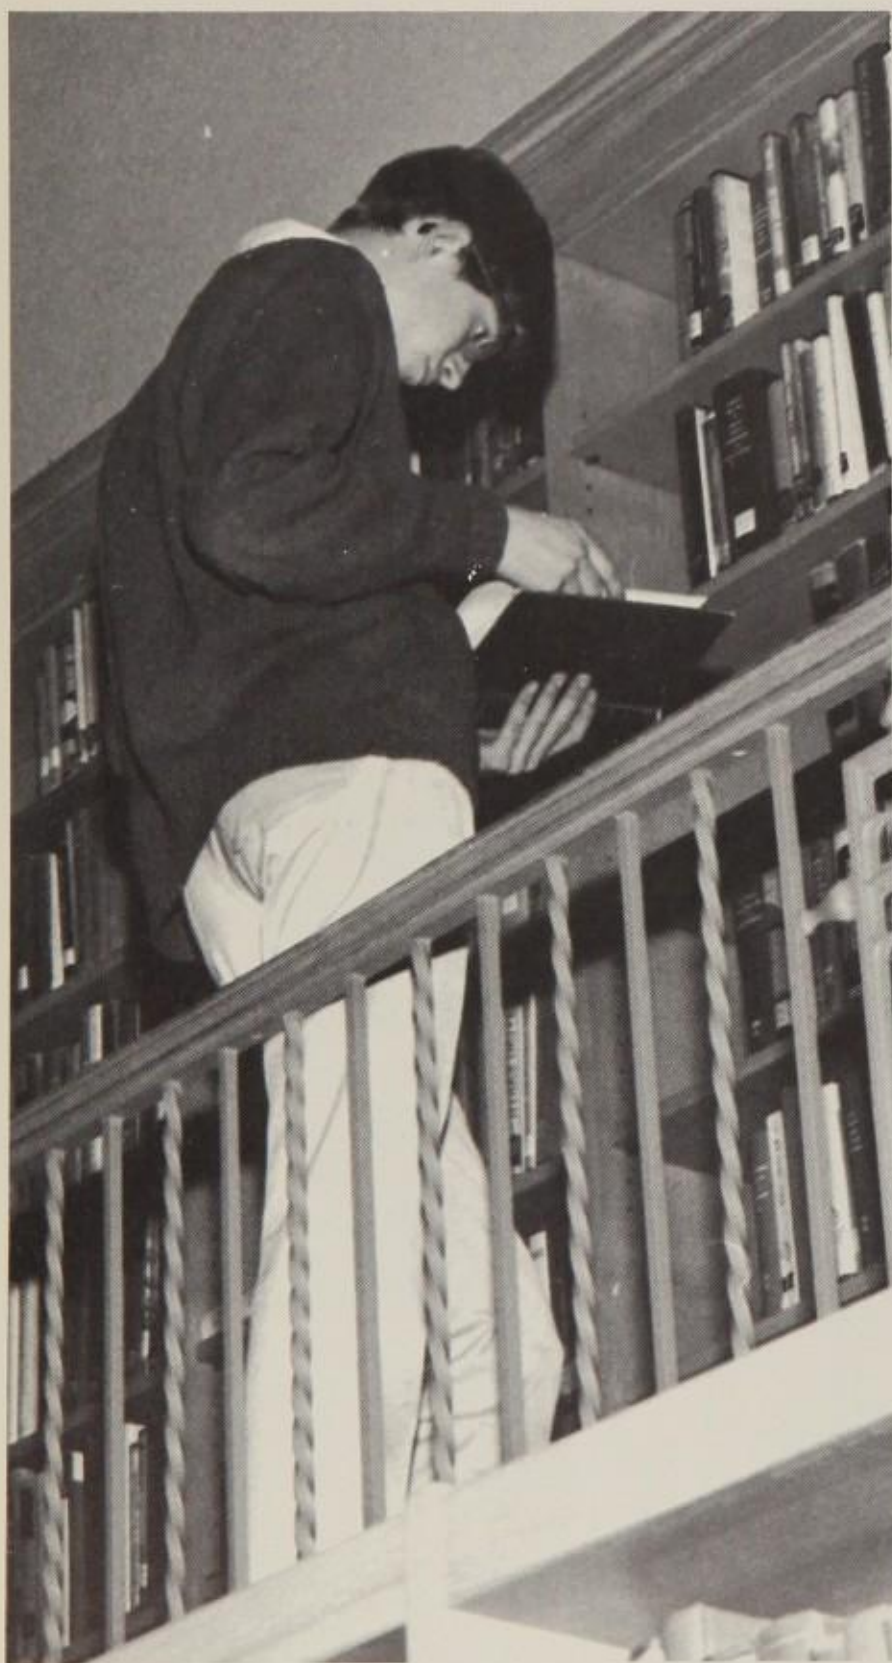

Under the direction of Miss Mary Swanson, the library placed a greater emphasis this year upon the orientation of freshmen and transfer students to its materials as an aid in their adjustment to the school's educational practices and facilities. Resource center librarians worked with counselors and the library, with the help of Miss Alice Johnson, who served as the liaison between the resource centers and the library, in providing these students with lectures on the arrangement and classification of materials, the card catalogue, and an overview of basic reference sources during English classes and on dial-access video-tapes.

With a reduced student staff, librarians experienced an increased demand upon their services.

Students were no longer required to show I. D. cards upon entering the library. An attempt was made to prevent students from using this area as either a discussion or recreational reading area instead of its intended purpose as an area for detailed research.

A composite of subject bibliographies was made available to students this year as an aid in their research.

The card catalogue was frozen, with no new additions being catalogued this year to make way for a new computerized book catalogue. Planning was begun for this new system, under which all literary and audio-visual materials available in the library, the four school resource centers, and the Music Resource Center would be indexed in one book and made available to students and teachers. The purpose of this system would be to enable teachers to plan their curriculum around available resource materials and to aid students in their research by saving the time normally spent finding materials in the library, as this work would be done at home, leaving more time for serious research to be done in the library with non-circulating materials.

Individual study carrels replace cocktail tables

Alan Weisman reaches for college materials in his resource center.

Resource Centers in Beardsley, Michael, and Boltwood replaced their tables with individual study carrels to create a more serious study atmosphere. Bacon Resource Center Director Miss Virginia McKenna promoted her school's abstention from this policy based on the theory that students benefit from having fellow students close at hand to provide assistance with assignments just as much as they benefit from having printed materials and teachers' offices nearby.

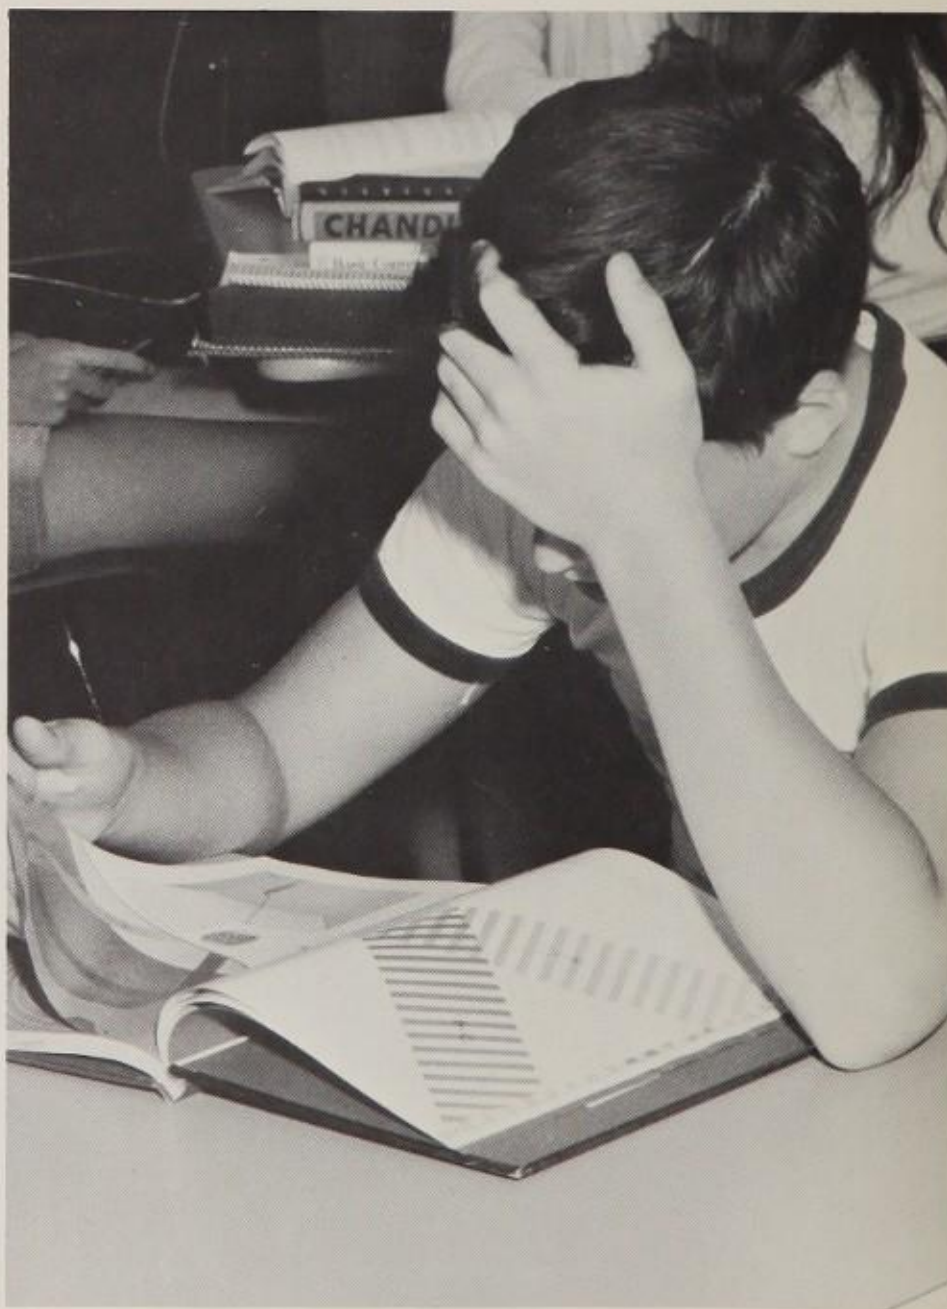

Beardsley Resource Center opened clinics for social studies, combined studies, English, and math students; together with mini-labs for advanced students in French, Spanish and Russian courses. Teachers tutored students in the clinics while students in the language mini-labs made use of tapes, records, and magazines.

In addition to the resource center and study hall, Beardsley students made use of a smaller resource center annex which was set up this year, with newspapers and twenty magazines donated by Quadrangle.

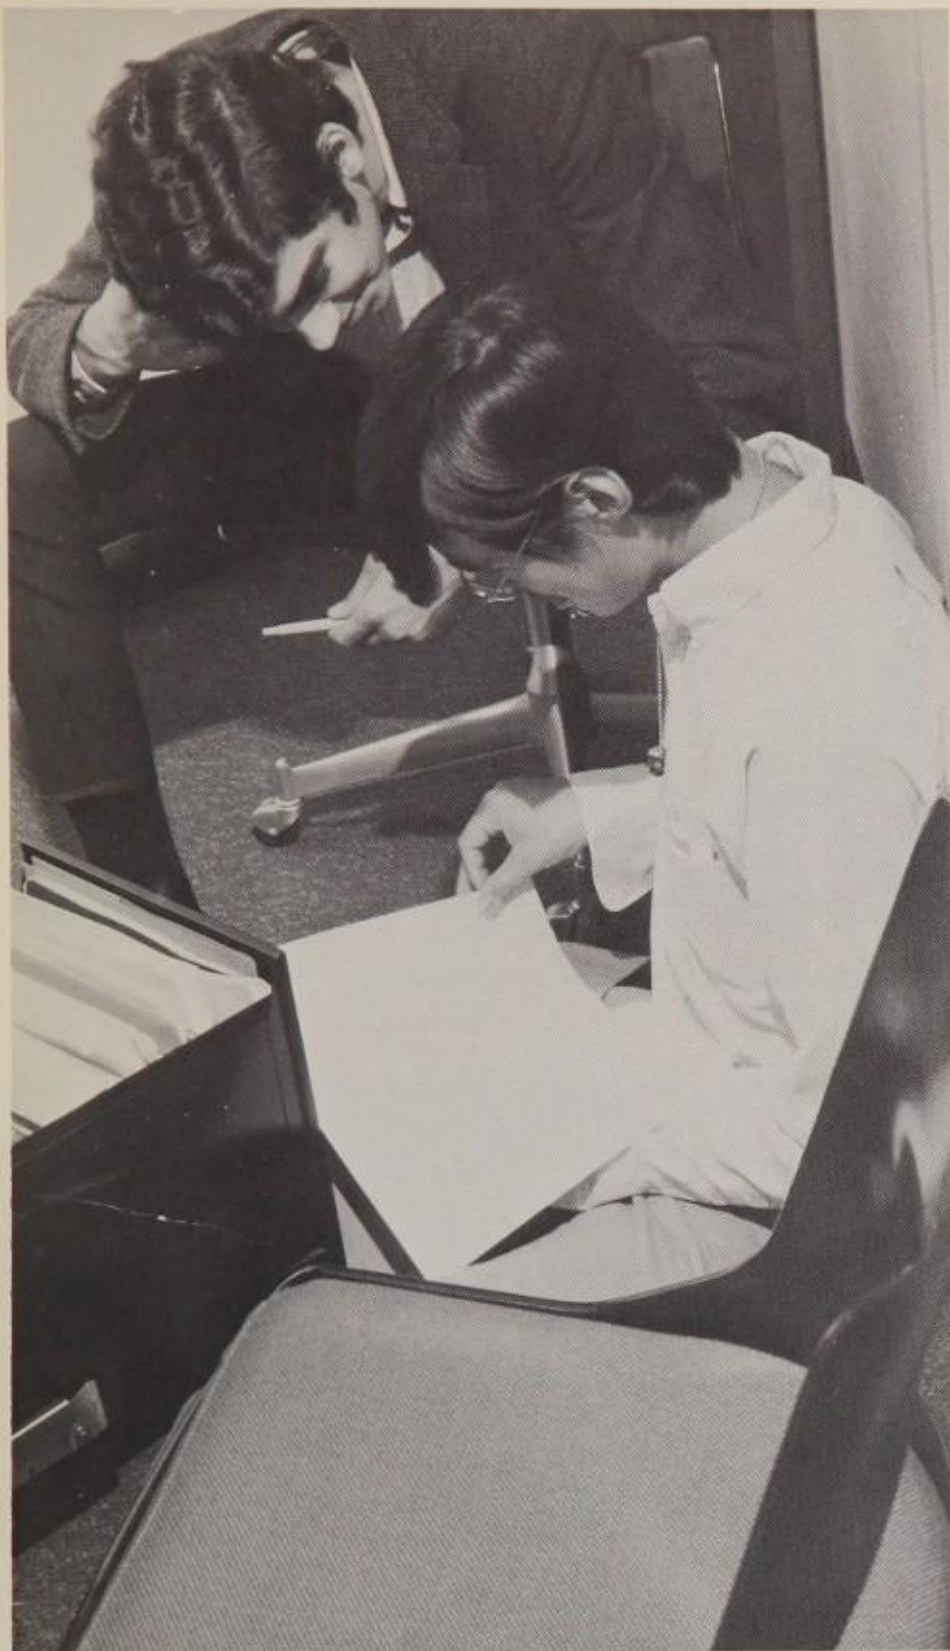

A volunteer student program was initiated in Bacon Resource Center in which students spent free mods assisting librarians at the circulation and reserve desks.

Students in Bacon were able to use recordings on cassette tapes of large group English lectures held on reserve. Plans were being made to make tapes of Bacon science classes next year.

In Boltwood Resource Center, teachers circulated in their subject areas, making them more available to students needing tutorial help.

Counselors compile college information handbook

Beardsley School Counseling placed great emphasis upon helping the freshman in his adjustment to ETHS. Incoming freshmen were invited to visit the school in the spring, where they were shown a film depicting a typical day at ETHS and were taken on a tour of the grounds.

Freshmen were scheduled to attend study hall four mods each week. Counselors were given the option of re-scheduling freshmen to go to special learning stations in Beardsley Resource Center in place of study hall if academic help were needed.

Boltwood freshmen met in small groups during the first quarter once each week with counselors and junior and senior guides. The main purpose of the meetings was to establish a rapport between the students, who actively participated in finger-painting, pumpkin-carving contests, and a pie-eating contest.

Juniors and seniors in Beardsley and Boltwood took advantage of college brochures and career literature in reference rooms set up in the counseling offices. Boltwood counselors compiled a booklet called the Handbook of College Information which contained important information pertaining to test dates, college representatives, and college applications, and was distributed to students in all four schools.

Frosh given special attention in Bacon, Michael

Bacon School Counseling continued the Freshman Guide Program which was started last year. Under the direction of Mr. George Seidenbecker, two volunteer student counselors were assigned to each freshman reg. room and met with their counselees as an aid in their adaption to high school life.

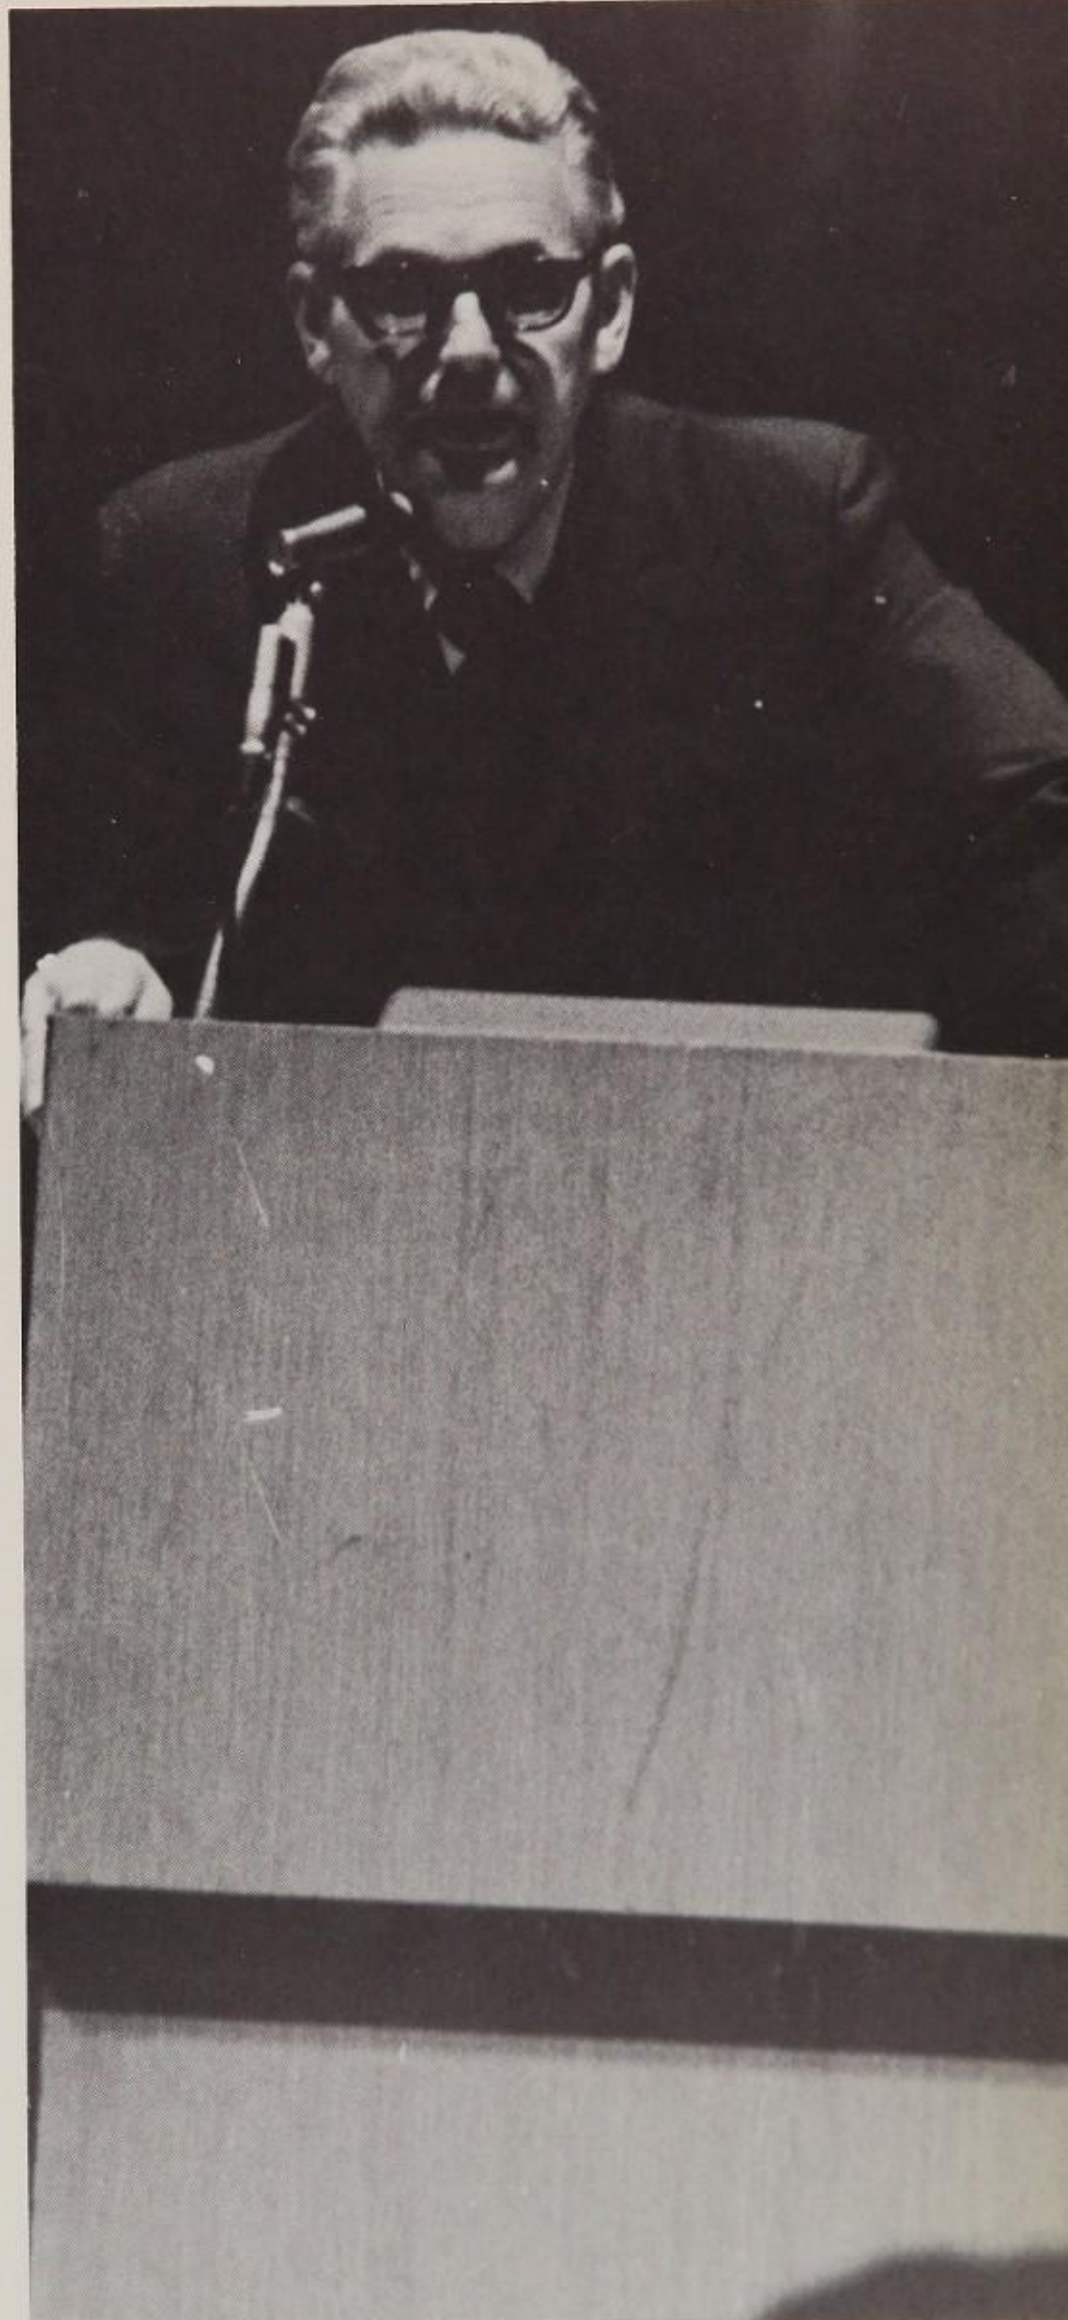

Each Michael School freshman was assigned to a small group by his counselor for meetings two mods each week. Students were required to attend the first mod of the sessions which was used by counselors as a means of transferring information concerning school activities and scheduling. The second half of the meetings was optional, in which students engaged in exercises centering upon the art of communicating effectively in emotional situations.

College brochures were made available to Michael juniors and seniors in the college room of the Guidance Office.

From December to May, seniors were able to utilize the services of the Interactive Learning System, a computer system connected to a central computer in Boston, Massachusetts. Students completed a coded questionnaire which examined their preferences in either a college or vocation and were later given a print-out sheet by the computer which listed possible college or career choices based on these preferences.

sponsors field trips

A comprehensive education program was offered by the Special Education Department to handicapped students. Five teachers and one teacher's aide sought to improve reading skills and help students acquire math skills necessary for competence in money management, measurements, and basic mathematical operations.

Special tutors visited students confined to their homes or a hospital due to temporary or permanent physical handicaps, providing them with a minimum of one hour of teaching per day and keeping them in close contact with regular classroom teachers.

Psychologist Mrs. Helen De Bofsky and a team of six social workers counseled students through direct casework.

Students with impaired hearing followed a sequence of English and History classes supplemented by tutoring in all other courses. The visually handicapped utilized specially adapted material under the supervision of Miss Bernadette Alber.

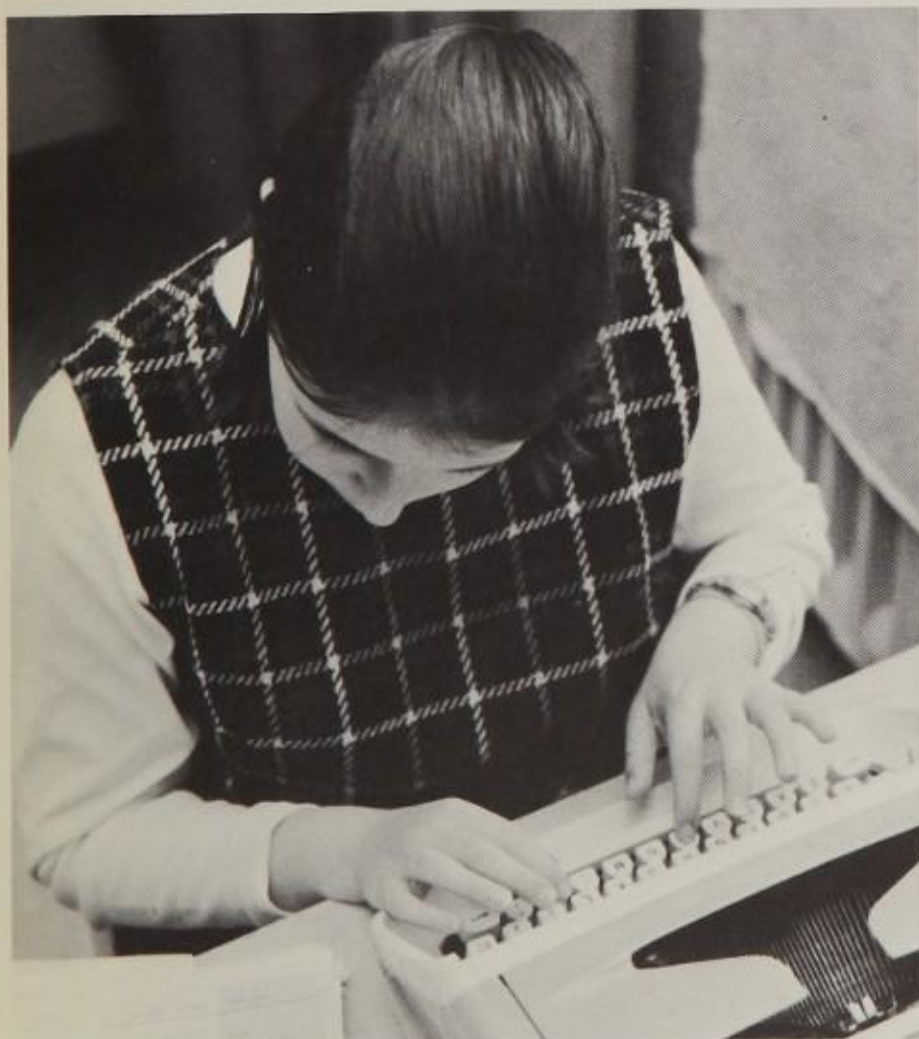

Speech clinicians offered remedial services to students needing improvement in language, fluency, voice quality, and articulation.

In October, businessmen who employed ETHS students as part of the Vocational Education program were invited to a luncheon at the school. During National Library Week, classes entertained the school librarians. A Columbus Day program was also presented that month. Parents were invited to an Indian program which included student-prepared refreshments and a presentation of Indian ceremonial dances.

Freshmen and sophomores went on a field trip to Springfield, Illinois on May 13, visiting state government buildings and Abraham Lincoln's home and tomb. Juniors and seniors spent four days on a tour to Washington, D.C. and Jamestown, Virginia from May 10-14. More than just paint, band-aids provided School nurses served the school by providing students and faculty with health information and instruction in addition to the regular administering of first aid practices. Films on cancer prevention were shown to teachers as a part of the in-service information program.

Beardsley Nurse Mrs. Andrea Perman worked with the newly formed Health Careers Club which met once each month to listen to lectures given by guest speakers.

Career days were planned during which groups of students interested in health careers were sent on field trips to Mt. Sinai and Evanston Hospitals, where professionals provided them with career information.

Diet classes were held weekly for overweight students upon the recommendation of their Physical Education teachers beginning in January. Students were instructed on the components of a well-balanced diet and listened to speakers who lectured on proper weight maintenance.

Student Activities directors worked with student groups in the organization of school dances, fund-raising campaigns, and student government campaigns and elections. Facilities were available in activities offices for poster-making and the typing and printing of ditto handouts. Adjacent school supplies stores were staffed by students under the direction of the activities directors.

Teacher's aides added to academic departments

Teacher's aides held office positions and assisted certified teachers in their instruction procedures. Para-professionals were those teacher's aides who had completed at least 30 hours of college credit.

Academic departments employed aides to assist teachers in the preliminary preparation needed for their classes. Mrs. Margaret Bahner supervised the language lab while Mr. Scott Davis managed Michael Planetarium facilities. Mrs. Helga Benson worked with the Bacon Mathematics Department, Mrs. Renee Dushman and Mrs. Gloria Schaffel with the Home Economics Department, and Mr. James Peterson with the Art Department, in addition to the Science Department's five aides.

Teachers were relieved of various supervisory duties by 26 additional aides.

Librarians worked with 15 resource center aides and seven Central Library aides in keeping these areas quiet for study and research and in helping students locate research materials.

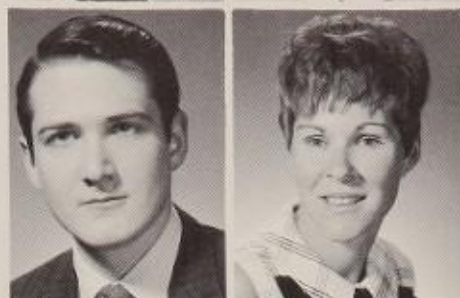

Specialized positions included Mr. Jerry Rehm in Central Library visual aides, Mrs. Susan Born in Data Processing, Mr. William West in Extension Services, Bacon School Reading Lab Assistant Mrs. Catherine Smith, Testing Center Proctor Mrs. Vivian Viezbicke, Beardsley Guidance Assistant Mrs. Clyde Jeffers, Visitors Bureau Manager Mrs. Elaine Hirsch, Adult Teaching Aide Mr. Ervin Smith, Beardsley Intensive Training Lab Assistant Mr. Michael Smith, and Boltwood Group Projects Program Director Mrs. Emily Palmer.

Choreography highlights summer musical

We were taken back to the turn of the century this year with the Evanston Summer Music Theater Workshop's presentation of a Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "Oklahoma." The musical was directed by Mr. William Ditton and presented with a split cast on July 25 and 26 in the school auditorium.

Laurey, played by Jean Bystrom and Kerry McCarthy, lived with her Aunt Eller, portrayed by Penny Summers and Cheryl Pitts, on a farm in an Indian territory now known as Oklahoma.

Curly MacLaine, Robert Reichstein and Kent McChesney, found difficulty courting Laurey when Jud, a hired hand on Aunt Eller's farm played by Tom Clewell and Karrol Alexander, escorted Laurey to a fund-raising social, despite Curly's romantic promises. Due to an argument at the social, Laurey found herself forced to fire Jud, a decision which she later regretted. In a final attempt to win Laurey's heart, Curly proposed and Laurey surprised him with her acceptance. During this time Oklahoma had been granted statehood, adding more cause for celebration.

Everyone's spirits were dampened on the night of the wedding, when Jud returned to the farm and threatened Curly with a knife. Jud was killed accidentally during the fight and Curly was cleared of the murder on a plea of self-defense and accidental death.

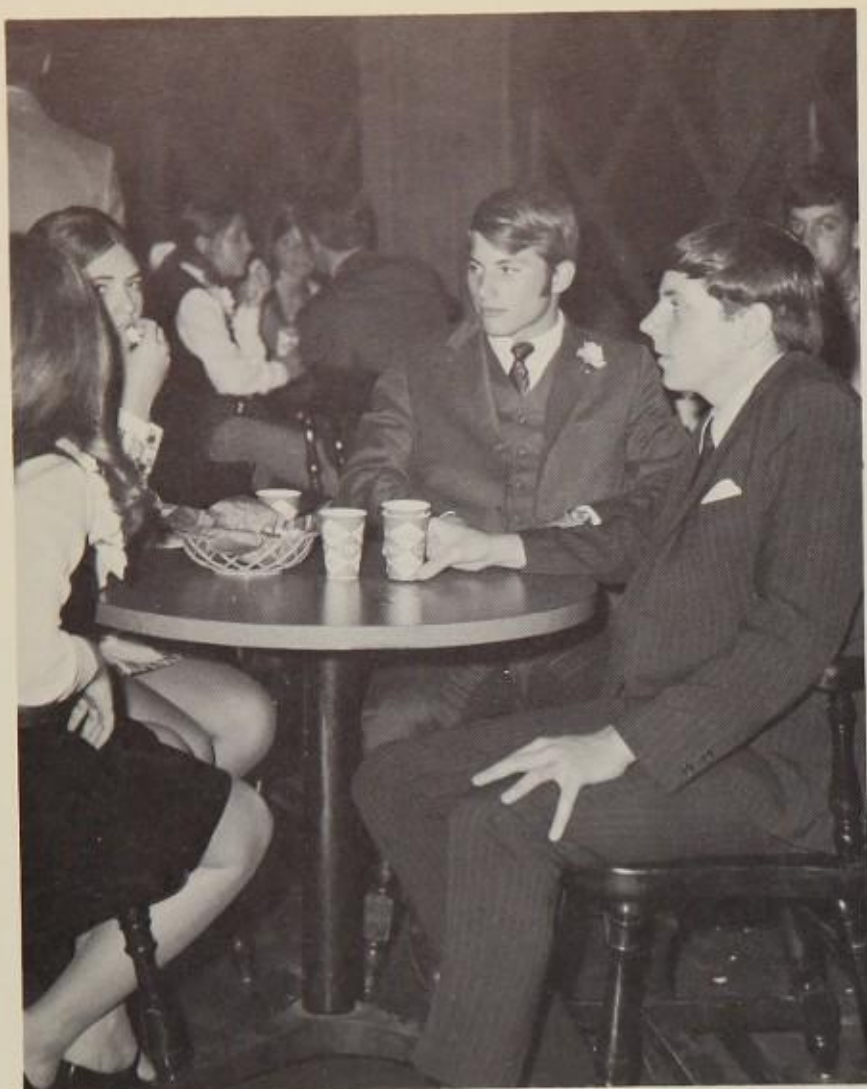

The musical score included "O, What a Beautiful Mornin'," "Surrey With the Fringe on Top," "Kansas City," "People Will Say We're In Love," and "Oklahoma."

Upon hearing that Beardsley School's class of '70 has won first place in the float contest for their third year, Ann Cuniff becomes ecstatic.

Floats paraded through downtown Evanston

"The Year 2525" set the innovative pace for Homecoming activities this year on October 3 and 4.

Planning was begun last spring by the newly-formed Cross Four Committee. Michael School was placed in charge of publicity, while the responsibility for planning the Homecoming events was divided between the other three schools.

Formerly an all-school event, the pep rally was organized by Bacon School and held in Beardsley Gym on Friday, October 3 for juniors and seniors only. Sandy Fisher, Bacon Senior, was crowned Homecoming Queen.

The rally climaxed with the announcement that the Beardsley class of 1970 had won the float competition for the third consecutive year, while Bacon and Michael seniors took second and third, respectively.

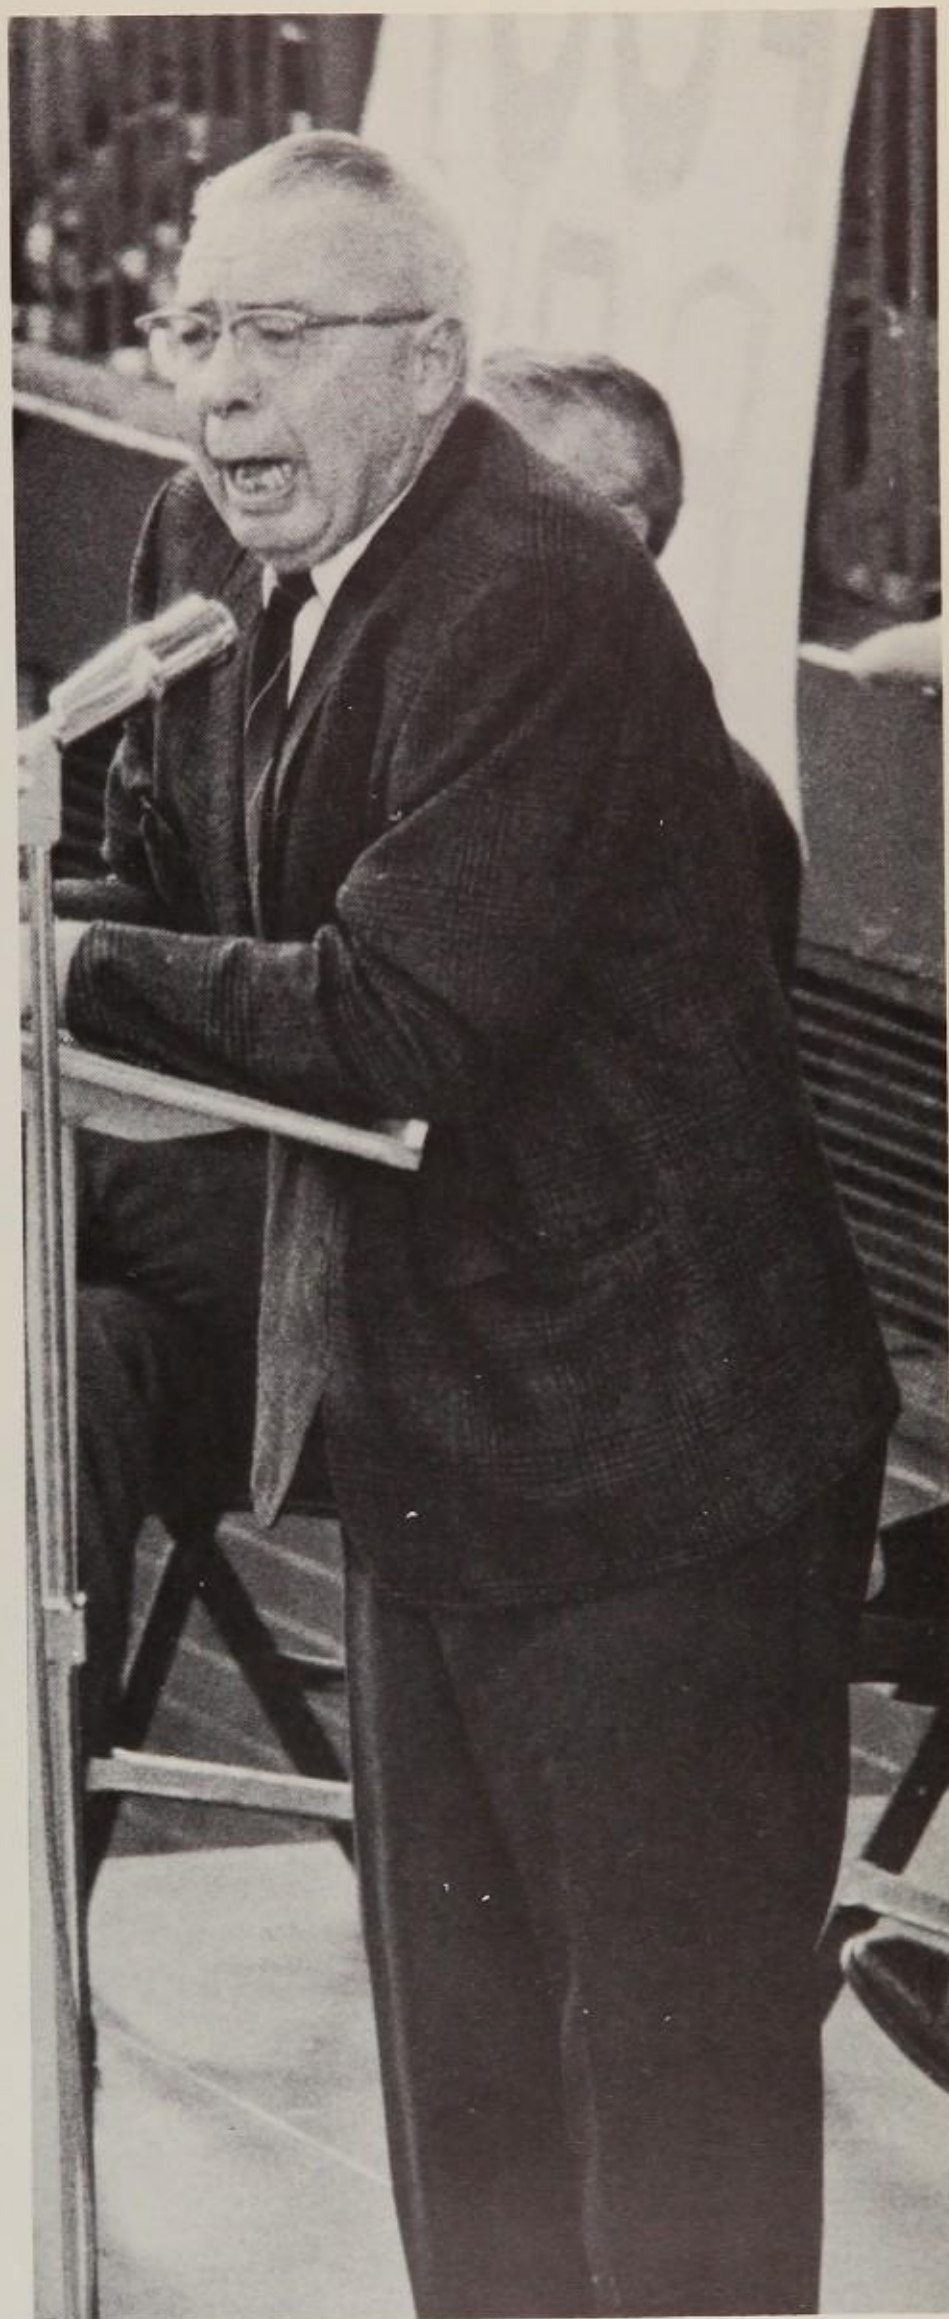

Following the rally, the floats were paraded through downtown Evanston.

That afternoon, the Evanston Cross Country team ran over Morton East. On October 4, the Wildkits beat the Highland Park Little Giants on the Varsity, Sophomore and Freshman A levels, and the Varsity and Sophomore soccer teams won their games against Morton East.

Students celebrated ETHS victories at the Homecoming dance, organized by Boltwood School and held at the Levy Student Union Building. Two rock groups, the Realistics and the American Dream, provided entertainment as the Homecoming weekend festivities drew to a close.

YAMO '69 specializes in satire

Opera stars, Shakespearean characters, hippies, and beauty queens worked together to produce "YAMO is a four letter word," or, "All great truths begin as blasphemies."

The institutions satirized by this year's production were "Instant Replay: The Miss America Pageant," with Robert Reichstein as Bert Spats and Elizabeth Summers as Beth Hammerstein, and "Finalone Dell'Opera," the final extravaganza which combined famous operatic characters and their music with new, jazzed-up versions of the original works.

Other skits were "Fuzz," a take-off on the musical "Hair," "Theatre 202," "Protest Bowl," and "The Day Beginneth," a Shakespearean soap opera.

The YAMO Pantomime Company performed humorous skits between numbers. Spirit of Soul returned again this year under the direction of Mr. Avon Gillespie.

Following tradition, YAMO '69 was completely student written, directed, and performed.

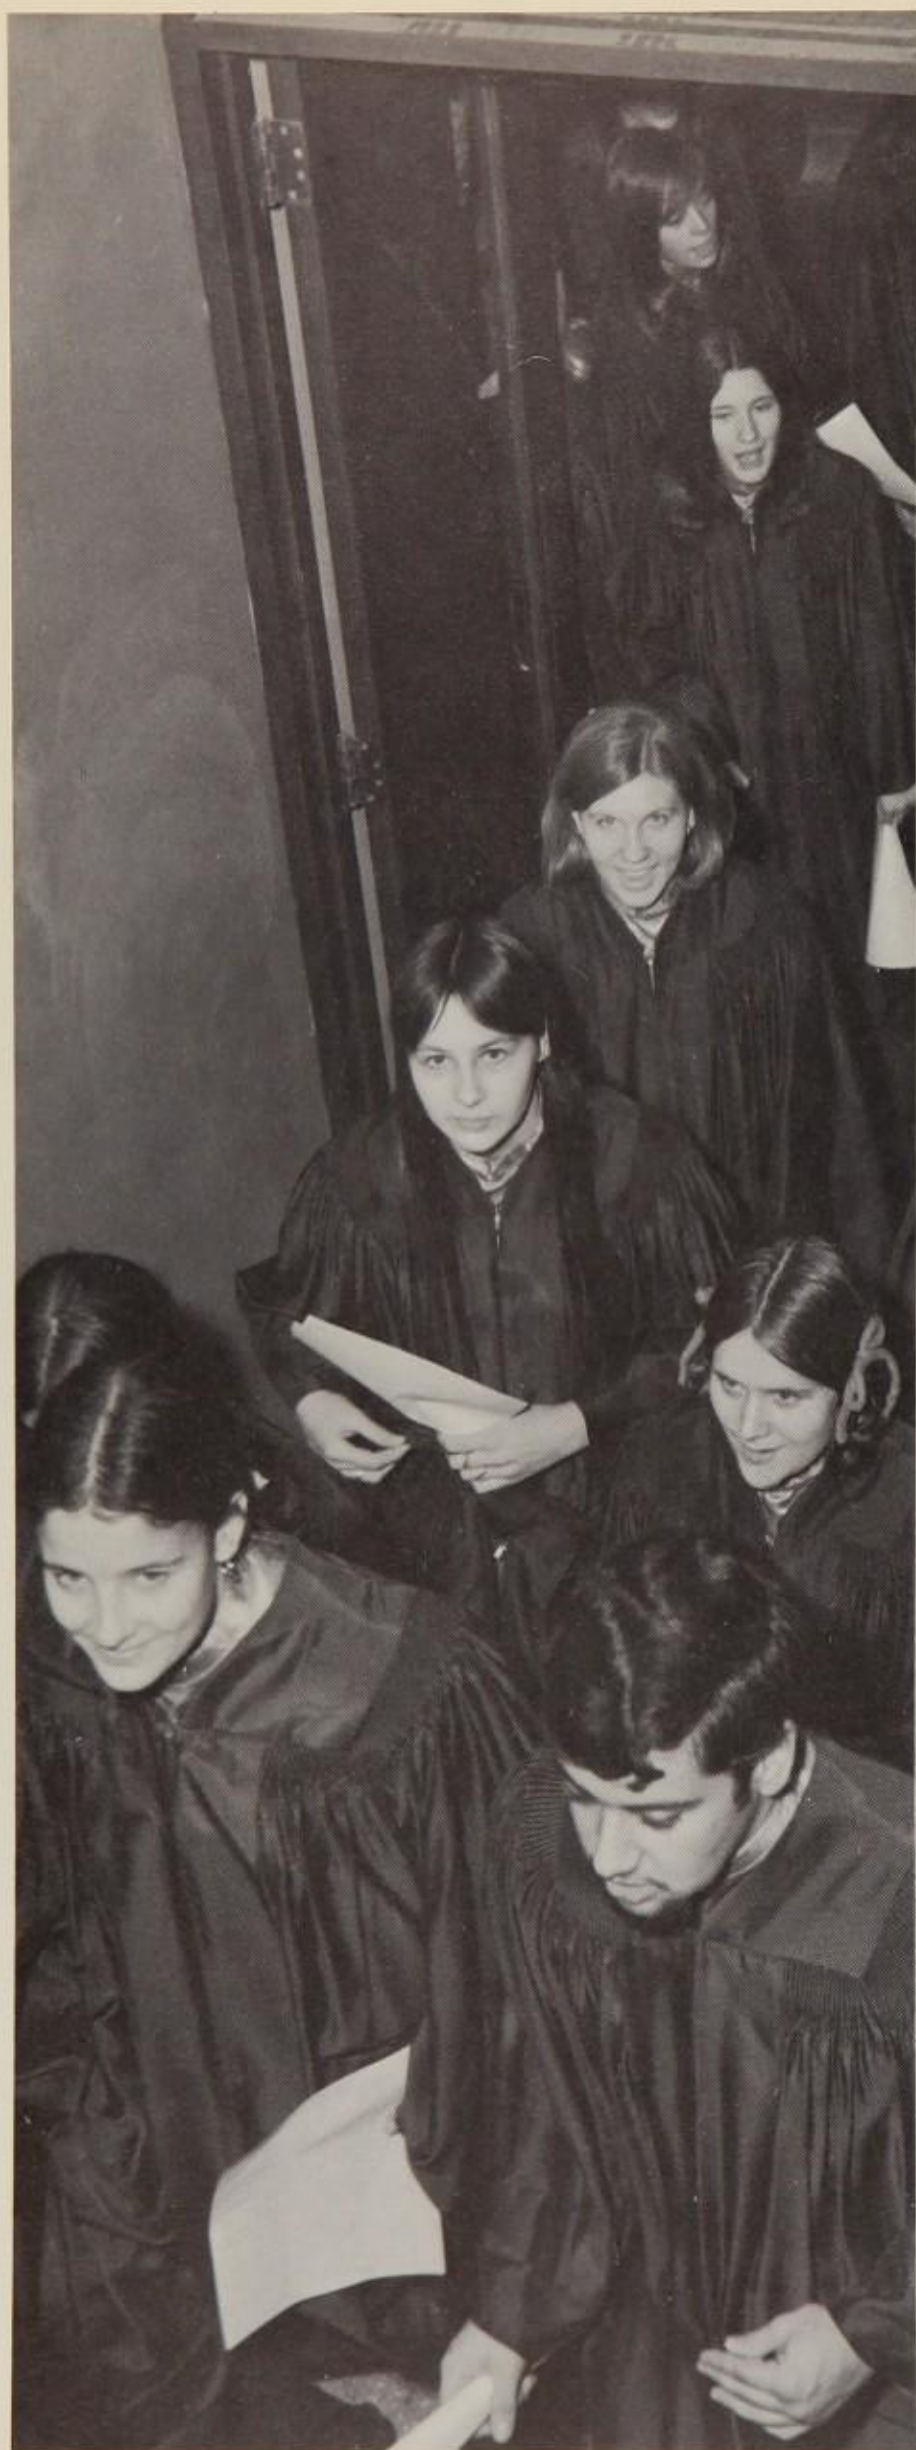

Judd Parkin, chairman of the YAMO Board, coordinated and directed the more than 300 students who participated in the performance. Other students on the YAMO Board included Kerry McCarthy, chorus chairman; Lynn Simon, choreographer; and Greg Barman, music director-conductor. Mr. Bruce Siewerth was the faculty sponsor and co-ordinating director.

Andy Levis, Sammy Squirrel, and his mother Gwen Stevens plan for the future.

Service keynotes the winter holidays

Students spread goodwill outside the school as well as inside during the 1969 winter holidays. Service was especially directed towards children who ordinarily would not have had a Christmas.

Bacon Student Activities was the headquarters this year for volunteer elves who organized a Christmas party for 105 underprivileged children from the Marrilac House on the south side of Chicago. They ranged in age from six to eight years. Santa made friends as he called the children by name and awarded them gifts the student had prepared. All the money earned for the presents was raised by the 75 students participating in the party who completely ran and organized it. They even provided the buses necessary to bring the children to the school.

Elves entertained the children with stockings, a Christmas tree, carols, and an original skit while the children enjoyed cookies, ice cream, and punch and joined in the traditional Christmas songs.

Students in Michael School collected used toys and repaired them if necessary. They also spent their free time making wooden toys and stuffed animals for children in day care centers and hospitals who probably would have gone without a Christmas.

Mr. Culver, Michael School counselor, sponsored the annual Alumni Tea. Students represented classes of the years '68 and '69. Other traditional activities were the ETHS choir caroling through the halls and the Boltwood Santa Clauses spreading cheer.

Christmas cheer infiltrates Dawn Sutton and Susan Nopar's 2 English 1 class when Santa Paul Glaser pops in.

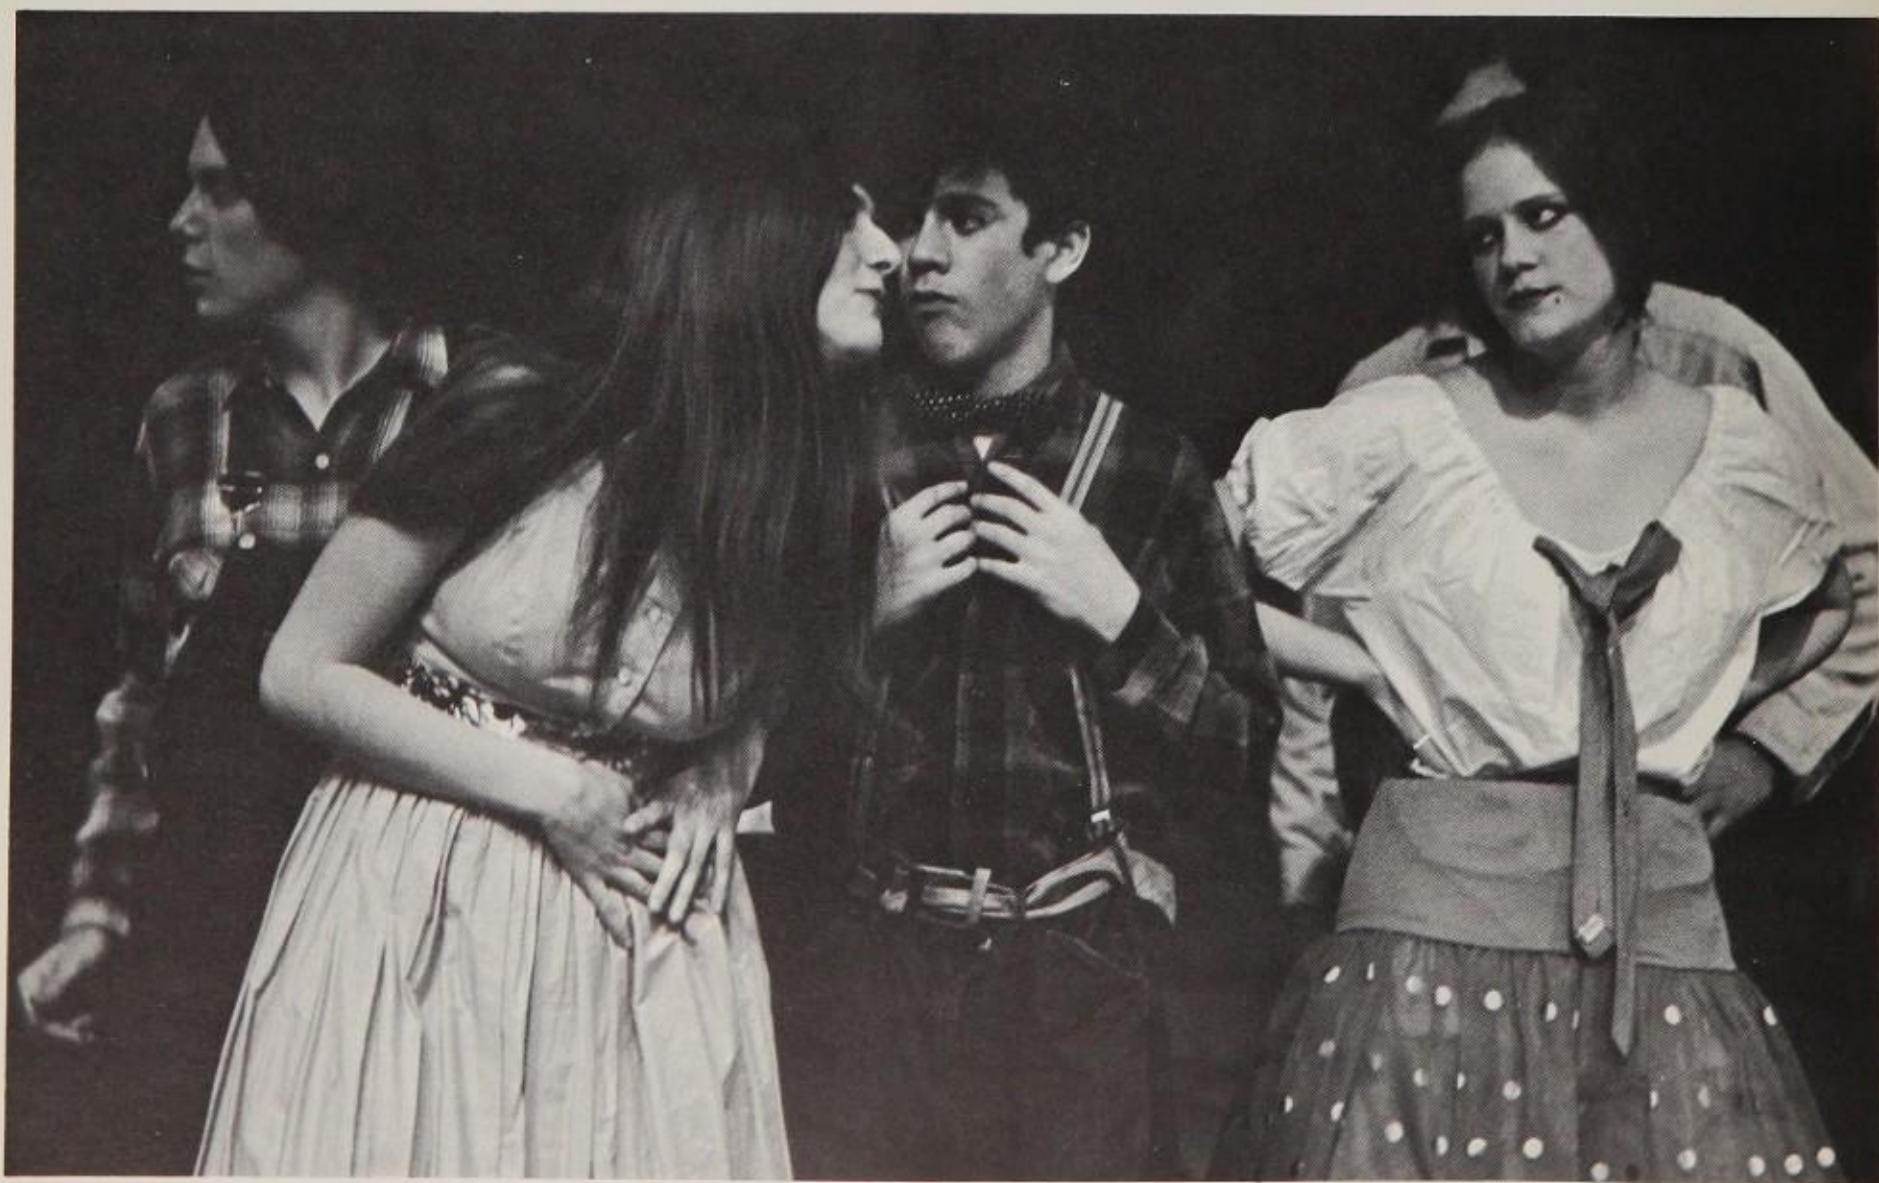

Michael School students Judy Miller and Linda Walker devote their time to making toys for orphans.

Drama communicates; audience responds

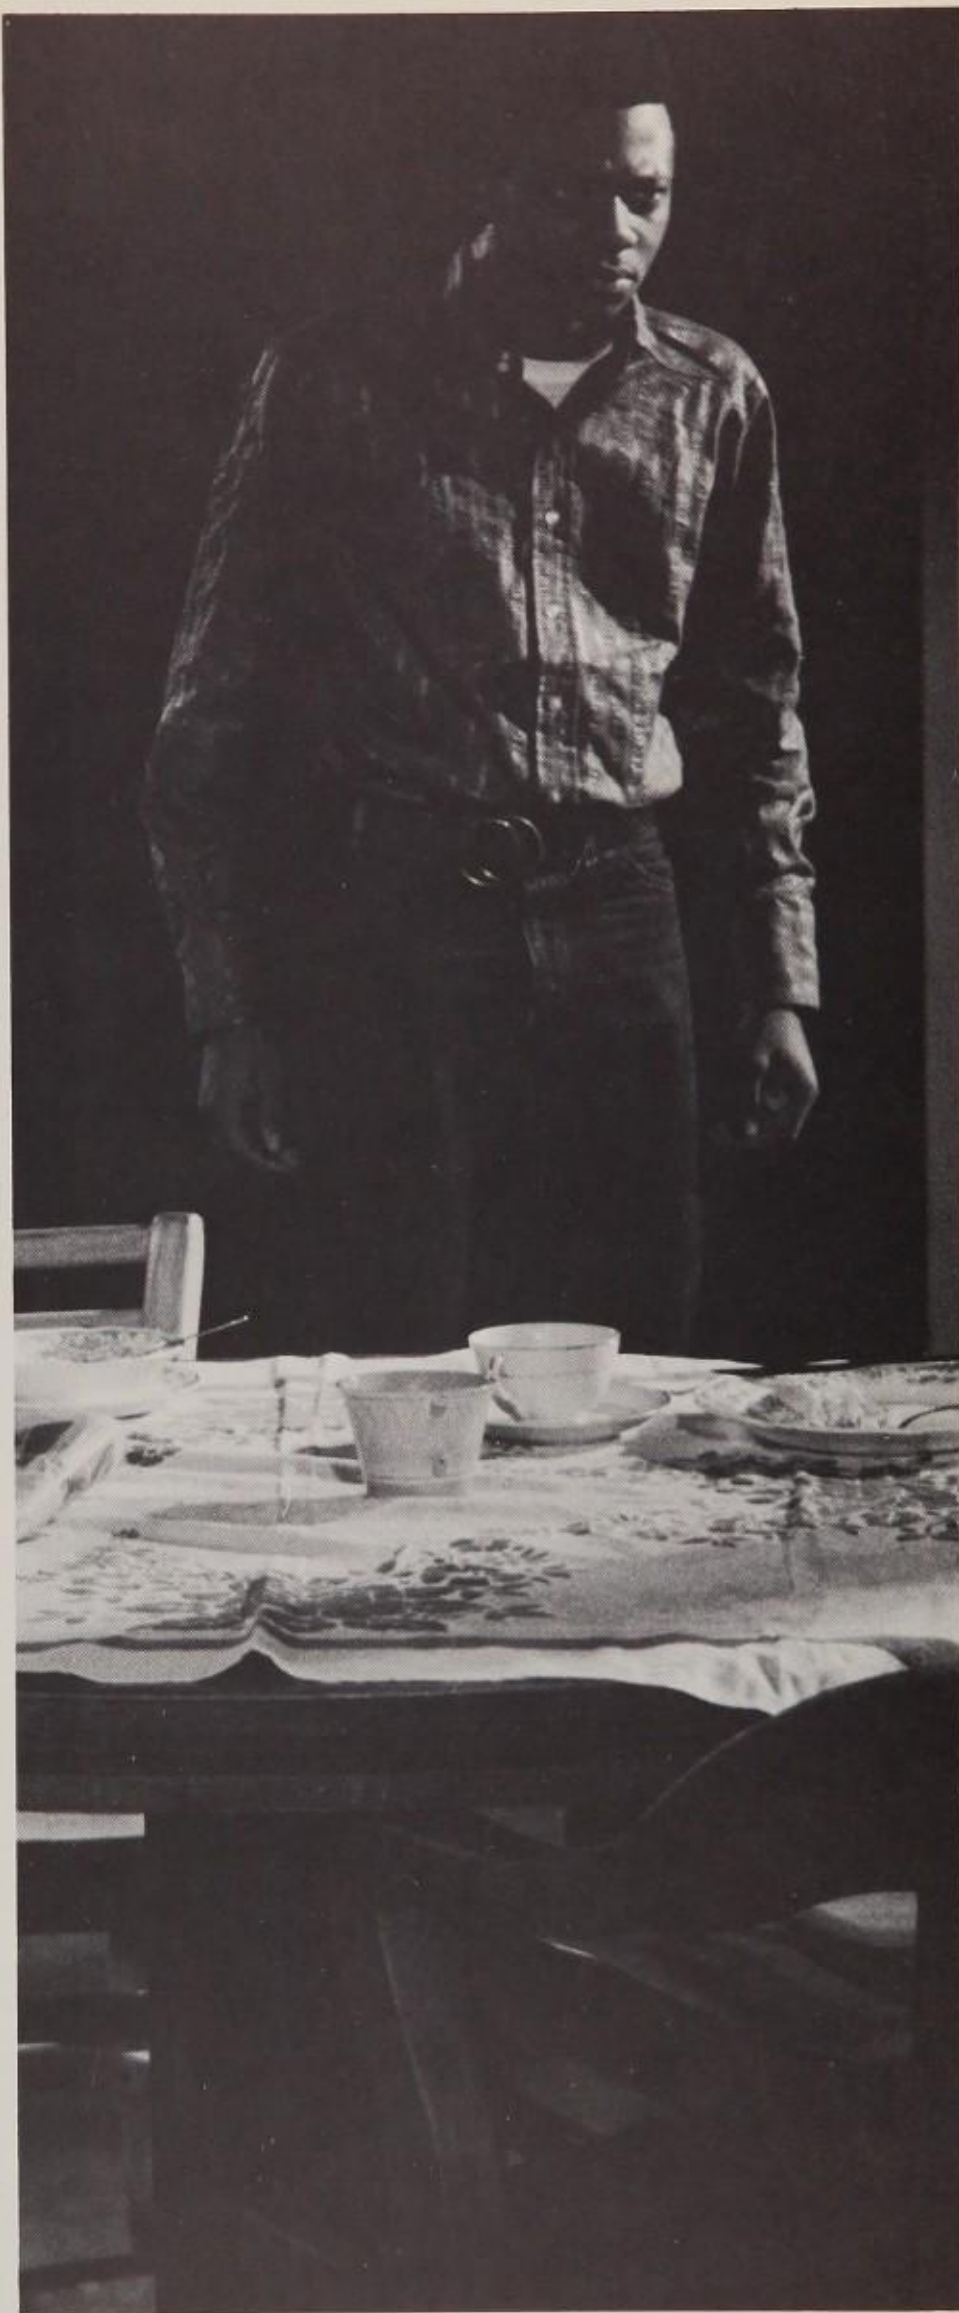

Theatre in the round, improvisational scripts, and folk-rock music were used in the plays this year to establish a more intimate communication with the audience. David Cherry wrote an original banjo piece called "Blue Grass" for Dark of the Moon. "The Ballad of Barbara Allan" was written by Julie Homi and sung by her sister Amanda, the singing witch. A Raisin in the Sun was the first ETHS play performed in the round. This arrangement enables the audience to identify more easily with the actors.

Dark of the Moon, set in the Smokey Mountains, tells of the love that John the witchboy, Chip Johnson, has for human Barbara Allan, played by Nancy Connors; Barbara gives birth to a deformed baby. The town, knowing that John is the father, suspects that the baby is a witch, and they burn it. John has the conjure lady transform him into a human so that he can marry Barbara. Five other witches who love John bet the conjure lady that Barbara will deceive him within one year. They have the conjurer promise them that if their premonition becomes true, she will kill Barbara and transform John back into a witchboy. Barbara does deceive John, and the conjurer carries out her agreement.

A Raisin in the Sun, set in Chicago, tells of a Negro family living in poverty. The major conflict evolves as Mama, Minnie Northcutt, receives a check from her husband's insurance policy. She wants to use the money for a house for the family, but Darryl Duncan as Walter and Gloria Taylor as Beneatha have different ideas. Mama proceeds to buy a house in a white neighborhood without the consent of either Beneatha or Walter. But, white hostility unifies the family, and they all decide to remain in the new house.

Mama consoles Ruth who dreads having a child that they can't afford.

Upon discovering that Mama has used her money to buy a house instead of investing it in a bar, Walter becomes furious.

Music groups strive for professionalism

Cadet Band member Elliot Baron performs a tympani solo.

King David, the symphonic psalm presented by the four Chorales and the ETHS Choir, is the story of the king of Judah and Israel, who through his faith in God, was able to conquer the Philistines. It was narrated by Daniel Dejan, a Boltwood senior, who portrayed David. The concert was directed by Miss Helen Keith, Mr. Richard Rosewall, Mr. Avon Gillespie, and Mr. Milner Seifert, the directors of each of the chorales. ETHS was the first high school in the country to perform the work.

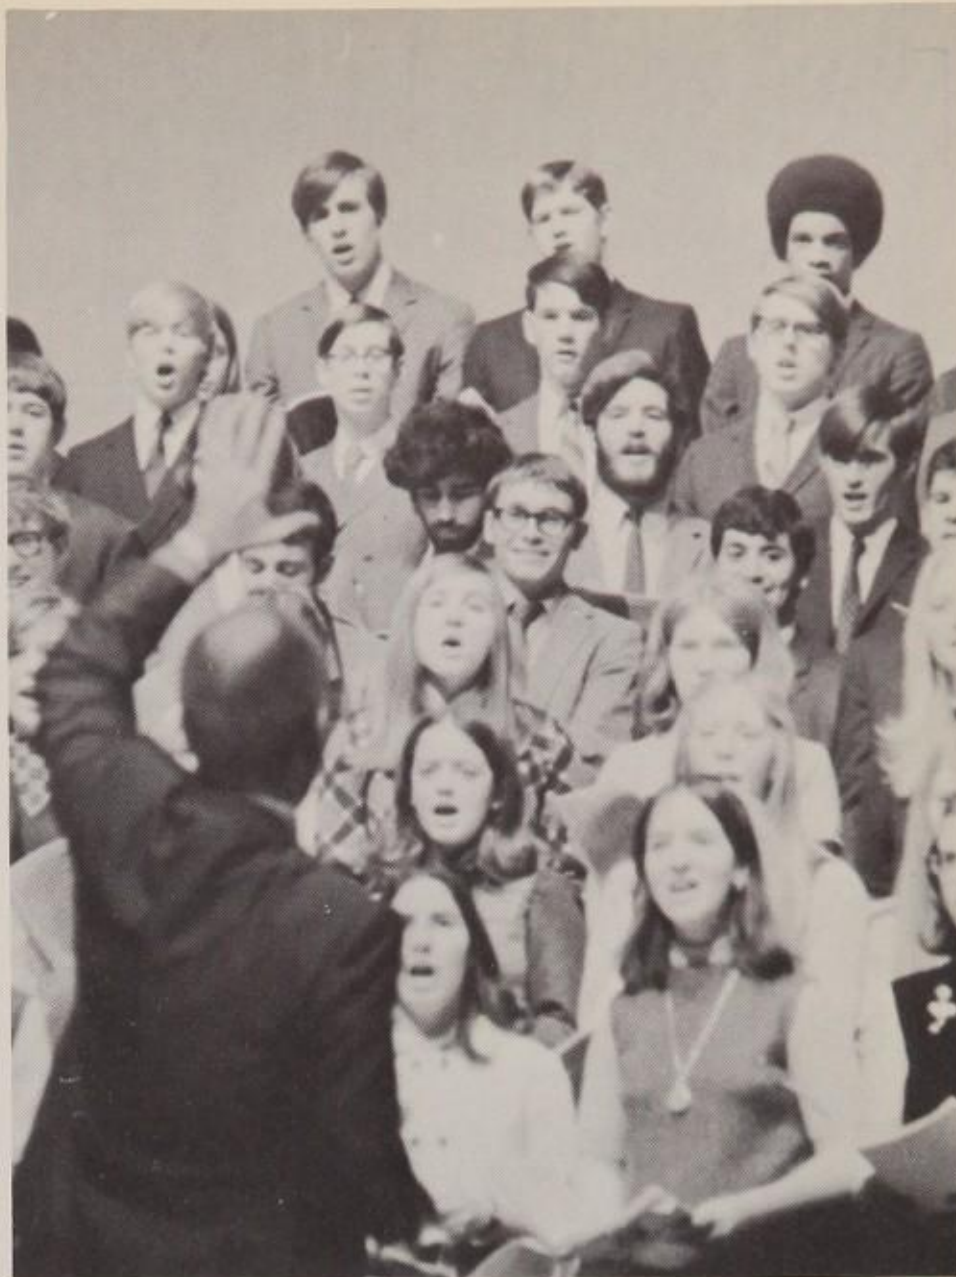

Mr. William Idle and Mr. Don Owens conducted the Concert and Cadet Bands in their presentation, "The Sounds of the '70's." It featured a student composed song by Gary Zola and arranged by Scott Golinkin. Included in the concert were selections by Rossini, K.M. von Weber, and McBeth.

In selections from Oliver by Lionel Bart, Barbara Van Ness and Joanne Zimmerman play their flutes.

Joanne Wright and Margie Wheeler, as angels, sing of their reactions to the death of King David.

The story of David's fight with the Philistines is told in the symphony psalm sung by the four chorales.

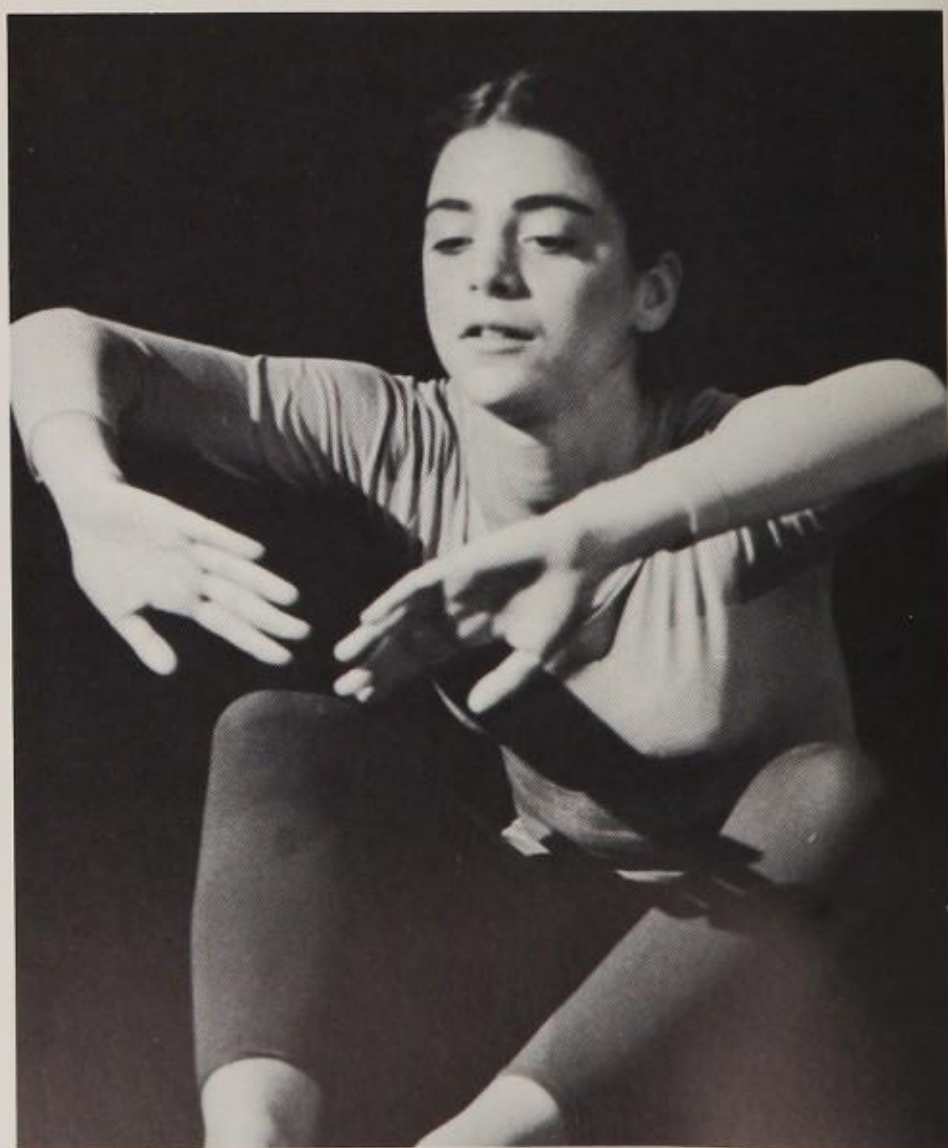

In the "March of Ides," a band arrangement by senior Gary Zola, Charles Barrett, Michael Bard, and David Diamond perform.

Can all men survive together is the question asked in this Esande performance.

Esande members reflect how racial tensions result from a lack of understanding between people.

Alice Becker portrays personal freedom through her dance "self."

Esande, Dance Honors unite for presentation

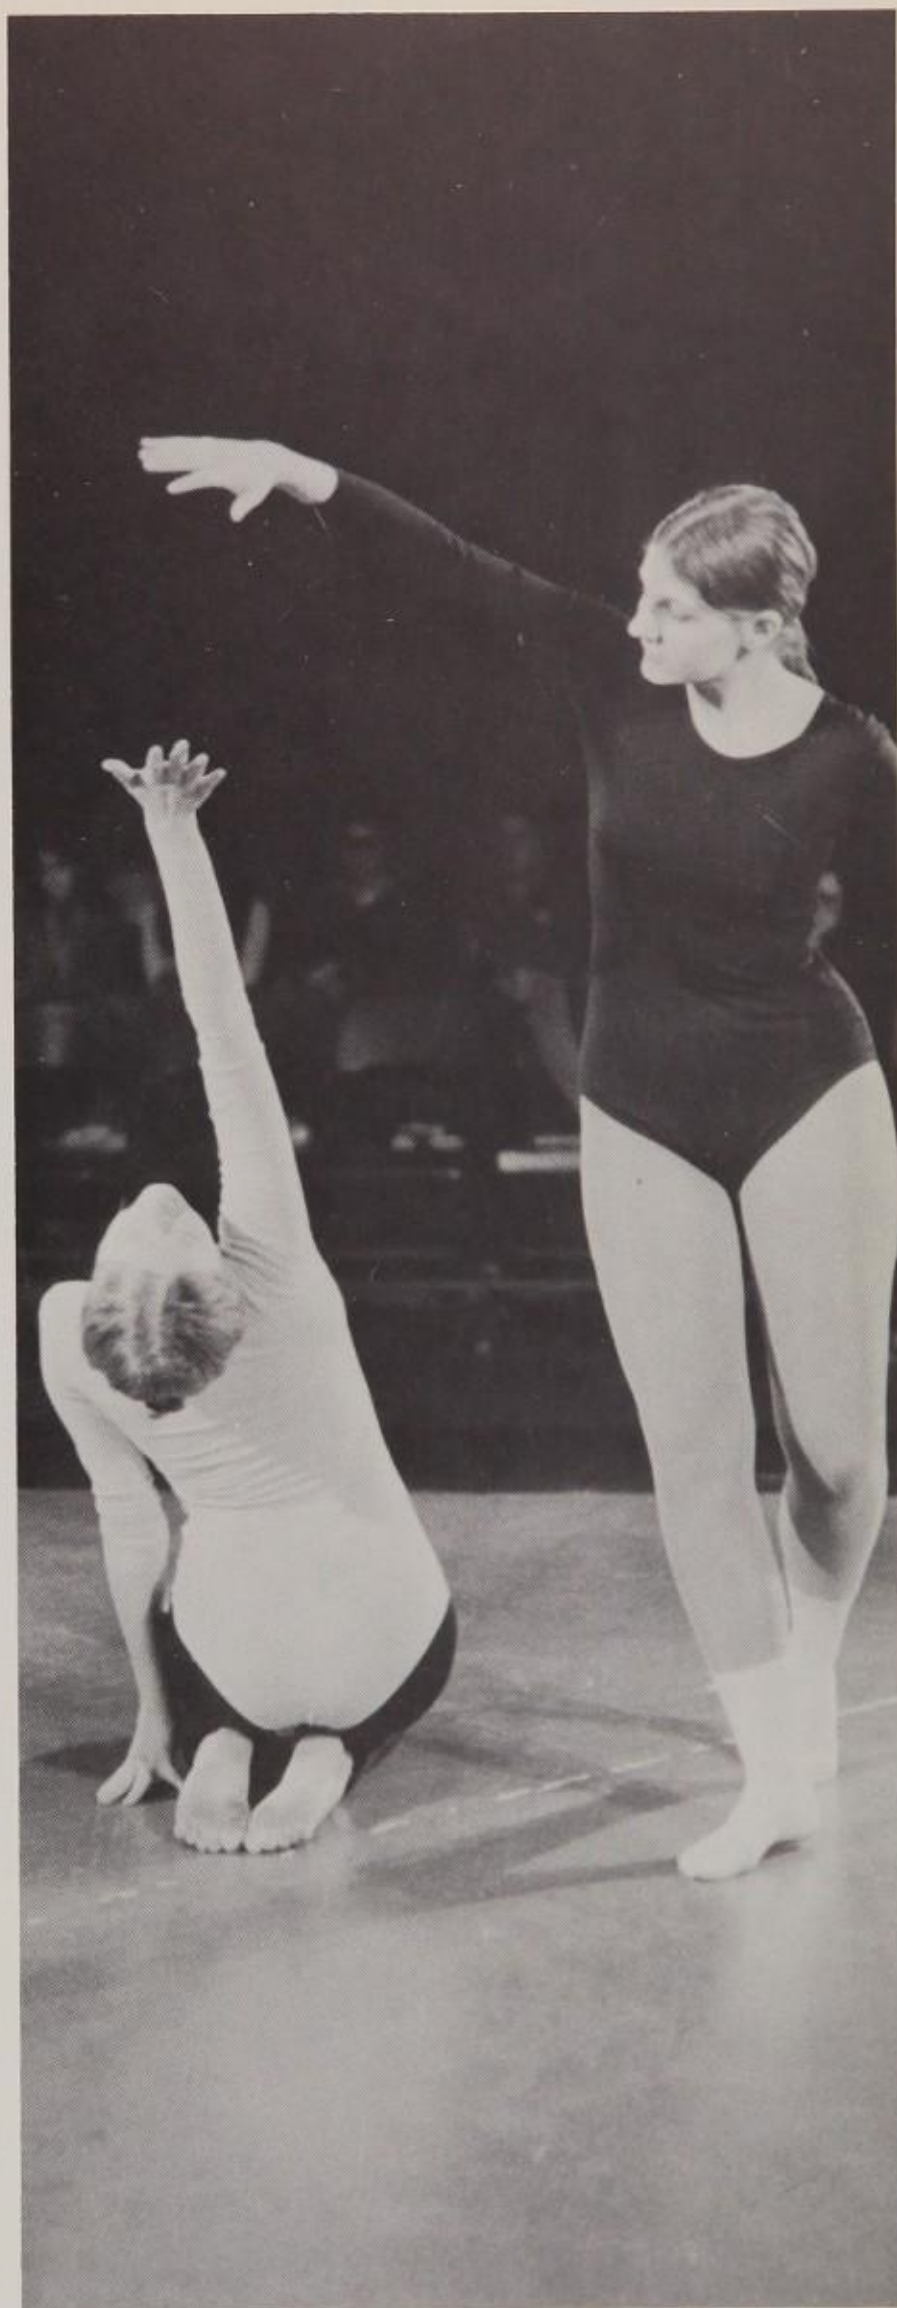

Things people do was the theme of this year's Esande Concert in which both Esande members and Dance Honors students participated. Each dance performance, choreographed by the girls themselves, portrayed a certain truth about human nature, and some of them were meant to raise the question, "can men live together peacefully?"

The concert was performed in the round which enabled the audience to identify more easily with the dancers. In addition, the smallness of the group, only six Esande members, lent itself to an intimate atmosphere because the girls found it easier to work with one another.

The music on tape ranged from the South Sound to Bach to Blood, Sweat, and Tears. Mr. Don Owens, in charge of the ETHS Jazz Band, also wrote some African music for the concert. Esande members have presented their program to several grade schools. They have also been invited to a dance concert at the University of Illinois in the summer. The concert was directed by Miss Donna Gordon and Miss Jackie Radis.

Alice Becker and Barbara Vankirk perform a transition between numbers to the music of Blood, Sweat, and Tears.

Dance Honors students Cathy Torchianna and Cathy Chambers perform a duet which they choreographed themselves.

Dr. Roger Charlier warns the audience that man won't die with a roar or a whisper, but with a cough or a gasp.

The audience responds to Dr. Charlier with a standing ovation.

Mr. John Stegman urges students to change mere words to action.

ESBE sponsors pollution day teach-out

Inspired by the Northwestern University teach-out on pollution, Project Survival, Roger Addelson, Steve Croft, and Scott Golinkin decided that a program was needed at ETHS to inform the students of environmental problems since such problems were at most only touched upon in classes. The three chartered a club, Evanston Students for a Better Environment, to put on the program and change mere student interest to action. The faculty members who sponsored the club are Miss Deborah Horwitz and Mr. Robert Lawler.

The ETHS teach-out, Operation Existence, gave the students an opportunity to be educated by professionals in the subject of environmental decay. In the afternoon, students with unscheduled mods could attend films and seminar discussions for further information. Some of the seminar speakers were able to activate students in the fight against pollution by telling them specific actions they could take. Students raised funds for Operation Existence by selling buttons, and contributions were made by several clubs within the school and the Kiwanis Club of Evanston. Nearly 100 students participated in organizing the program.

Students took on the complete responsibility of inviting speakers, publicizing and outlining the program, and raising funds. In addition to the teach-out, the Evanston Students for a Better Environment have purchased Commonwealth Edison stock, which enables them to make their voices heard at Commonwealth Edison's stockholders' meeting.

The tone of the assembly is set by The Lasting Phaze, an anti-pollution folk-singing group.

Mr. Chuck Sigwart, head of Northwestern Students for a Better Environment, and Mr. Ralph Peterson, a faculty member of the Sierra Club, tell students what they can do in the fight against pollution.

Chorus double-casting eliminated in West Side Story

West Side Story, the all-school musical, was presented in the auditorium on April 17, 18, 24, and 25.

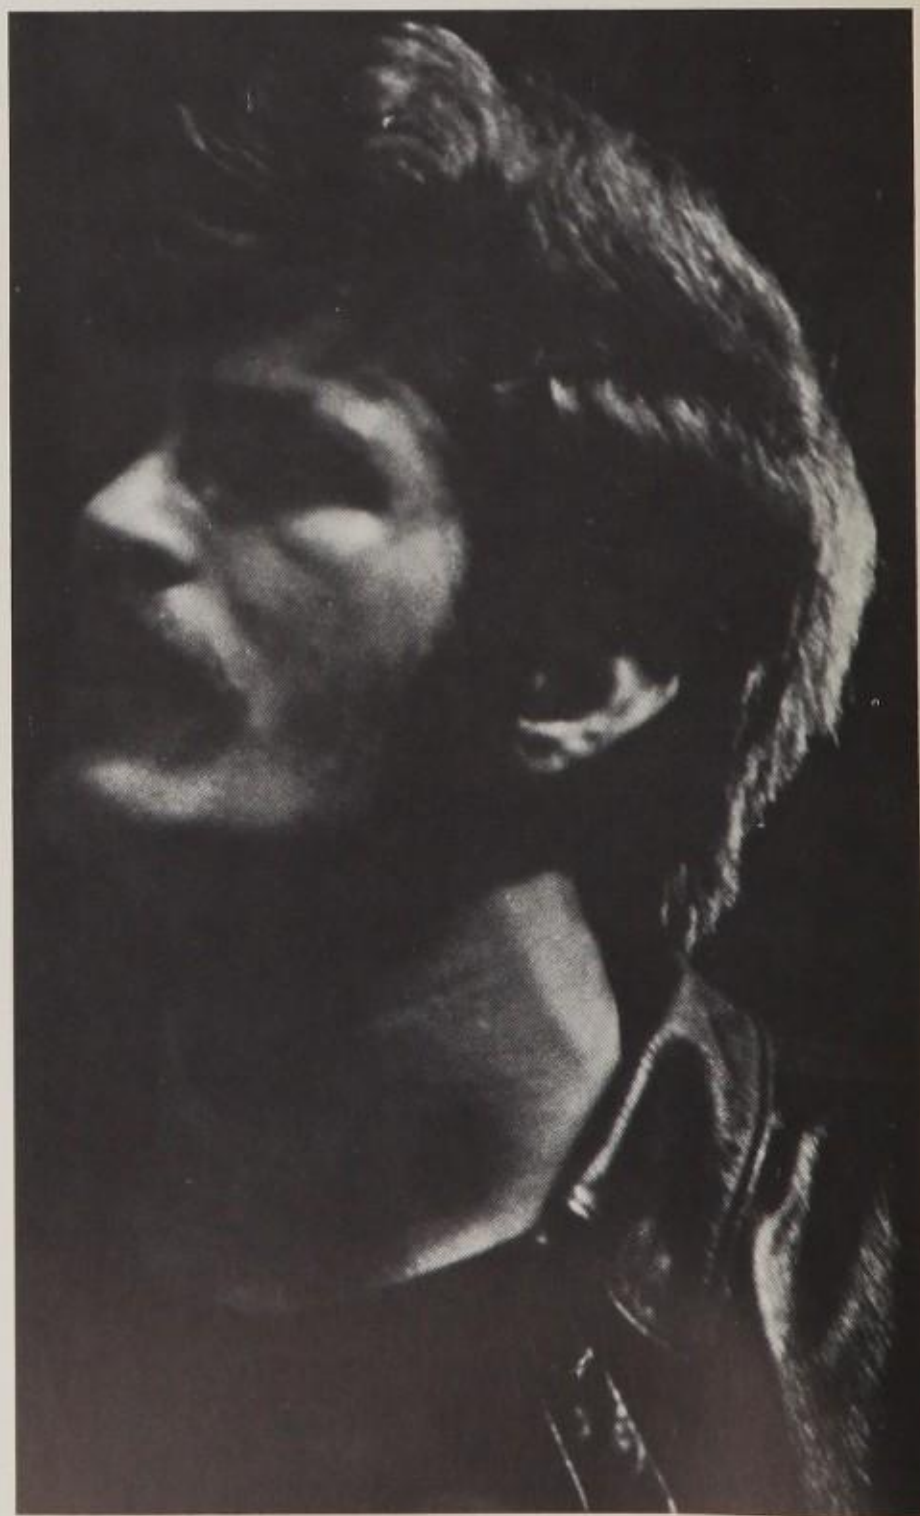

Director Mr. William Ditton single cast the four performances with the exception of the three lead roles. Tom Clewell played Tony, the male lead. The role of Maria was played alternately by Jan Bryant and Belinda Glass, while Katie Walter and Janice Gaffin played the part of Anita.

The play, which was presented once before by ETHS students in the summer of 1964, centered around the tragic love affair of Tony and Maria set against the conflicting Jets and Sharks, street gangs struggling for control of a New York neighborhood. Gene Corbin and Robert Reichstein played the parts of the two gang leaders, Bernardo and Riff, who had to deal with Officer Krupke, played by Jeff Zalay.

There were more dance numbers included in the show than in other recent school musicals. Emmy award winner Gus Giordano choreographed the numbers, which were performed by a 60-member chorus.

Aquettes dunk Illinois Bell's Yellow Pages

The Yellow Pages of the telephone company took a good-natured dunking during the Aquette production, "Your Number Please. . .," presented in the natatorium on May 1 and May 2.

Swimmers dressed as switchboard operators opened the show with "Directory Assistance." Subsequent Aquette numbers were based on a satire of Yellow Pages entries, such as the coed duet, "A Bushel and a Peck Inc." and the "Dripless Rainwear Co." number.

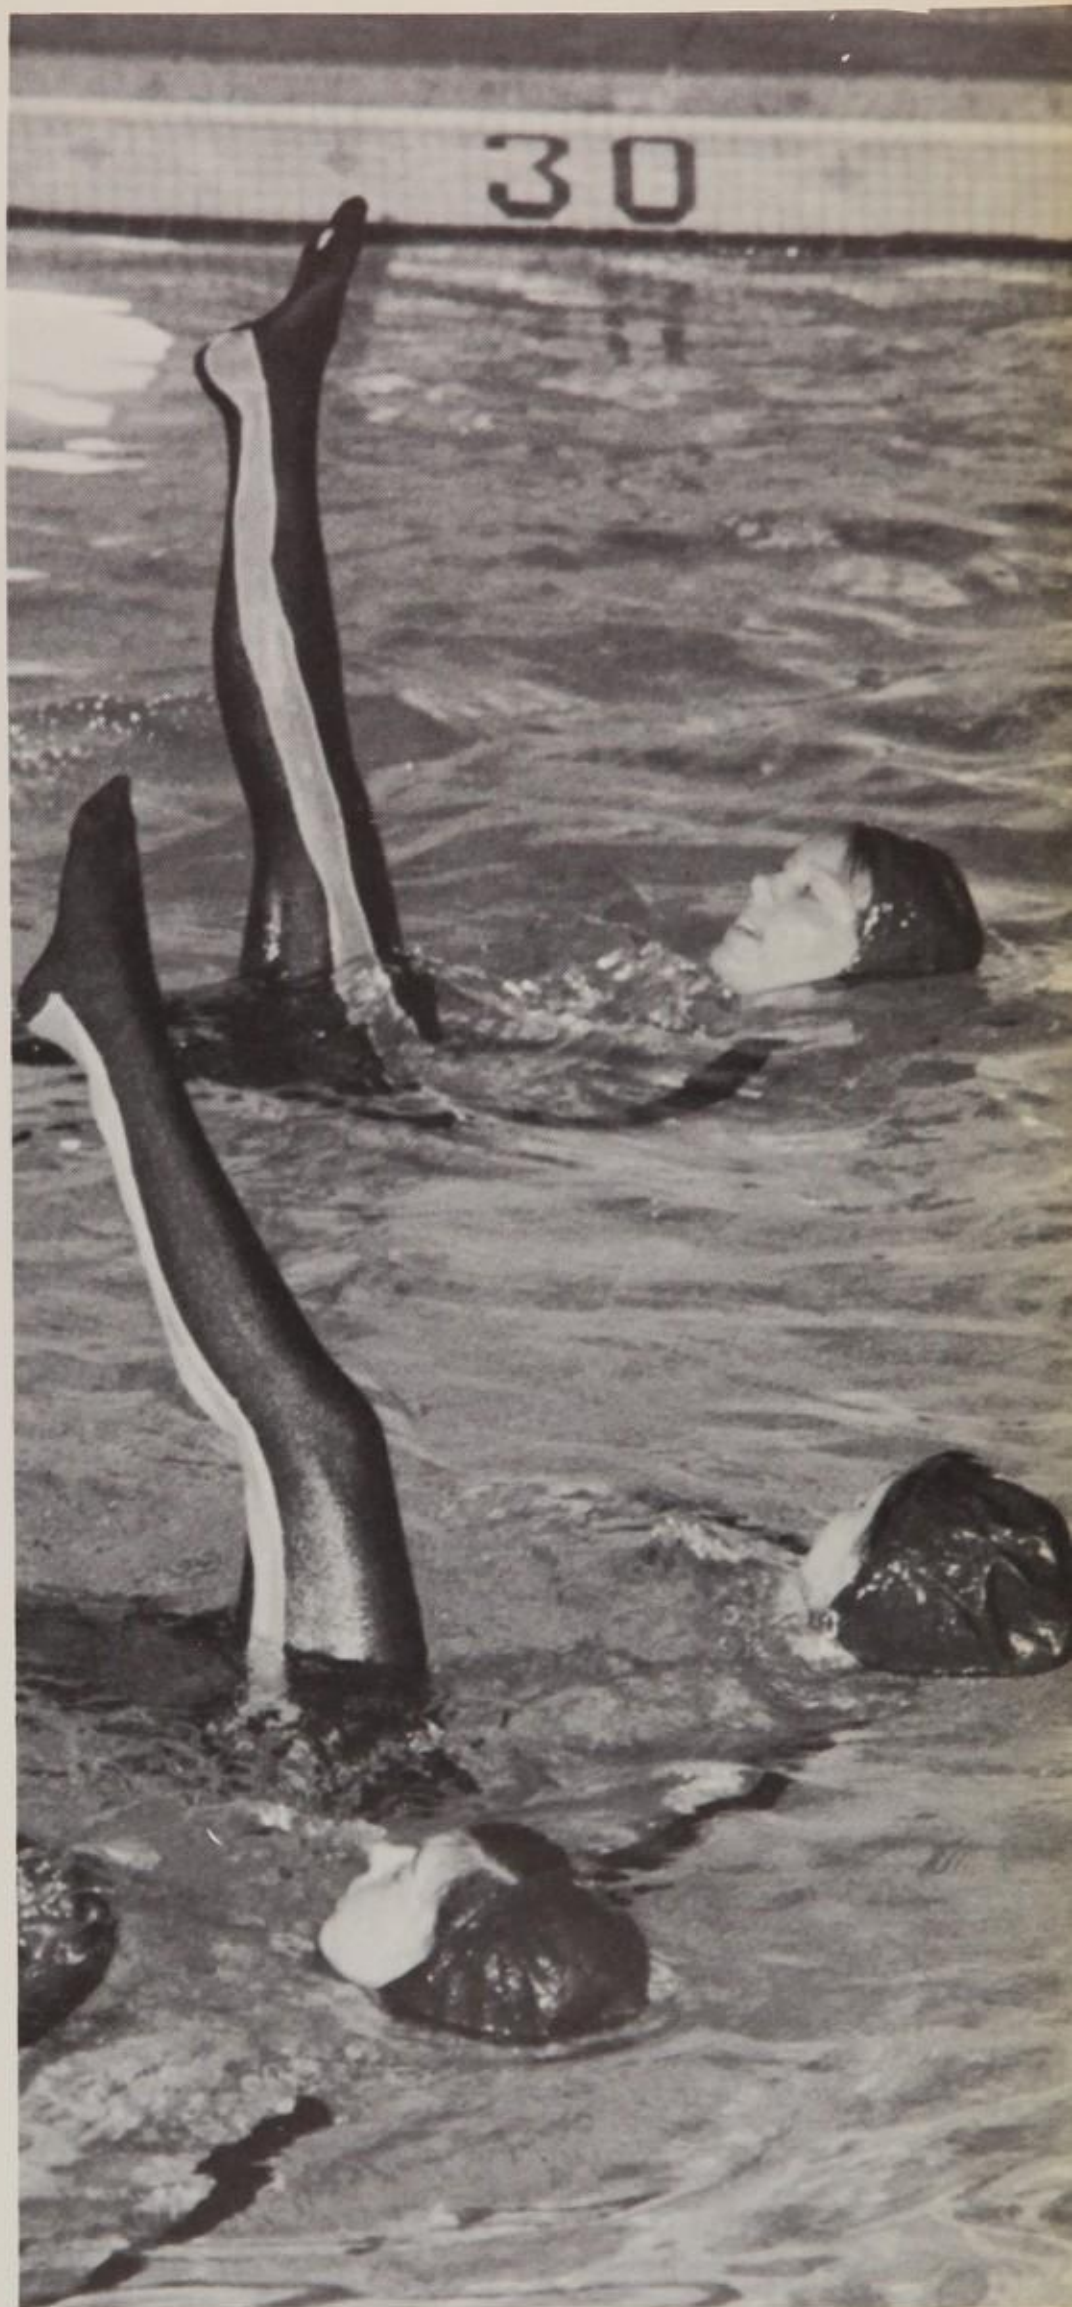

Numbers involving deck work included "Rapid Print Shop," in which four girls coordinated their arm and leg movements with music to look like a printshop, and "The Waist Watchers," in which the girls performed exercises.

Special costumes were used in "O'Shaugnessy's Toy Shop," where swimmers dressed up as toys, while in "Paradise Travel Agency," grass skirts were attached to their swimsuits. The use of props such as helium balloons, black lights, florescent-painted umbrellas, and spray guns also highlighted the show.

Aquette President Nancy Espenshade, Vice President Janney Mayer, Show Manager Ann Cuniff, Secretary Elizabeth Carrow, and Publicity Chairman Jennifer Danielson organized the show in conjunction with faculty sponsors Mrs. Ann Stevens and Miss Ann Pizer. Operation of sound equipment was provided by Audiophonics members David Silver and Gary Goldblatt under Technical Director Mr. William Kaffenberger.

Writers' Showcase combines tragedy, humor

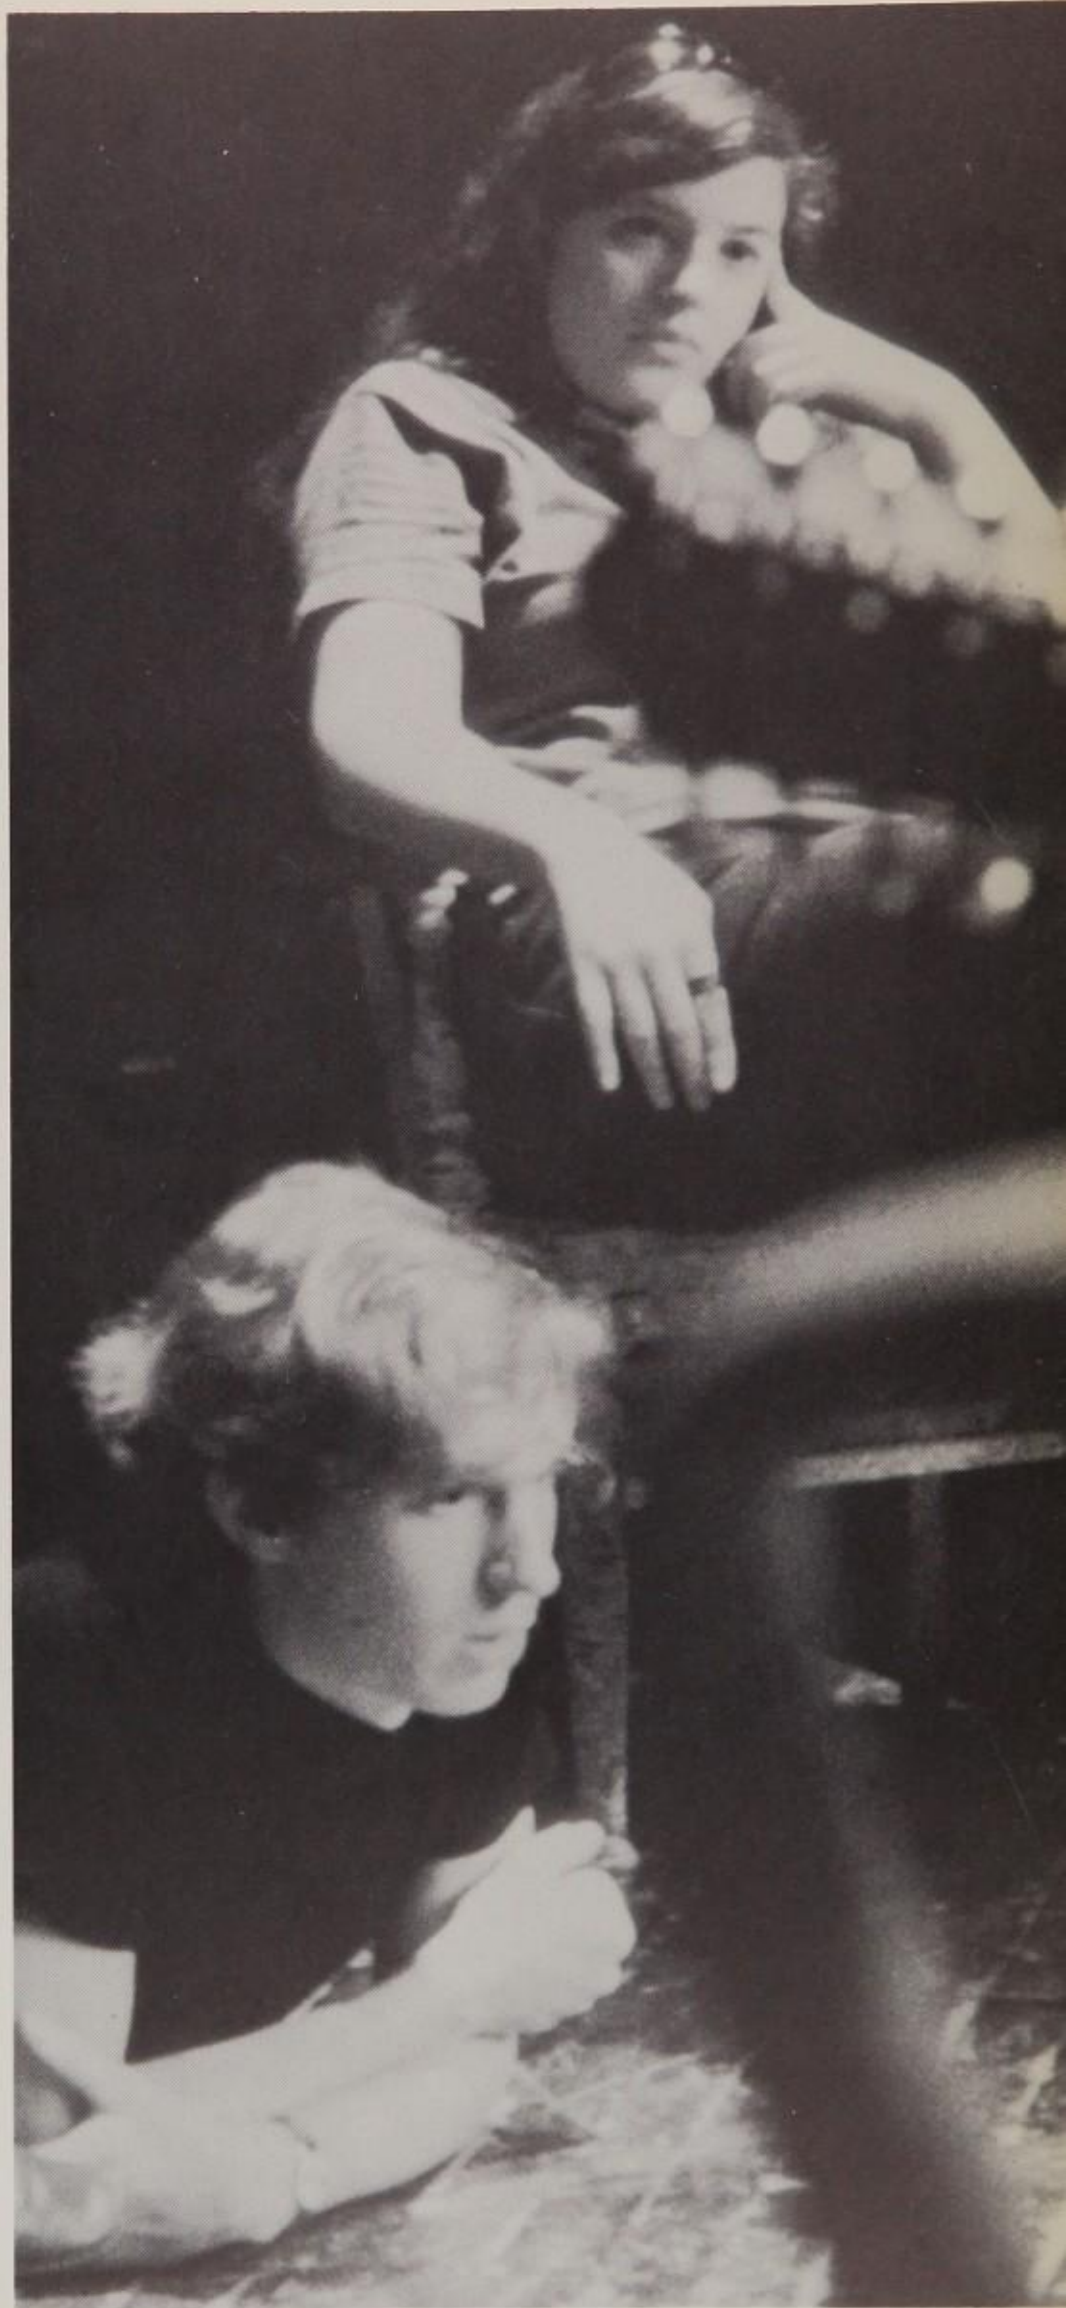

"Voices and Visions" was the theme of this year's production of Writers' Showcase, a collection of student writings and films. Unlike YAMO, which was solely comical, Writers' Showcase combined both the serious and the humorous. The show was organized completely by students under the direction of Mr. Curtis Crotty, Mrs. Bryna Gamson, Mr. Marty Nystrand, and Mrs. Kay Stewart.

The "voices" for the presentation were the student writers of literature, music, and dance. Not all the student writings submitted for the show were used; the only ones presented were those chosen by the faculty sponsors. Michael Bard was the musical conductor. The live presentation of musical compositions and sound effects by students during the show was a change from the usual tapes and records.

The "visions" were created by nine student actors, choreographers, and stage assistants who performed their interpretations of the student writings. The show was choreographed by Colette Dick, Thais Gram, and Cassy Torchiana. In charge of lights were Greg Levin and Bill Connery who made the films and slides pass from in-focus to out-of-focus for a different light technique.

All-school play includes first faculty actor

Antagonized by Whiteside, Joanna Mackin as Miss Preen informs him that she will seek employment at a munitions factory where she hopes to destroy the human race.

Much pre-performance publicity surrounded the controversy caused by the casting of Mr. William Ditton in the lead role of the all-school play, The Man Who Came to Dinner. This was the first time that a faculty member assumed a performing part in student production. Mr. Bruce Siewerth directed the 30-member cast and 40-member technical crew in the production of the play, which was presented in the auditorium on May 22 and 23.

Based on the life of Sheridan Whiteside, a Broadway critic notorious for his biting reviews, the play centered around the problems faced by this critic when he found himself stranded by injury in a small town, forcing him to accept the hospitality of the Stanleys, played by Bill Rubin and Susan Monasch. Romantic interest was added to the plot by Lucy Childs, who played the critic's secretary, and Scott Givot, who played her boyfriend.

Interest in the play was promoted by the publicizing of a "nude scene," which, in reality, was simply a scene in the play in which a portrait of a nude was a part of the scenery.

Reporter Burt Jefferson, Scott Givot, asks Sheridan Whiteside, Mr. William Ditton, for an interview.

Penny Summers as Lorraine Sheldon complains to Whiteside that she has nothing to give him for Christmas.

Maggie Cutler, Lucy Childs, tells Whiteside that she is resigning as his secretary to marry Burt Jefferson.

Michael Mitchell, portraying the Groucho Marx-like Banjo, picks up Miss Preen upon entering the Stanley home.

This year's speech arts activities culminated with the Festival of the Performing Arts held May 25, 26, and 27.

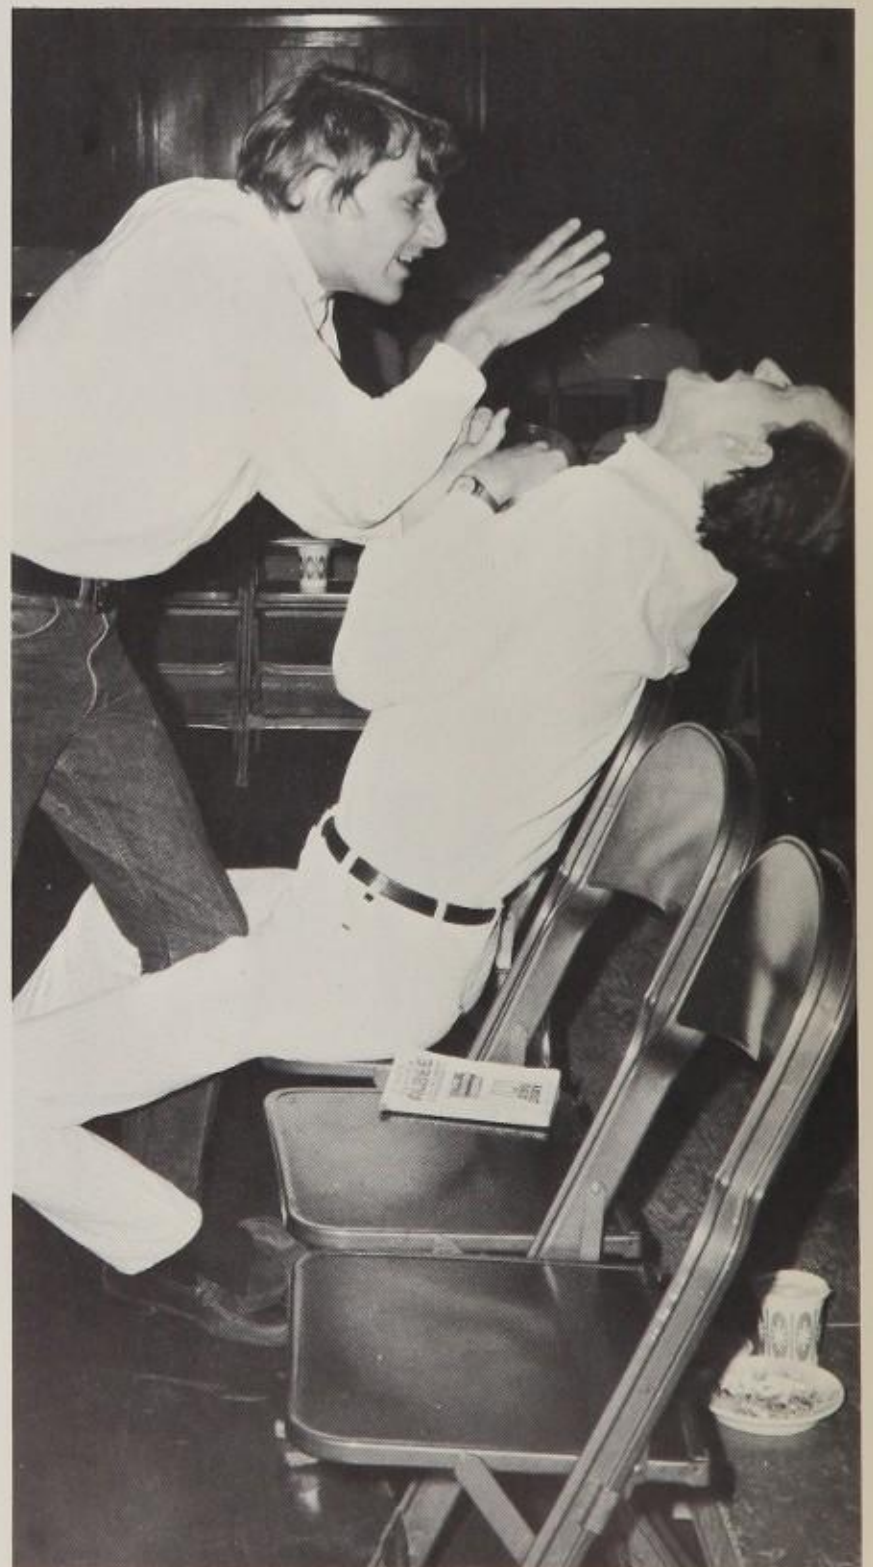

The four drama clubs presented plays and play excerpts in Social Hall on an arena-style stage.

Beardsley Drama Club performed in an improvised play, Reflections: Beginnings and Endings, on May 25, followed by Edward Albee's The Zoo Story, presented by Mr. Bruce Siewerth and Mr. Steve Narland.

Michael Theatre Company presented It Should Happen to a Dog, a one-act play by Wolf Mankowitz, on May 26. On excerpt from Mrs. McThing by Mary Chase was then performed by the Bacon Repertory Company.

The final segment of the festival contained an excerpt from Arthur Miller's The Crucible, directed by Mr. Bruce K. Siewerth and performed by the Boltwood Repertory Company on March 27.

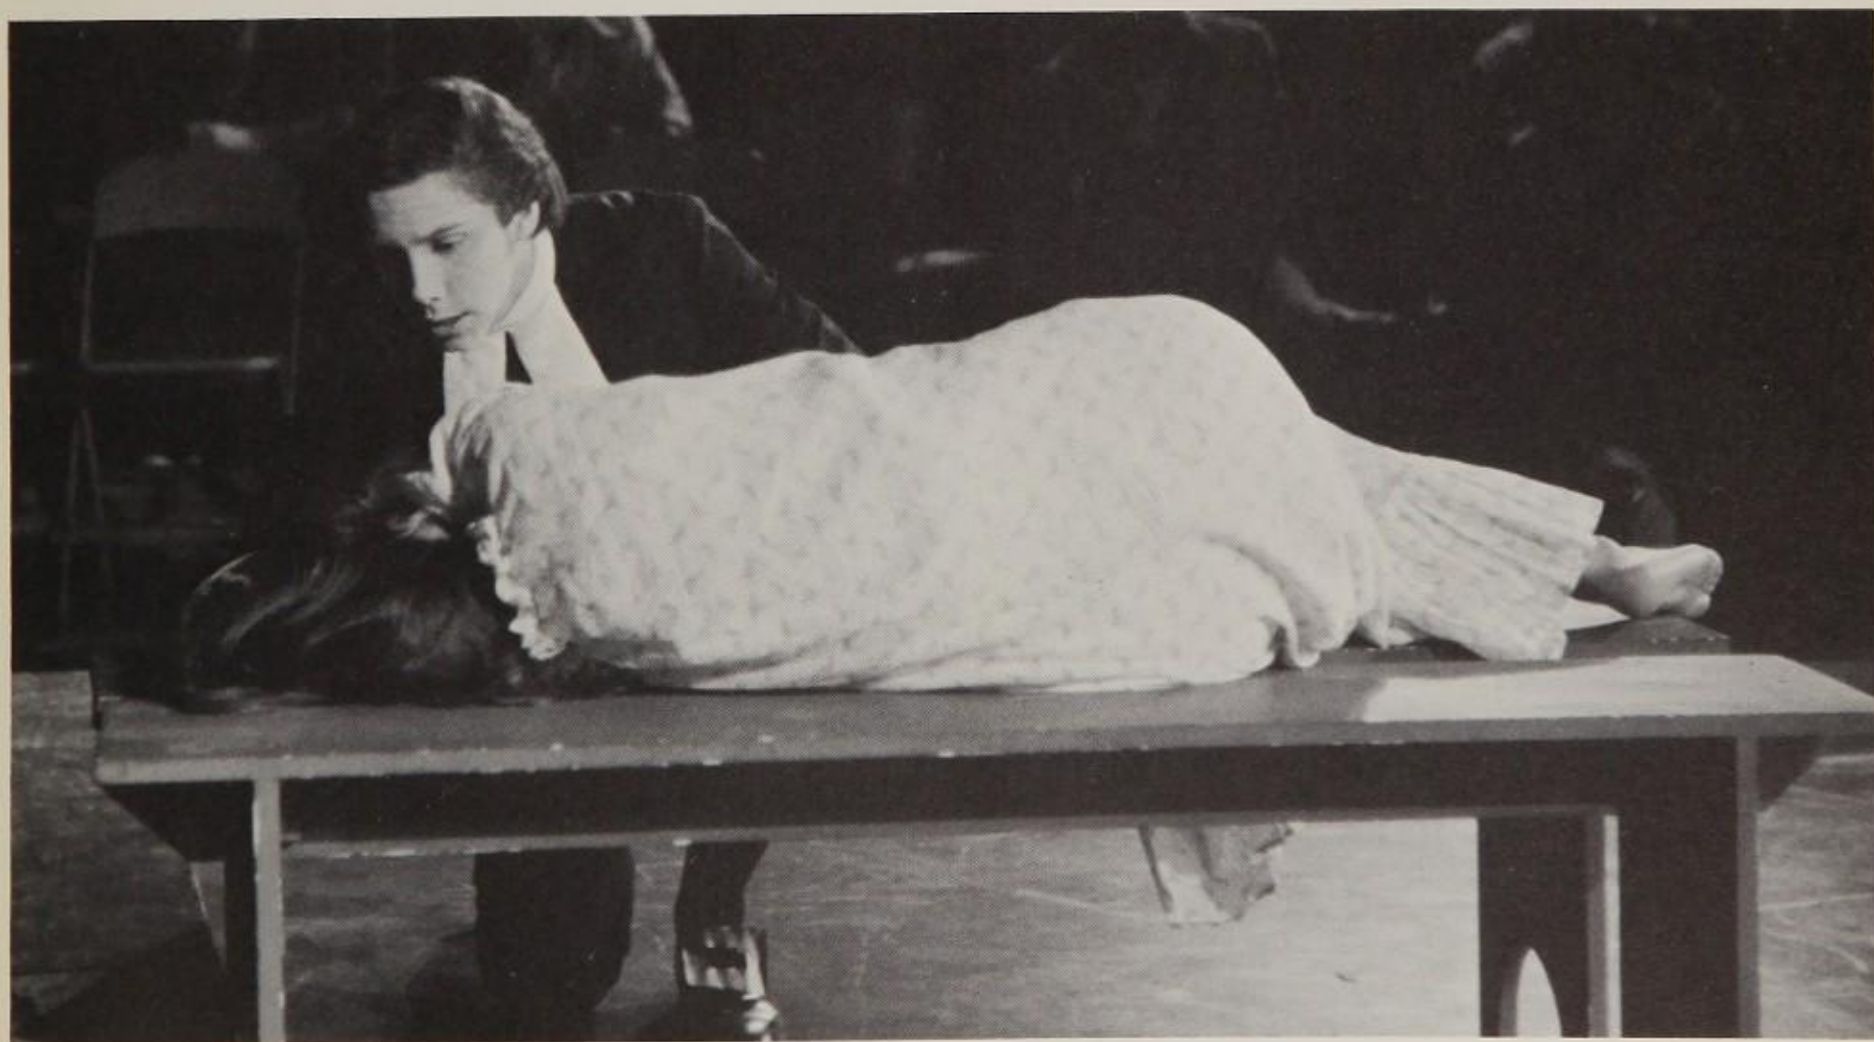

Following each night's performances, the audience was invited to participate in an oral critique of the plays and their presentation.

Music Festival lively combination of styles

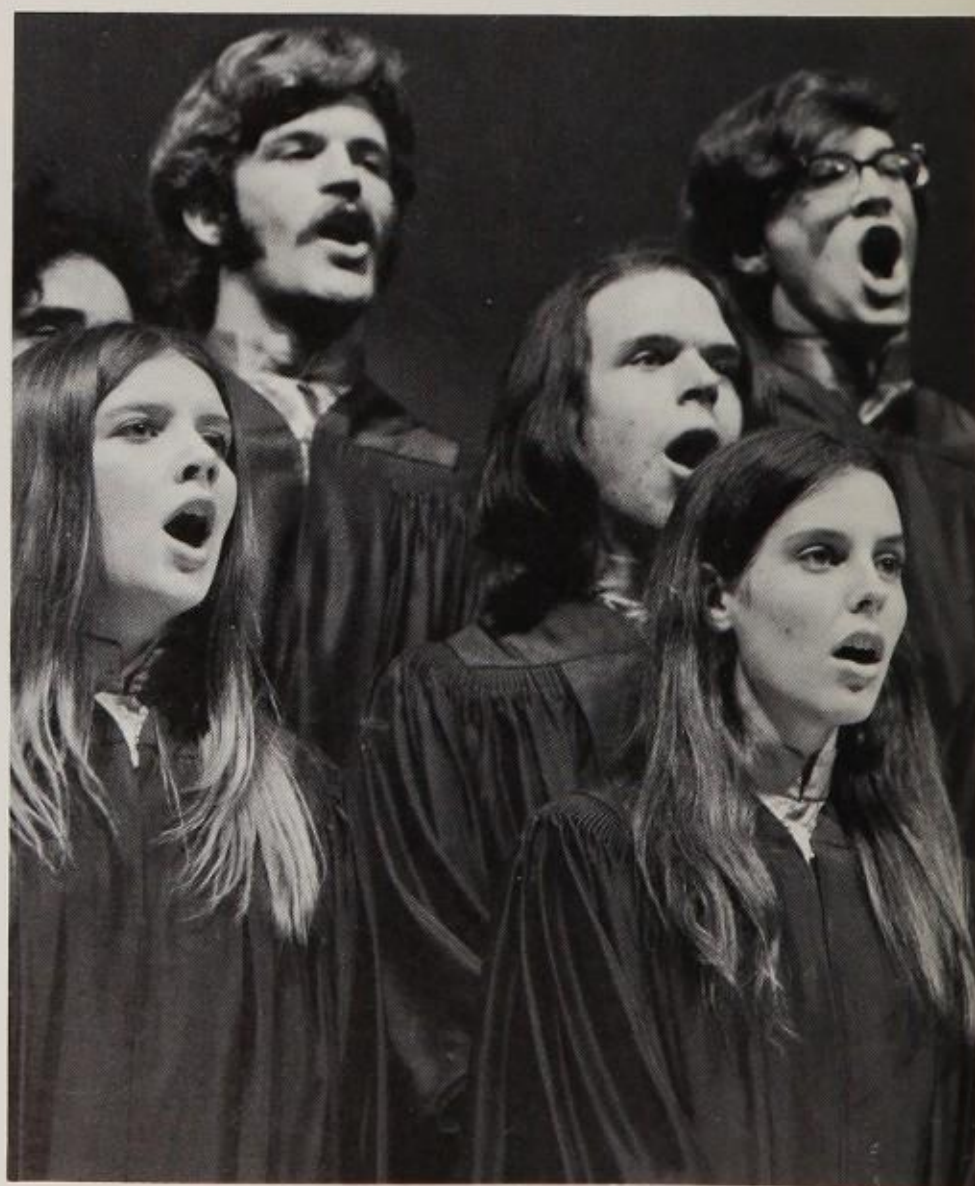

At the Spring Music Festival Senior Soloist Margery Ellis performs Suite Hebraique by Ernest Bloch on the viola.

Over 500 vocalists and 250 instrumentalists participated in the 38th annual Spring Music Festival held on May 28 and 29 in the auditorium.

On May 28, Concert Band opened the show with the overture from "La Forza Del Destino," by Giuseppe Verdi. The Freshman Glee Club followed with a medley of "Mistress Mine," "Take Those Lips Away," and "Sigh No More, Ladies," accompanied by instrumentalists Barbara Van Ness, Judy Kleppel, Caryn Stern, David Woodman, and Gary Zola. "Pieces For String Quartet," an original composition by Beardsley sophomore John Barkauskas, was played by Kerry McCarthy, Emily Wingate, Margery Ellis, and Wendy Gellerstad. Soprano Jean Bystrom gave a solo performance of two songs, one of which was arranged by Mr. Avon Gillespie. The show concluded with Spirit of Soul singing the spiritual "Come and Go With Me."

Senior Soloist Jeffrey Pietrangelo, together with Concert Orchestra, opened the May 29 performance with Johann Hummel's "Trumpet Concerto." Girls Choir then performed two pieces, accompanied by Ann Christensen and David Woodman on horns and Mrs. Betty Jacobson on piano. Senior Solist Margery Ellis played the viola with Concert Orchestra for Ernst Bloch's "Suite Hebraique." Special Audio equipment was used by Boltwood Chorale for their performance. Bacon Chorale sang "Improvisation," which was written in accompaniment to the film "Against the Myriad Wall," filmed and produced by Corcell Bishop. An original composition by Bacon senior Noah Hoffman entitled "Train," and a medley of songs from George Gershwin's Porgy and Bess were sung by ETHS Choir. Jazz Band brought the Music Festival to an end with its renditions of "Straight-No Chaser," composed by Mr. Bruce Scafe of the Media Center, and "Beatle Suite," a medley of Beatle songs arranged by Jazz Band conductor Mr. Don Owens.

Members of the ETHS Senior Choir sing a selection from Porgy and Bess.

Mastersingers Philip Kazanjian, Dave Rosewall, Bill Welter, Michael Hollingsworth, and Paul Seifert sing an early American hymn.

Spirit of Soul members sing "Give Me Freedom" at the Music Festival.

Gary Zola of the ETHS Woodwind Quartet accompanies the Freshman Glee Club.

Michael, Beardsley serve through entertainment

During the Beardsley Junior car wash, Donna Walters pauses to have some fun at the expense of Andy LeReau.

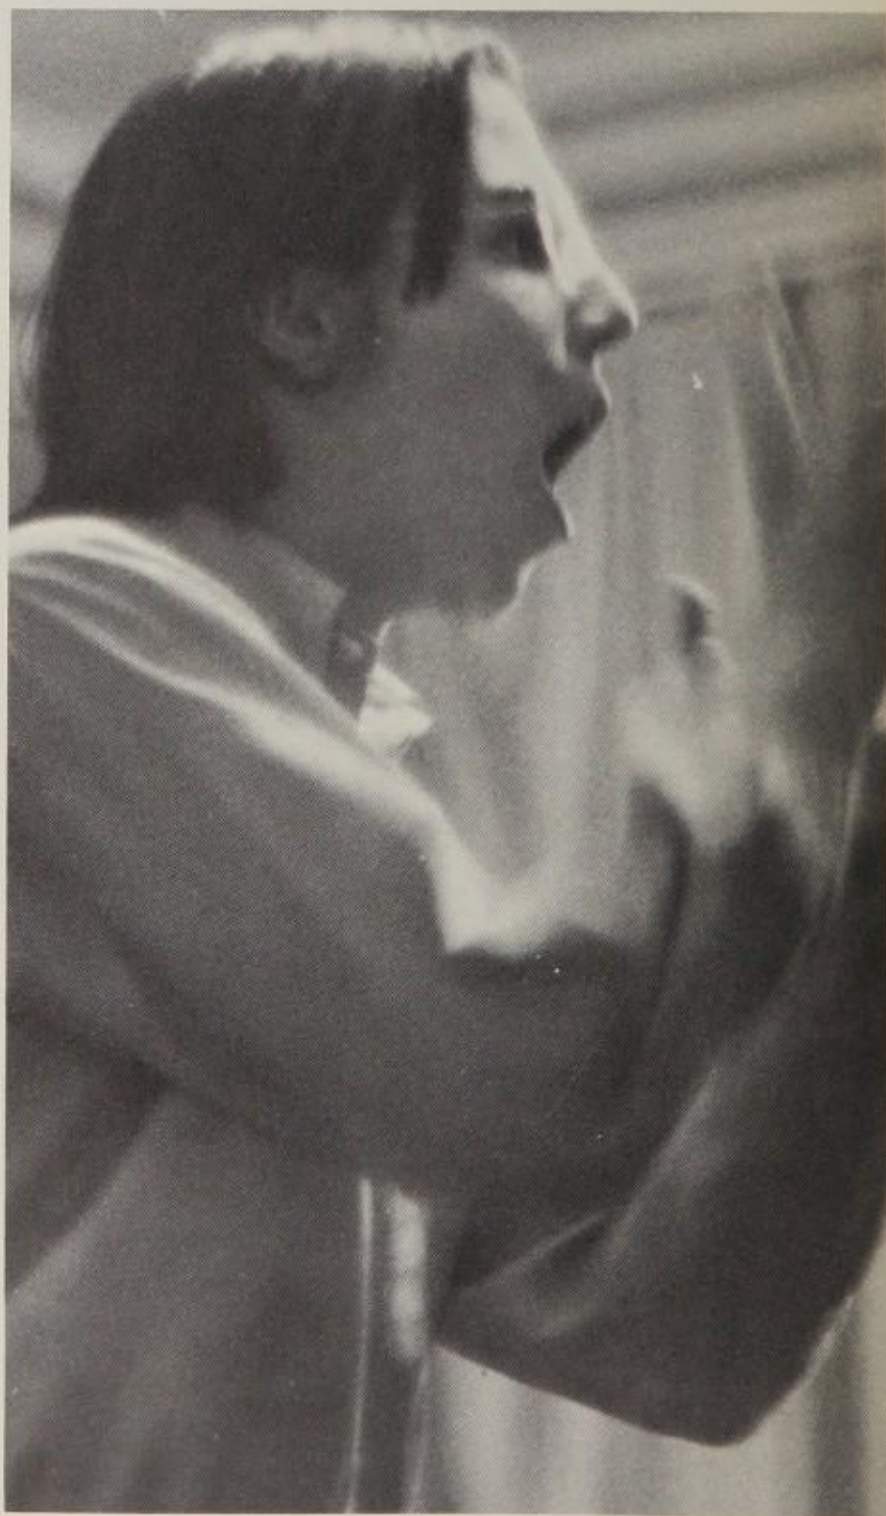

Michael and Beardsley activities were a combination of service and entertainment this year.

Michael School sponsored a student-faculty basketball in which the teachers defeated the students. The game, played during the day, was attended by students having unscheduled time.

A bake sale was sponsored by the Beardsley School Girls' Club and Quadrangle to raise money for Operation Existence, the pollution teach-out in April. The sale raised thirty dollars which was given to the Evanston Students for a Better Environment.

A Beardsley School dance sponsored by the Senior class was given in September. The dance, held in Boltwood Court, was the first for one of the new school courts. Early in the fall, the Beardsley Junior class had a car wash in which students volunteered both their energy and equipment.

Combined Studies Family Night included the talents of all four schools. After a dessert in Bacon Cafeteria, the audience moved to the Social Hall where they were entertained with a student program, consisting of dance numbers, hard rock performances, and comedy skits.

Tony Adler sings his original composition "The New Order of America" at CS Family Night.

Belinda Wunsch, Kathy Blace, and Stuart Greene listen to the band at the Beardsley Senior Class dance in the West Court.

Rhonda Abrams, Jim Weiss, and Annie Daniel sell baked goods at the North bake sale.

Mr. Roger Bechtold scores two points to lead the faculty to an overwhelming victory against the students.

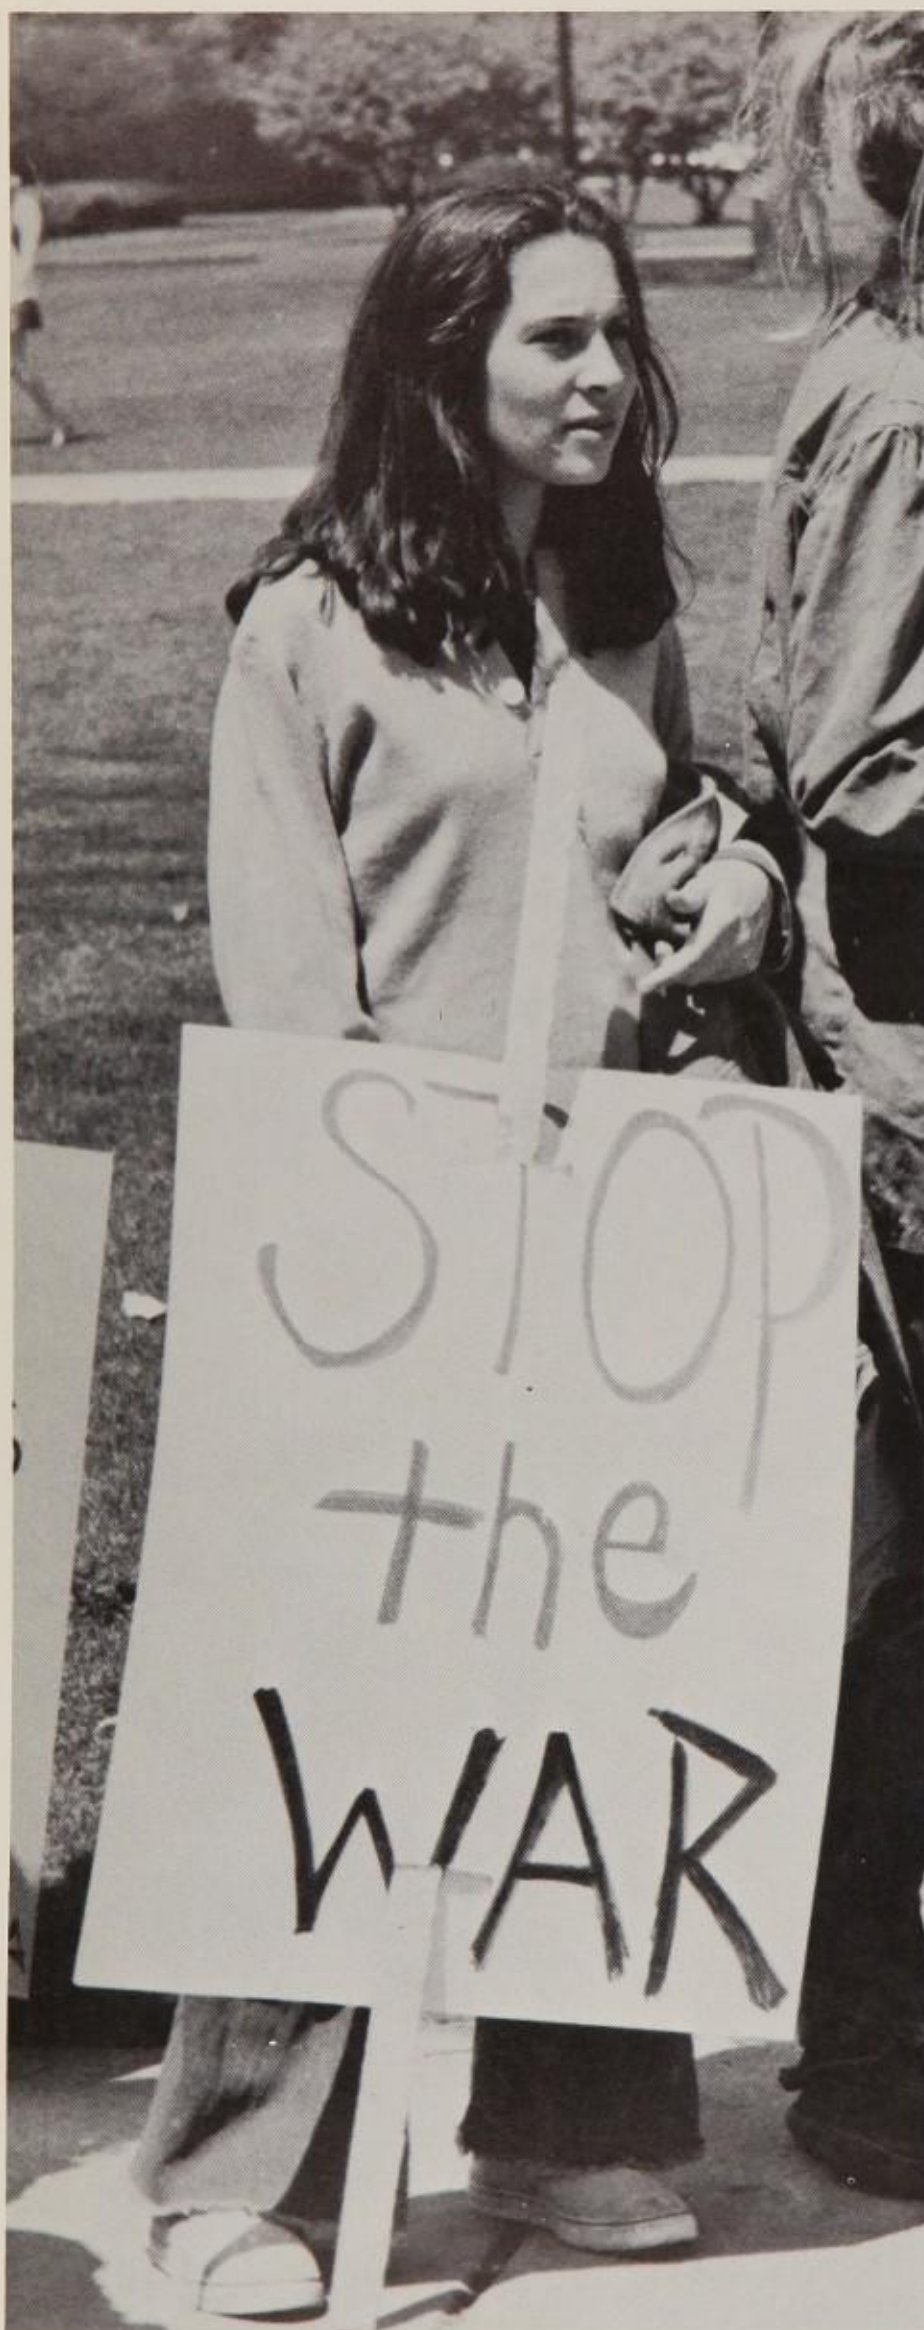

Students walk out over the war in Indo-China

On May 7, about 800 students participated in a walk-out to protest the killing of four Kent State students and the decision of President Nixon to extend US forces into Cambodia. The walk-out was the result of a strike vote at an assembly held in the auditorium the same day to allow students to express their views on the student killings and Indochinese War. The walkers joined Northwestern strikers to organize a campaign to write letters of protest and to obtain signatures calling for a change in the US Southeast Asian policy.

A Walk for Humanity on May 16 was sponsored by the Evanston Ecumenical Action Team to give ETHS students an opportunity to demonstrate their concern for the needy. Specifically, the purpose of the walk was to raise money for Operation Breadbasket in order that they can continue to feed the hungry in Chicago, Save the Children Foundation, Inc., which assists the poor in Appalachia, and Project Concern, which needs funds to build a medical clinic among the Navajo Indians of New Mexico. About 450 walkers raised money by having sponsors agree to pay them a certain amount for each mile that they walked.

South seniors sponsored the Senior Picnic on May 24 which all seniors could attend. The purpose of the picnic was to enable the seniors to have a final get-together before their graduation. The students paid $1.50 each for dinner included hamburgers, potato chips, and ice-cream. Entertainment included egg-tossing, volleyball, tug-of-war, and softball.

West Girls' Club followed annual ETHS custom by presenting the Mother-Daughter Tea on May 16. The tea was student directed by Carol Kravitz and sponsored by West counselor Miss Alt. Clothes from the Peddlers Boutique were modeled by Boltwood school girls.

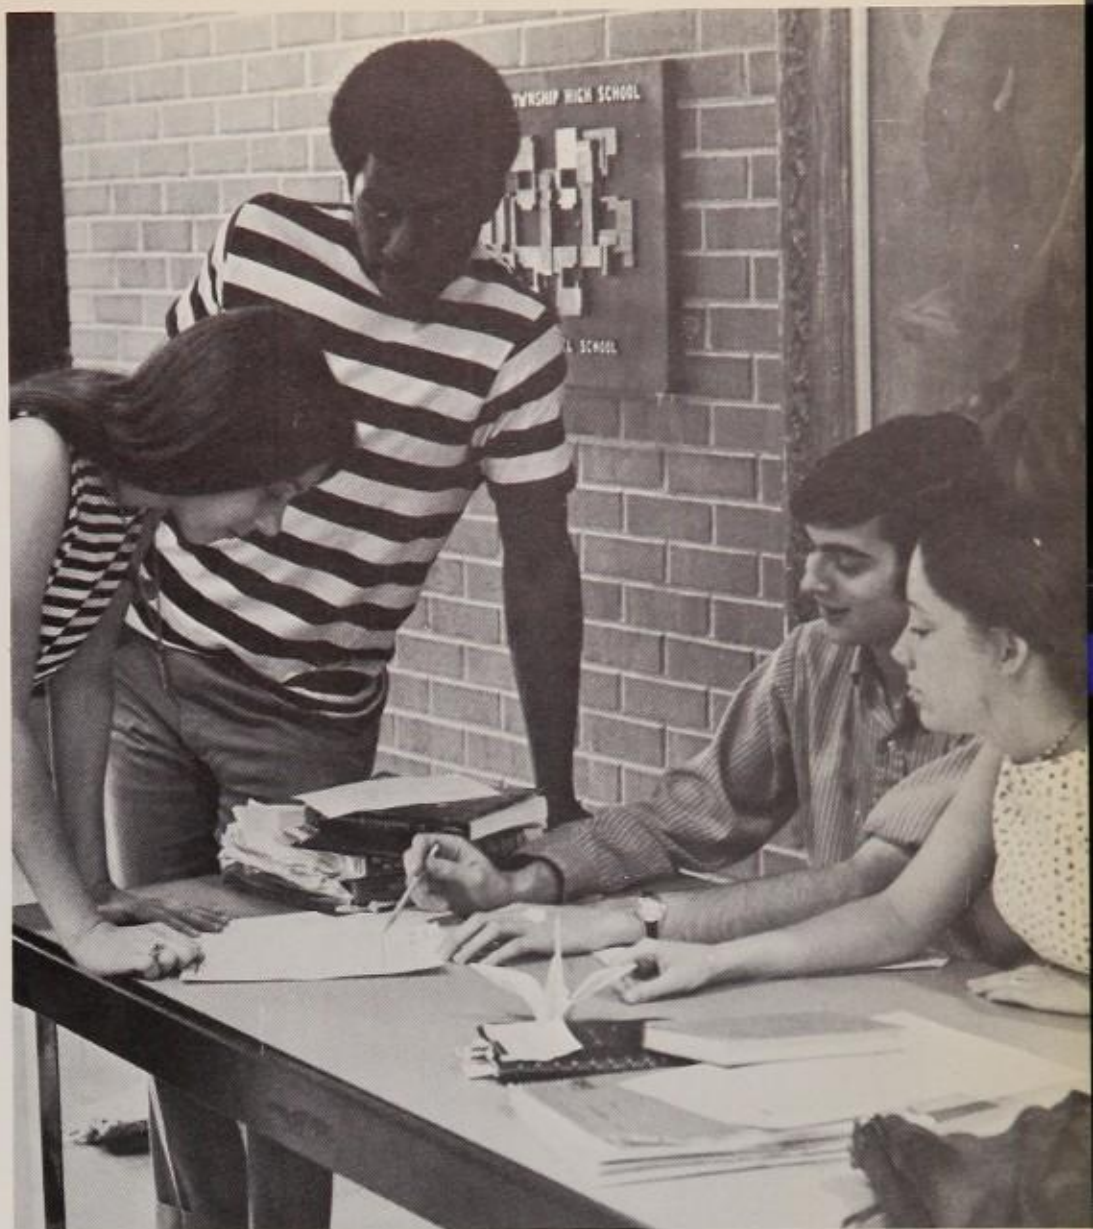

Sue Nowar awaits the start of the march to protest the war in Vietnam.

Diane Meyer's modeling entertains the guests at the Mother-Daughter Tea.

A volley is completed by Karen Gabler at the Senior Picnic.

Linda Provus is signed up for the Walk for Humanity by Steve Miller and Cathy Haas as Lawrence Johnson waits his turn.

Procedures are laid by Barry Kellman before the start of the march to Northwestern.

All-school activities focus on national affairs

David Keneipp studies some electronic musical equipment at the Hi-Fi Stereo Show in the auditorium.

Student involvement in politics and the referendum dominated ETHS activities this year.

A student campaign to pass the April 11 referendum for additional school funds was organized by Senior Steve Danzig. An office was set up in Michael school where students could paint posters and make buttons. Students canvassed the entire Evanston and Skokie communities.

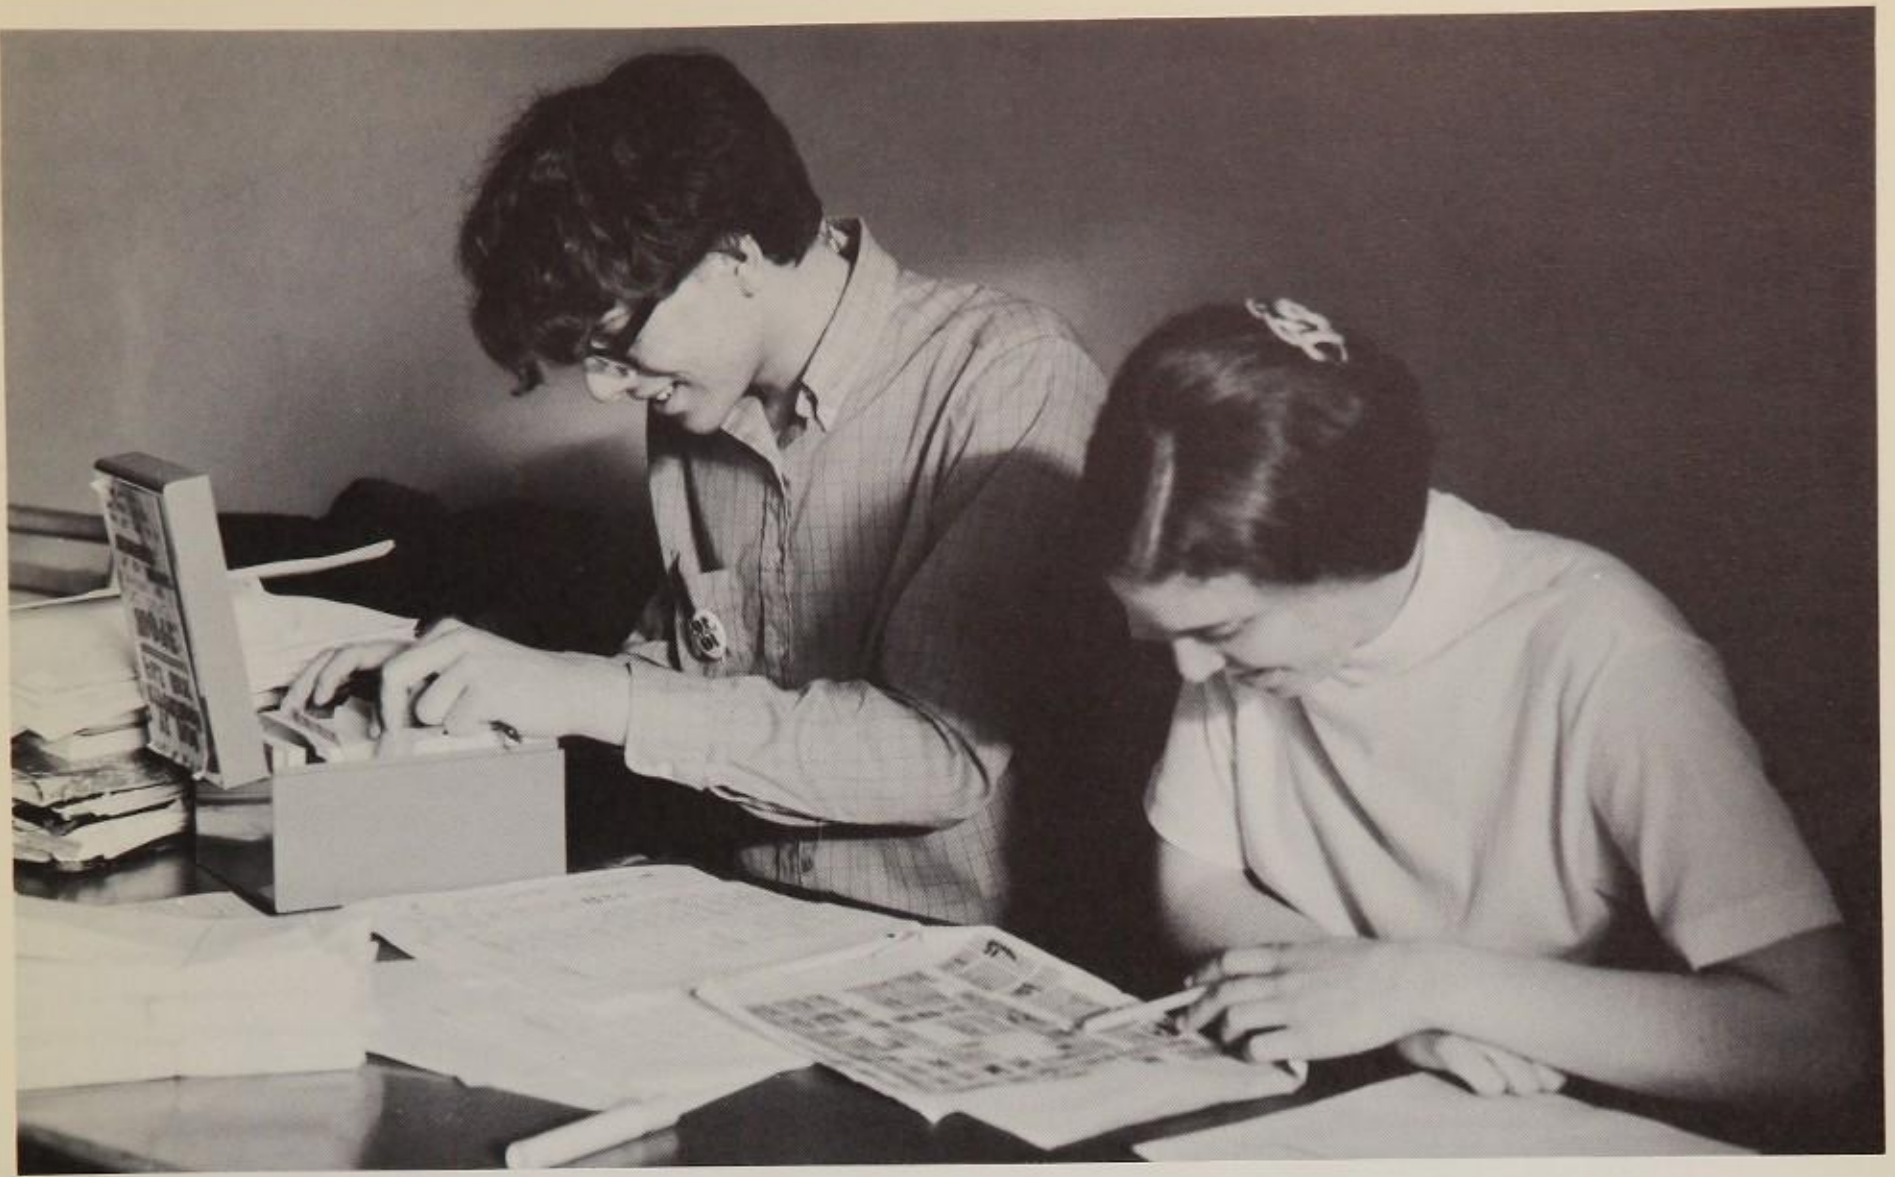

During May, an extensive study of Viet Nam was sponsored by the CS and US History departments in which speakers were invited to participate in lectures and discussion series. On October 15, ETHS staged a moratorium in protest against the war in Viet Nam. Any student with unscheduled time could attend the discussions.

An oral interpretation showcase was held in the planetarium during November in which poetry was coordinated with music to describe the vastness of the universe in contrast to the diminutive size of the Earth.

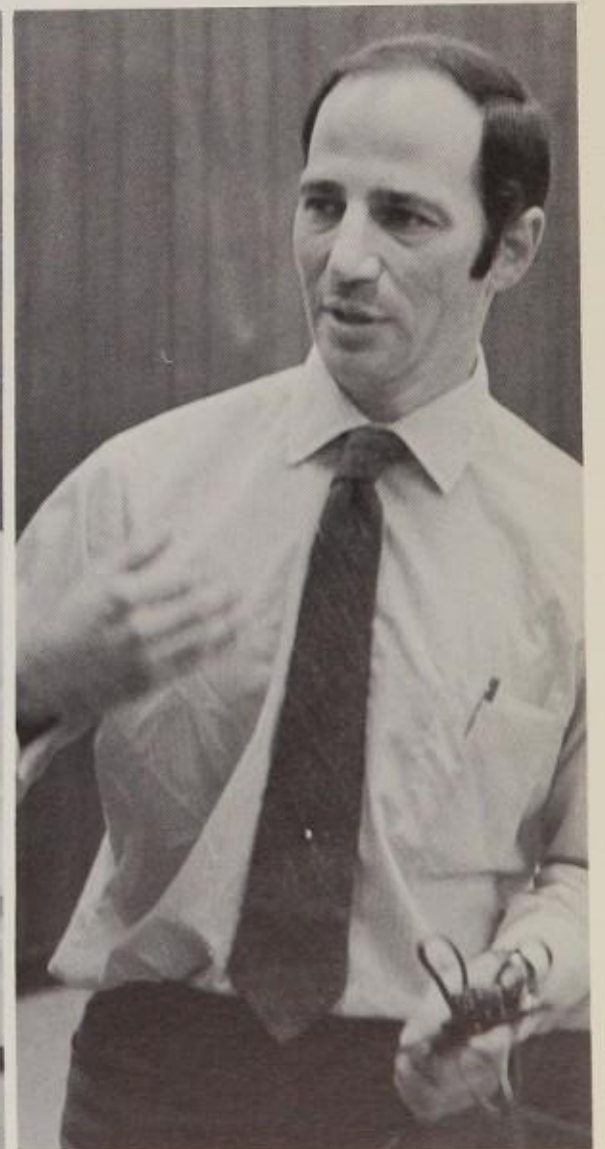

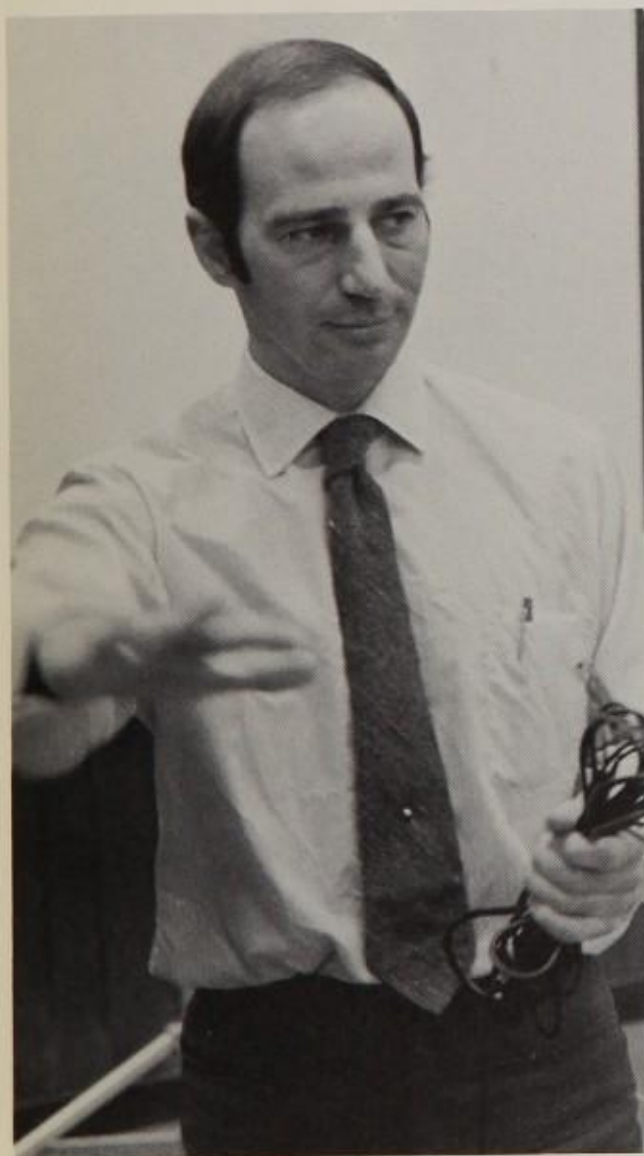

The Hi-Fi and Stereo Show was held April 3, 4, and 5, where manufacturers of stereo equipment displayed their newest products. Students acted as guides for the show and sold tickets to raise money for WEVN, the ETHS FM station which will be staffed by members of Audiophonics.

Oral Interpretation students illustrate the eternity of the universe in their poetry production.

Block Chairmen Andy Glassner and Ed Tanzman assign students areas to be canvassed for the referendum.

Pioneer Press Editor Mr. Don Sider speaks to students about his experiences as a war correspondent in Viet Nam.

Boltwood Government rewrote sections of its constitution dealing with the election of officers. Representatives favored the student activities office as a more suitable place for the elections to be held as opposed to students voting in their reg rooms. The institution of this change did not meet with expected results and the procedure returned to its original state. Later, a Proposal was made to move elections to January in the hope that a mid-year replacement of officers would provide a greater continuity in the planning of student activities.

Council members raised money to sponsor a foreign student exchange in conjunction with the American Field Service. Student exchanges were also planned with other suburban schools during the fourth quarter which enabled fifteen students to visit other schools for one day.

Dr. Clyde Slocum served as chief judge of the third annual pumpkin-carving contest. Twelve entries competed for prizes based on originality and artistic merit.

In December, Quadrangle arranged to show camp comedy movies to students who were charged a dime, to attend the activity, named appropriately a "Dime-lodeon."

On April 25, Girls' Club staged a carnival in which students could try their skill at games in the many booths set up in the field house.

Beardsley Council increases senior privileges

Mr. Robert Lawler and a member of the Evanston Students for a Better Environment listen to a featured speaker at the Pollution Day Assembly.

Greater freedom for seniors was the main issue concerning the Beardsley School Council. For the first time in the history of the school seniors were not compelled to take final examinations. Instead the year-end grade was determined by the decision of the individual teacher.

Council attempted to create a Central Council similar to the one that had been in operation until last year. Council President John Hull felt that the problems of the year involved all four schools in combination, rather than in the continuation of the separate council system, which he felt was not effective in carrying out the purposes it had set.

Beardsley seniors made an abortive attempt to abolish the morning registration period. Seniors felt that the ten minute period was unnecessary and that senior duties could be carried out without attendance in reg.

Senior Prom was subsidized by funds from the coke machine in the senior lounge and by the class treasury. Beardsley Senior class had proposed the selling of Christmas trees as an additional fund raising project, but the idea was rejected by the administration on the grounds that the action showed religious preference.

Council decided to reduce the debris in the cafeteria by dividing the room into three sections where each class was assigned the maintenance of one area. Although not restricted to sitting in the assigned areas, students were obligated to keep their designated sections clean.

Bacon Council strives for greater student power

Virginia May, Karen Gabler, and President Jim Kinzer listen to ideas concerning an upcoming Bacon School Student Council fund raising project.

Bacon Student Council aimed this year to give students a greater voice in school and community affairs. Its chief objective concerned the proposition that seniors be given the option of taking exams second semester. Representatives organized to distribute petitions to students to show their support of this policy, which was later rejected by the administration.

Bacon Student Government, headed by President Jim Kinzer and Vice-President George Rudy, held open meetings once a week in Bacon Student Activities. Elections were held in the spring of 1969, with grade level representatives being chosen by each class.

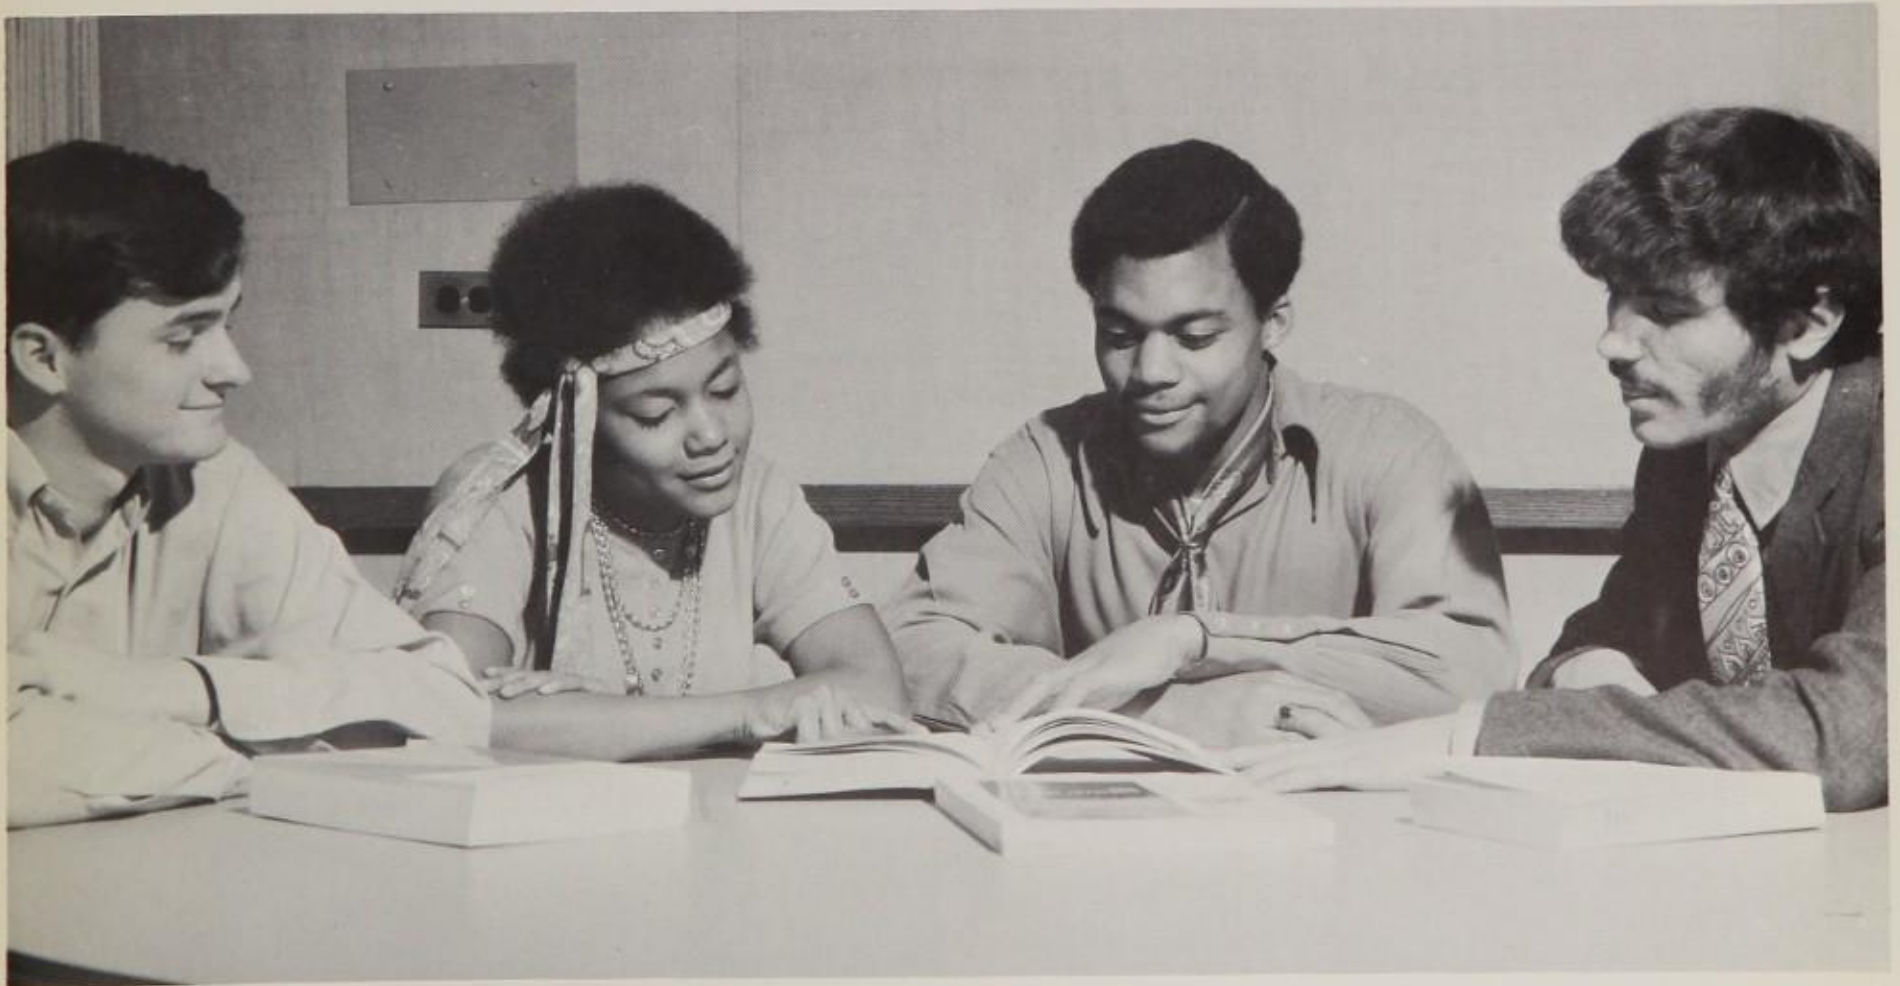

Student smoking in the courts was one of the disputed topics with which the class representatives were concerned. Because of legal complications, action was prohibited.

A pass-fail grading system was considered by the Council as a more equitable system of evaluation. Under the Bacon School plan, a number of art and drama courses would be graded in this manner to stimulate the interest of more students to elect these courses without fear of the numerical effects upon their averages. Physical Education classes would be similarly graded as the students viewed a numerical evaluation to be too arbitrary. Recommendations were also made by Council representatives to effect curriculum changes which would make course content more relevant to the students.

Michael organizations branch from Council

Michael School Council, under the leadership of President Walter Carlson, discussed many issues concerning both school and community problems. Air, land, and water pollution were increasingly emphasized as the problem of ecological destruction gained in exposure and importance.

Sophomores, juniors, and seniors served as mentors for incoming freshmen as an aid to their orientation to the school which enabled each upper-classman to meet with eight to ten freshmen for two mods each week.

Michael students also met with the faculty in Student Forum, in which they discussed recommendations for remedying school problems.

Girls' Club and Quadrangle were combined to form the Social Activities Committee, headed by Meg Morris. Many fund-raising projects were executed including candy sales, bake sales, and T-shirt sales. The faculty slaughtered their opponents in a student-faculty basketball game, held in December. On March 26, the seniors sponsored a dance at which, Mr. Jack Kramer, former Michael English teacher, provided the entertainment with his band, The Second Coming.

Social Awareness Day was scheduled by Council members for April, with guest speakers including Lt. Governor Paul Simon and a representative from Operation Breadbasket.

People, places are themes of shows

Aquette members perfect their strokes during an Aquette rehearsal.

Climaxing a semester of intensive work, the members of Aquettes presented a program of synchronized swimming on May 1 and 2 in the ETHS natatorium. The show was made up of eighteen numbers performed by different groups of members. The numbers varied from solo routines to the finale in which all fifty-nine girls participated. The show, entitled "Your Number Please" was based on the theme "The Yellow Pages," was sponsored by Mrs. Ann Stevens and Miss Anna Pizer, and had Nancy Espenshade as its president. For the small group numbers Aquette members were selected under the direction of a junior or senior girl who served as a student leader, wrote the script for the number, and selected the music for it.

Esande, advised by Miss Jackie Radis and Miss Donna Gordon, and the Dance Honors gym class combined to perform a program of modern dance during March. The show was based on the games people play and the conversations they have.

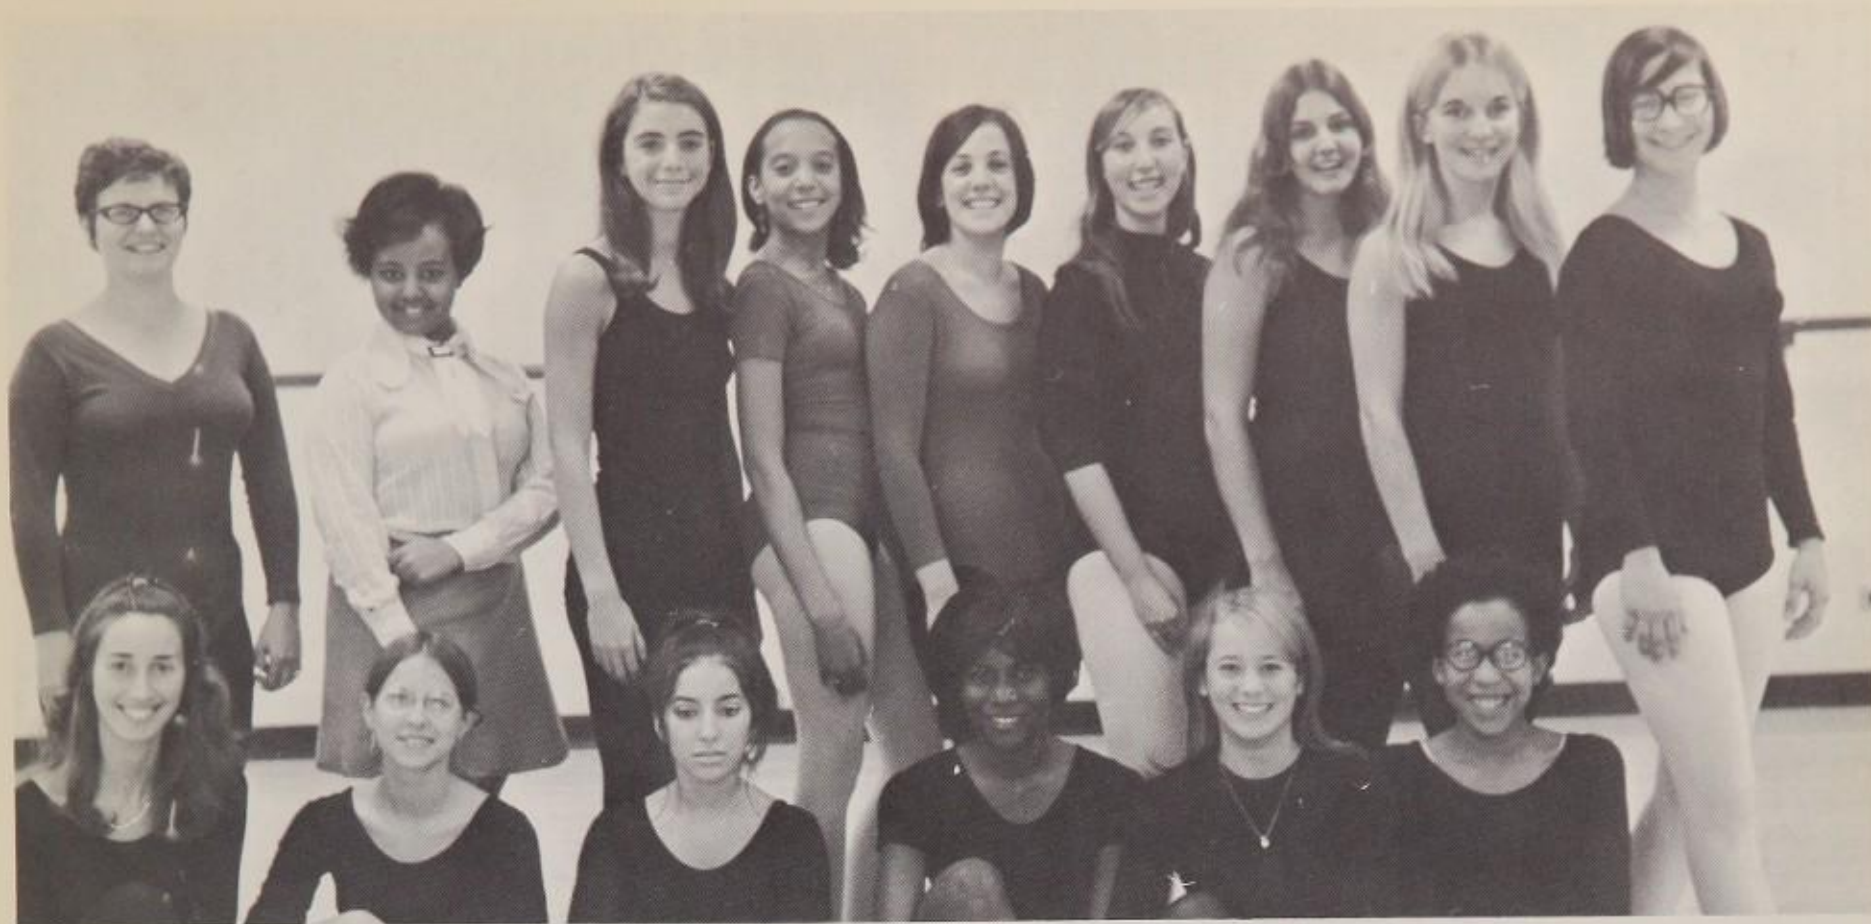

With Miss Shirley Mordine, the group's artist-in-residence, as an additional adviser, Esande members choreographed the show themselves. For the first time no live music accompanied the dancers as tapes and records were used.

Due to a decrease in the number of active participants in the modern dance group, members of the Dance Honors gym class were invited to join in the production of the show. Membership into Esande and into Dance Honors was by audition only which were held in early October after training and clinic sessions had been held.

Drama clubs culminate year with festival

Bacon Repertory Company was sponsored by Mr. William Ditton as a training group for beginners to theatre and as a continuation of training for those who had taken speech arts courses. The Repertory Company worked as a group on acting techniques, improvisational skits, and concentrational exercise. Entrance to the group was by open admission.

Beardsley Repertory, sponsored by Mr. Steve Narland, worked on improvisational skits which they performed to various community organizations during the year. Entrance to the Repertory Company was by audition, after which the group worked as an organic changing event which did not attempt to reproduce existing forms of entertainment, but to create new ones.

Boltwood Repertory Company was formed to help students with a serious interest in the theatre expand their abilities in a daily workshop. The Repertory, sponsored by Mr. Bruce K. Siewerth, in addition to performing for various civic organizations performed scenes for ETHS English classes. Although the group had also performed last year, they added to their catalogue of plays this year. The members were selected by audition.

Michael School Drama Club worked with Children's Theatre to aid them in their productions. The members of the club, sponsored by Mr. William Waack and Mrs. Christine Friederich, also performed a production of "Thurber Carnival" for the residents of the Mather Home. The admission to the club was open to all interested students.

A year of separate projects was culminated by the four drama clubs with a Festival of the Performing Arts, given on four consecutive afternoons in late May. Each group took programs they had been working on for a semester and presented them to each other and to interested students.

Projects draw students to small clubs

Audiophonics was formed this year for students involved in audio-visual activities. The club organized a closed circuit radio station, WEVN, which gave its first broadcast on January 12, 1970. The station, which was manned entirely by students and sponsored by Mr. William Kaffenberger, broadcast programs twice each day into the four cafeterias and student lounges. WEVN offered taped coverage of all sports events and of special school events, such as the Environmental Pollution Teach-Out on April 22, in addition to its rock and soul music programming. Audiophonics members planned to secure an FM frequency which would extend programming to the Evanston community. The Midwest Hi-Fi Stereo Show was held in March to help raise the money needed to finance the FM station.

Spanish Club staged a Christmas festival in December in which costumed characters acted in holiday skits, students presented slide shows featuring Spanish-speaking countries, and foreign-born ETHS students gave lectures about their native countries. An evening in the atmosphere of a Spanish night club was also arranged, in which students participated in Spanish skits, songs, dances, and games.

French and German Clubs organized trips to restaurants specializing in cuisine from those nations. Latin Club planned a Latin Banquet in May, in which masquerading students engaged in a contest for the best costumes.

Rifflery Club, sponsored by Mr. Ralph Peterson, met four times each week from February through April at the riflery range in the basement.

Future Teachers of America held a May Day Teach-Out on May 1 in which students took over the instruction of certain classes during the day. Members planned a trip to the inner-city schools in the spring.

Originality sparkles in Debate, CS, YAMO Board

YAMO '69's nine-member board worked together to produce this year's entirely original variety show, "YAMO is a Four Letter Word or All Great Truths Begin as Blasphemies." Preparation for the show began in the fall of 1968, with Sunday script committee meetings in which all the board members brainstormed the script, regarding sets, dancing, and music. Tryouts were held in June with rehearsals during the summer.

This year's Board, sponsored by Mr. Bruce K. Siewerth, coordinating director, consisted of Judd Parkin, chairman of the board and script chairman; Karroll Alexander, individual acts chairman; Greg Barman, music chairman; Kerry McCarthy, chorus chairman; Linda Miller, business chairman; Jeffrey Nelson and Josephine Noble, co-technical directors; Rosemary Quinn, administrative chairman; and Lynn Simon, choreography chairman.

Debate Team members Cliff Deitell and Dave Siegel took first places in the Illinois High School Association Sectional Debate in March. The club, sponsored by Mr. Michael Kelley, hosted the Evanston Invitational Debate Tournament in November. At the Tournament four Evanston debaters took first place.

Each section of Combined Studies classes contributed two representatives, one alternate, and other interested students to the Combined Studies Council. Members prepared audio and video tapes on content material and leadership processes to be used by students in the new Learning Library set up in Michael School.

Student worked in the laboratory during unassigned time helping other students with academic problems and group dynamics. They assisted with the distribution of tapes and duplicating materials. Science clubs offer specialized opportunities

Under the direction of Mr. Douglas Halsted, Math-Science Club examined information on new advances in scientific fields. Members arranged for presentations by experts of the new Bell Telephone laser, with a demonstration in holography in which 3-D pictures were created by the laser. Lectures on medical breakthroughs, astronomy, and nuclear physics were also given including a discussion on UFO's.

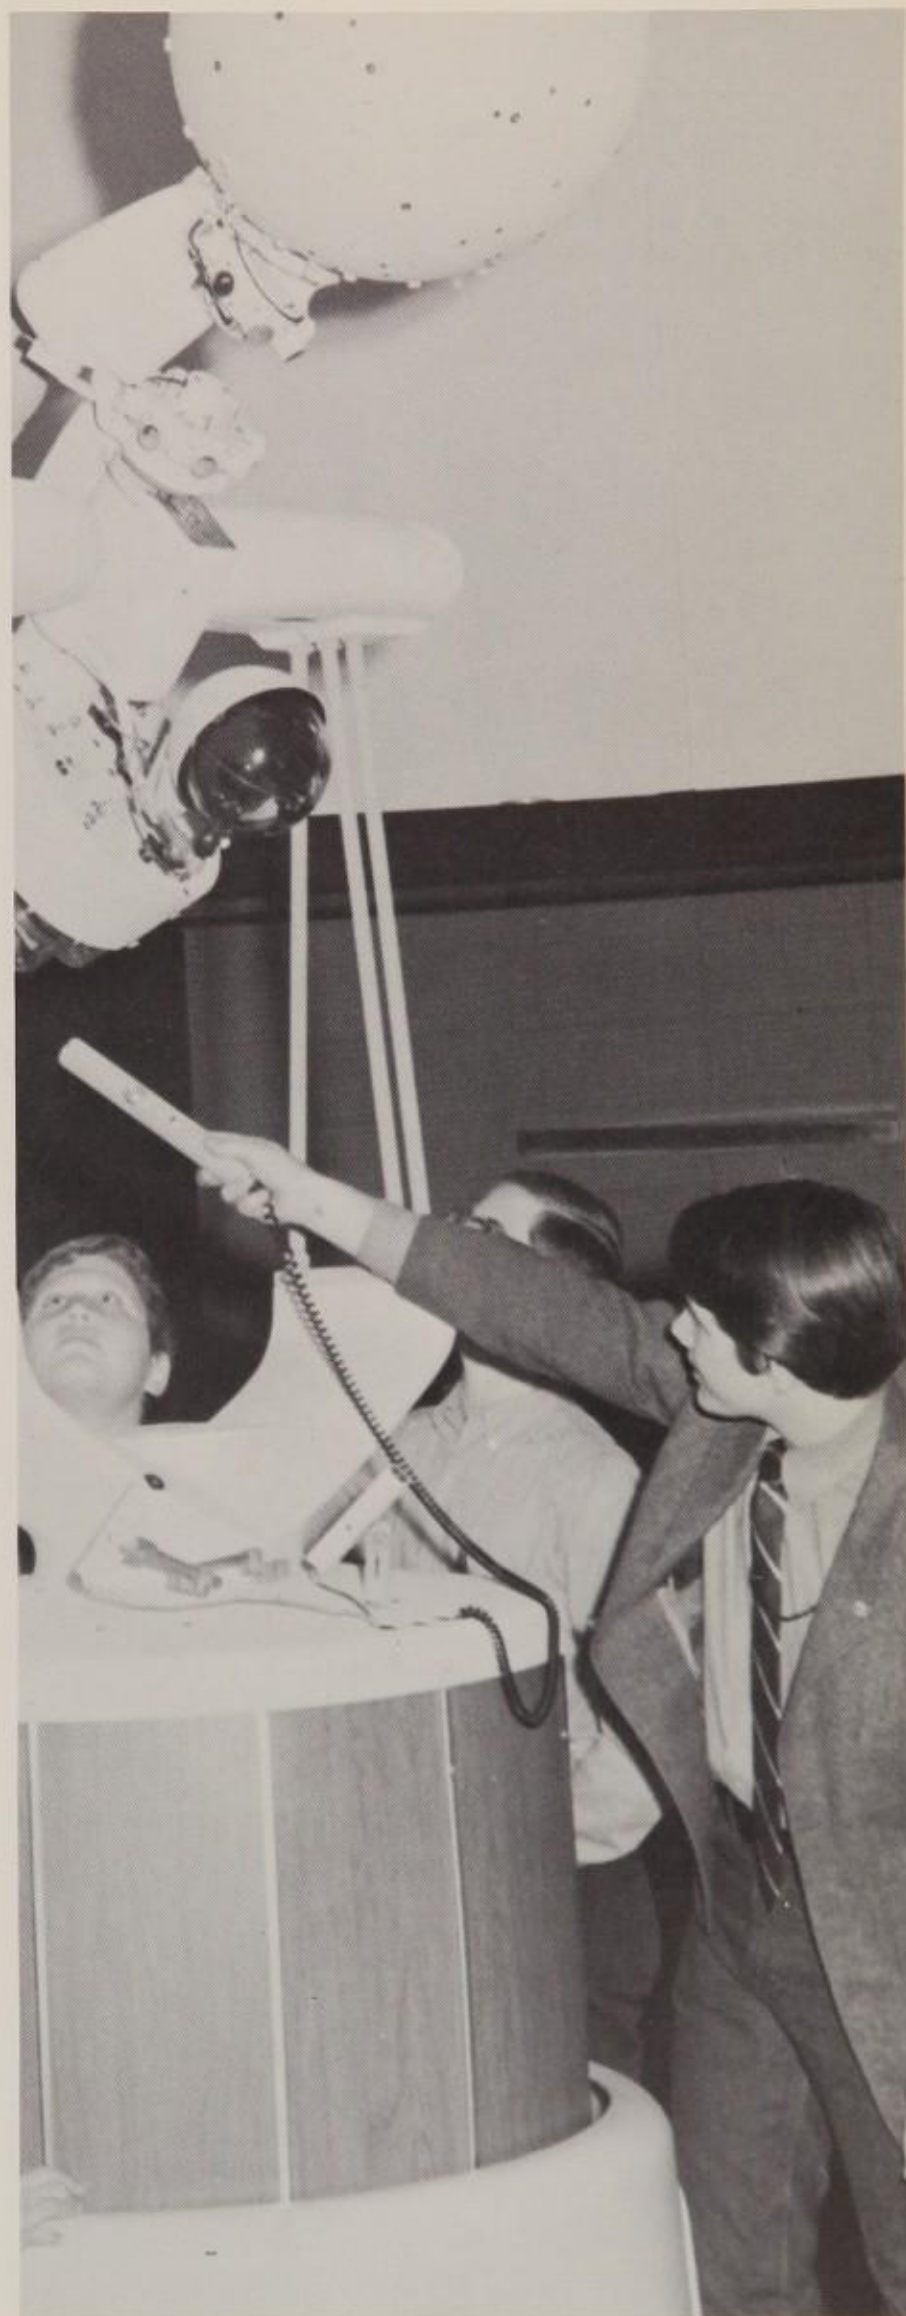

Radio Club members used the school's shortwave radio station W9ESA to contact other high schools in the area. In the spring, students used their knowledge of transmitter operations to locate an outdoor site for a new transmitter. By the end of the year, most members applied for an Amateur Radio Operator's License.

Computer Club again this year enabled interested students to learn to program computers. Members ran programs at ETHS, Kendell College, and the A. C. Neilsen Company.

Astronomy Club focused its attention this year primarily on the numerous astronomical discoveries which had been made by scientists in the course of the Club's ten-year history. Much use was made of the sixteen milimeter telescope in the Michael Planetarium.

Chess Club gave interested students an opportunity to learn and perfect their game of chess. Meeting weekly, members moved to the higher more important boards as their games improved. The honor of playing on the first board went to Harold Boas who also won fourth place in the national rating of chess players under the age of sixteen years of age. The first six boards made up the ETHS interscholastic chess team.

The team won the Illinois High School State Chess Championship in Chicago over Christmas vacation. At the contest Harold was chosen as a national chess expert by The United Chess Life and Review which is the game of chess' official journal. The team, sponsored by Mr. Robert Anspaugh, was undefeated thus making the state championship a climax to an exciting year.

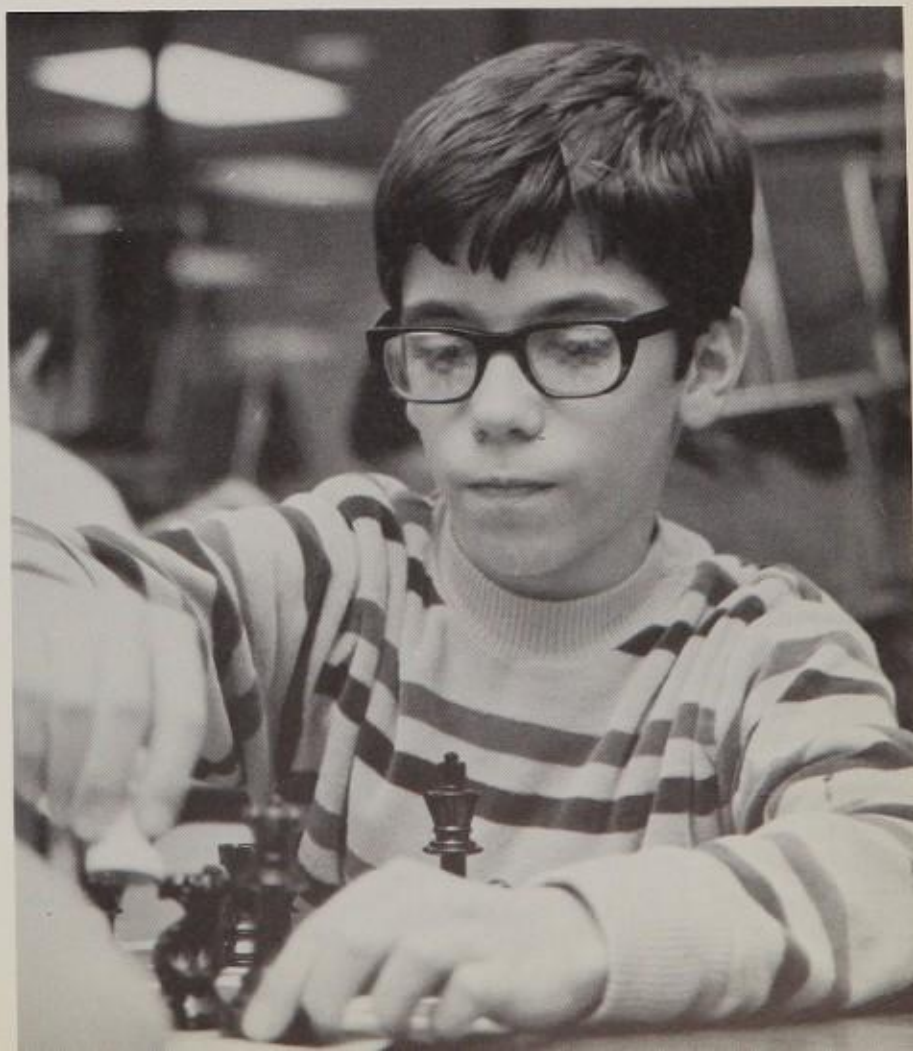

Bridge Club was a weekly club where students met to improve their game of bridge. The club, sponsored by Mr. Richard Hall, held duplicate tournaments which showed how groups of players could score different amounts of points using the same hand. Each group of players were given the same hand to play with, with the group making the most tricks, thus scoring the most points, winning. The duplicate tournaments were held all year, with partners changing every week.

International Round Table's main emphasis this year was to present foreign speakers to students interested in current events. President David Seigler and Sponsor Mr. Thomas Sharp used this theme to invite speakers such as Mr. Motke Yehezkeli who spoke on the Middle East conflict and Mr. David Jorasky from the state department who spoke on the war in Vietnam.

Group participation encouraged in music

During half-time of the Homecoming Game, Joanne Zimmerman and Merle Diamond perform with the ETHS Marching Band.

Students at ETHS having varied musical interests were encouraged to utilize their talents by joining one of the many musical groups offered by the Music Department. Students had the choice of orchestral, band, or jazz instrumental music. Others, interested in singing were able to join either a choral, choir, or folksinging group.

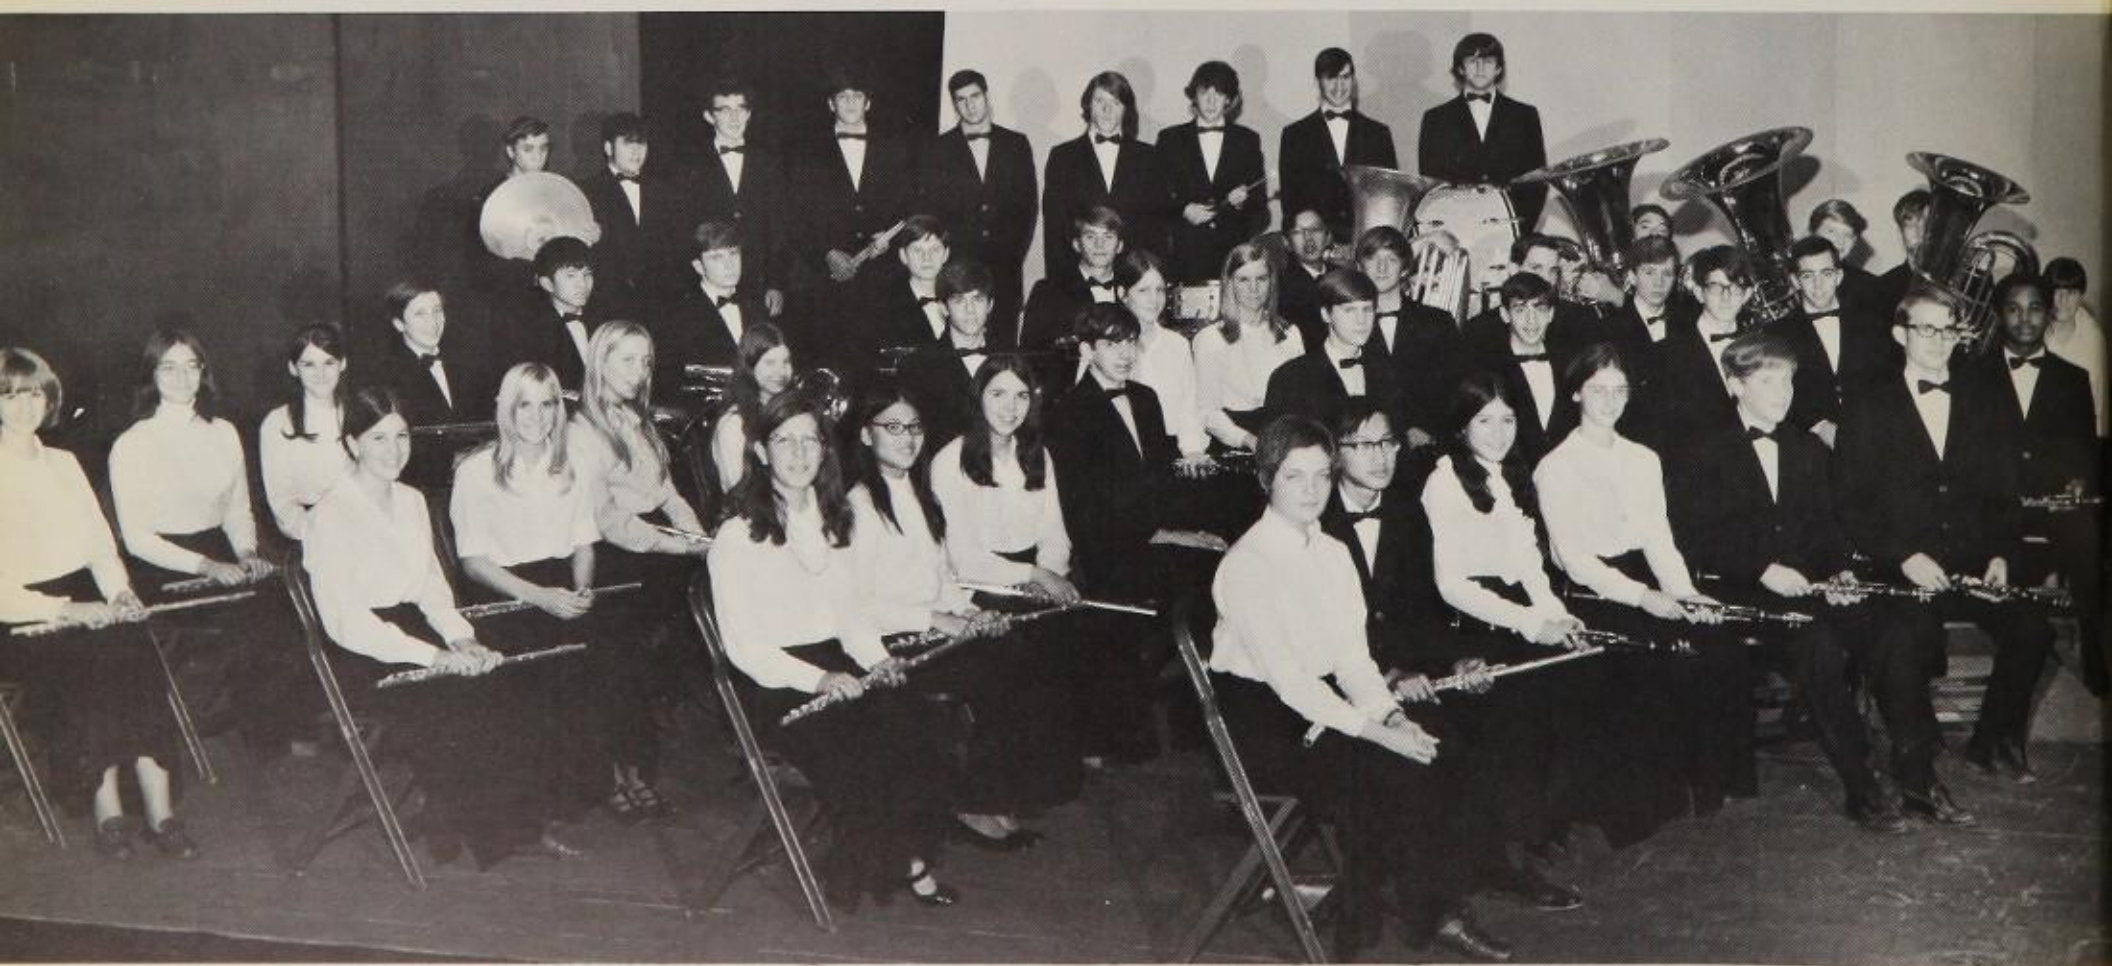

Concert Band, made up of auditioned upperclassmen, performed at the Christmas Festival, the Spring Festival, and the Band Concert. In May they played at the Annual Evanston Spring Festival Garden Show. Concert Band went to Illinois State University for a band seminar and clinic in March.

Cadet Band, which also performed at the Christmas Festival, Band Concert, and Spring Festival, consisted of underclassmen invited into the organization by the Music Department.

Cadet and Concert Bands were the nucleus of several specific groups available to students. Members of Concert Band made up the ETHS Marching Band, which performed at all home football games and in the Memorial Day parade. Other members of Concert Band formed the Symphonic Wind Ensemble which consisted of 40 members. The Ensemble participated in the Graduation Ceremonies. Another group comprised of Band members was the Pep Band which played at home basketball games.

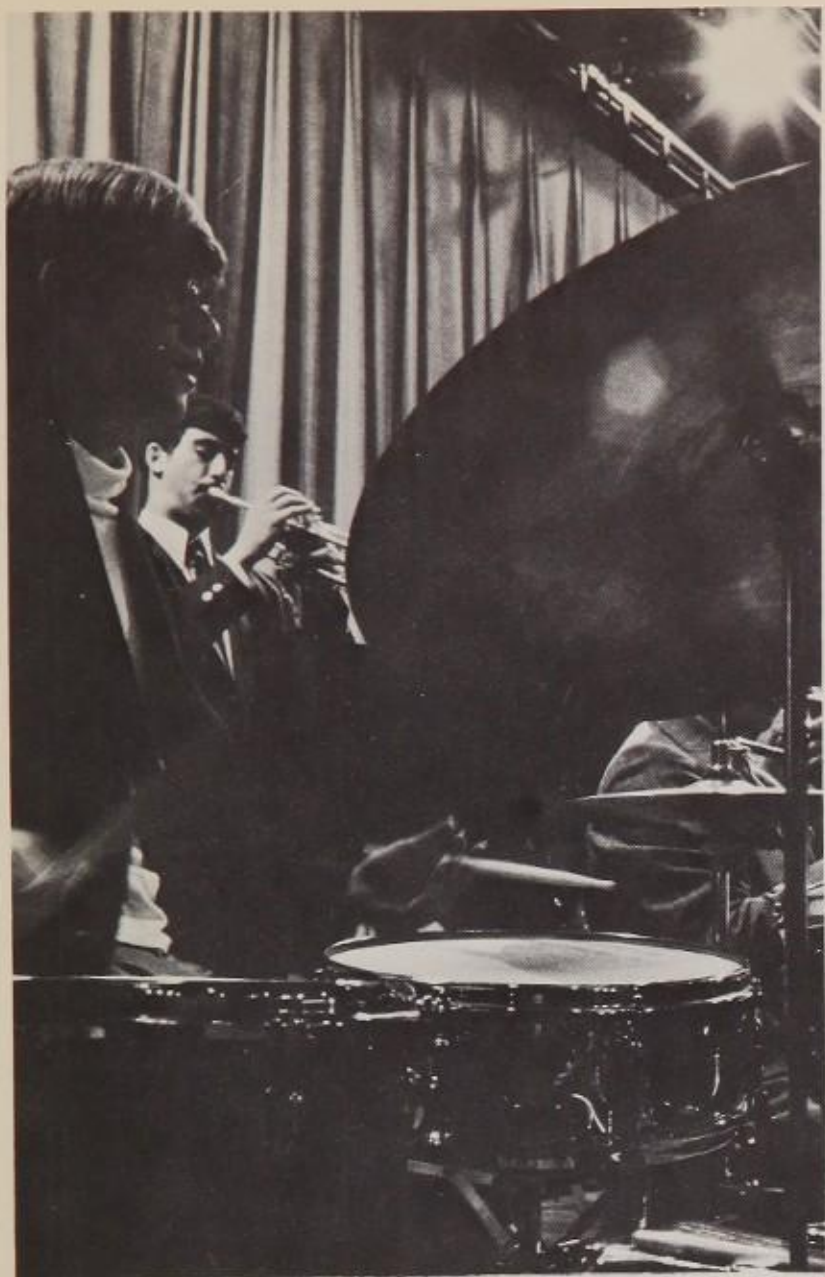

Jazz Band gave students a chance to play music that was usually unavailable in a high school atmosphere. Members toured the Evanston grade schools in an attempt to interest the grade school children in band music. They also performed at the Hi-Fi show and at the Band Concert in May. Jazz Band was chosen as one of the top 10 jazz bands in the state.

Each of the four schools had a chorale sponsored by a member of its staff. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors combined in the Chorales to present the King David oratorio in February, the Christmas Festival, and the Spring Festival.

Music groups perform in honor concerts

Senior soloists, Jeff Peitrangelo and Margery Ellis concentrate on practicing for the orchestra concert.

Students with a talent for singing, joined ETHS Choir, Mastersingers, or Girls' Choir. Participants in these choral groups combined efforts to give a concert of King David, by Honegger, in February. Separately they performed for the community. Mastersingers gave concerts to Evanston grade school children. Girls' Choir performed for grade school children as well as senior citizens. ETHS Choir gave concerts at Southern Illinois University during spring vacation. In May they were guests at the North Suburban Youth Symphony.

Classical music was not the only kind offered to curious students. Folksinging Club met twice a month to share interests in different types of folk music. The group held jam sessions in which records brought by students and songs chosen by members were played. During Christmas vacation, the group caroled traditional songs.

Orchestral music was also offered to students. Concert and Cadet Orchestras were composed of upper and lower classmen with an interest in concert music. Both groups performed for the Orchestra Concert in January, the Spring Concert in May, and at the Christmas Festival.

Concert Orchestra was one of four high school orchestras who performed for the National Convention of Music Educators National Conference at the Conrad Hilton in March. The Orchestra also played the music for "West Side Story."

The Senior Soloists for 1969-70, who performed at the Orchestra Concert and at the Spring Festival, were Margery Ellis, viola; Jeff Pietrangelo, trumpet; and Veronica Berkes, flute.

Out of school activities lifeblood of small clubs

Editor Bob Snider prepares an article on ETHS student life for the Student Review Page.

Wantu Wazuree, which means "beautiful people" in Swahili, was formed by fifteen girls and sponsored by Miss Sharon Wilkinson. The girls organized functions in order to raise money to be donated to the senior class, including cake sales, donut sales, and dances.

Christie Ski Club went on trips to Alpine Valley and Wilmot in Wisconsin, Chestnut Mountain in Illinois, and Powderhorn Mountain and Iron Mountain in Michigan. Members, who ranged from beginning to advanced skiers, adopted the motto, "What this country needs is a few more ski heros."

The Student Organizing Committee, headed by chairmen Barry Kellman, George Rudy, Steve Danzig, Ed Tanzman, and Howard Resnick, included students who had worked actively last year to revise the dress code. The Judiciary Committee wrote the policy for a student appeals board which was presented to the administration in March.

The '69 Pilot, an ETHS handbook and guide, was compiled by a fifteen-member staff headed by co-editors Mary Adams and Eve Young and sponsored by Mr. Robert Workman.

Miss Marilyn Morgan sponsored a monthly ETHS Review page in the Evanston Review. Editor-in-chief Bob Snyder and Assistant Editor Francine Schwartz headed a staff which was composed each month of different students interested in journalistic writing. The staff provided the Evanston community with stories and photographs publicizing student achievements.

Style changes accent Evanstonian and KEY

Paula Wexler finds that the easiest way to cool off Editor-in-Chief Peter Baranay is to lock him outside.

Changes in both form and style were adopted this year by the staffs of the Evanstonian and the 1970 KEY.

Alternations in the mechanics of the Evanstonian were made at the start of the school year with the introduction of offset printing, a new makeup, and a larger page size.

Tom Brueggemann, editor-in-chief, together with a staff of twenty co-editors and managers and forty journalism student reporters, worked on the expansion of the publication's coverage. Through its editorials and feature articles, the Evanstonian served as a communication link between the administration and students in its reporting. The publication of an article on interracial dating halted the distribution of the Evanstonian and initiated the confiscation of some 400 copies which had been distributed, marking the first censorship in the publication's history.

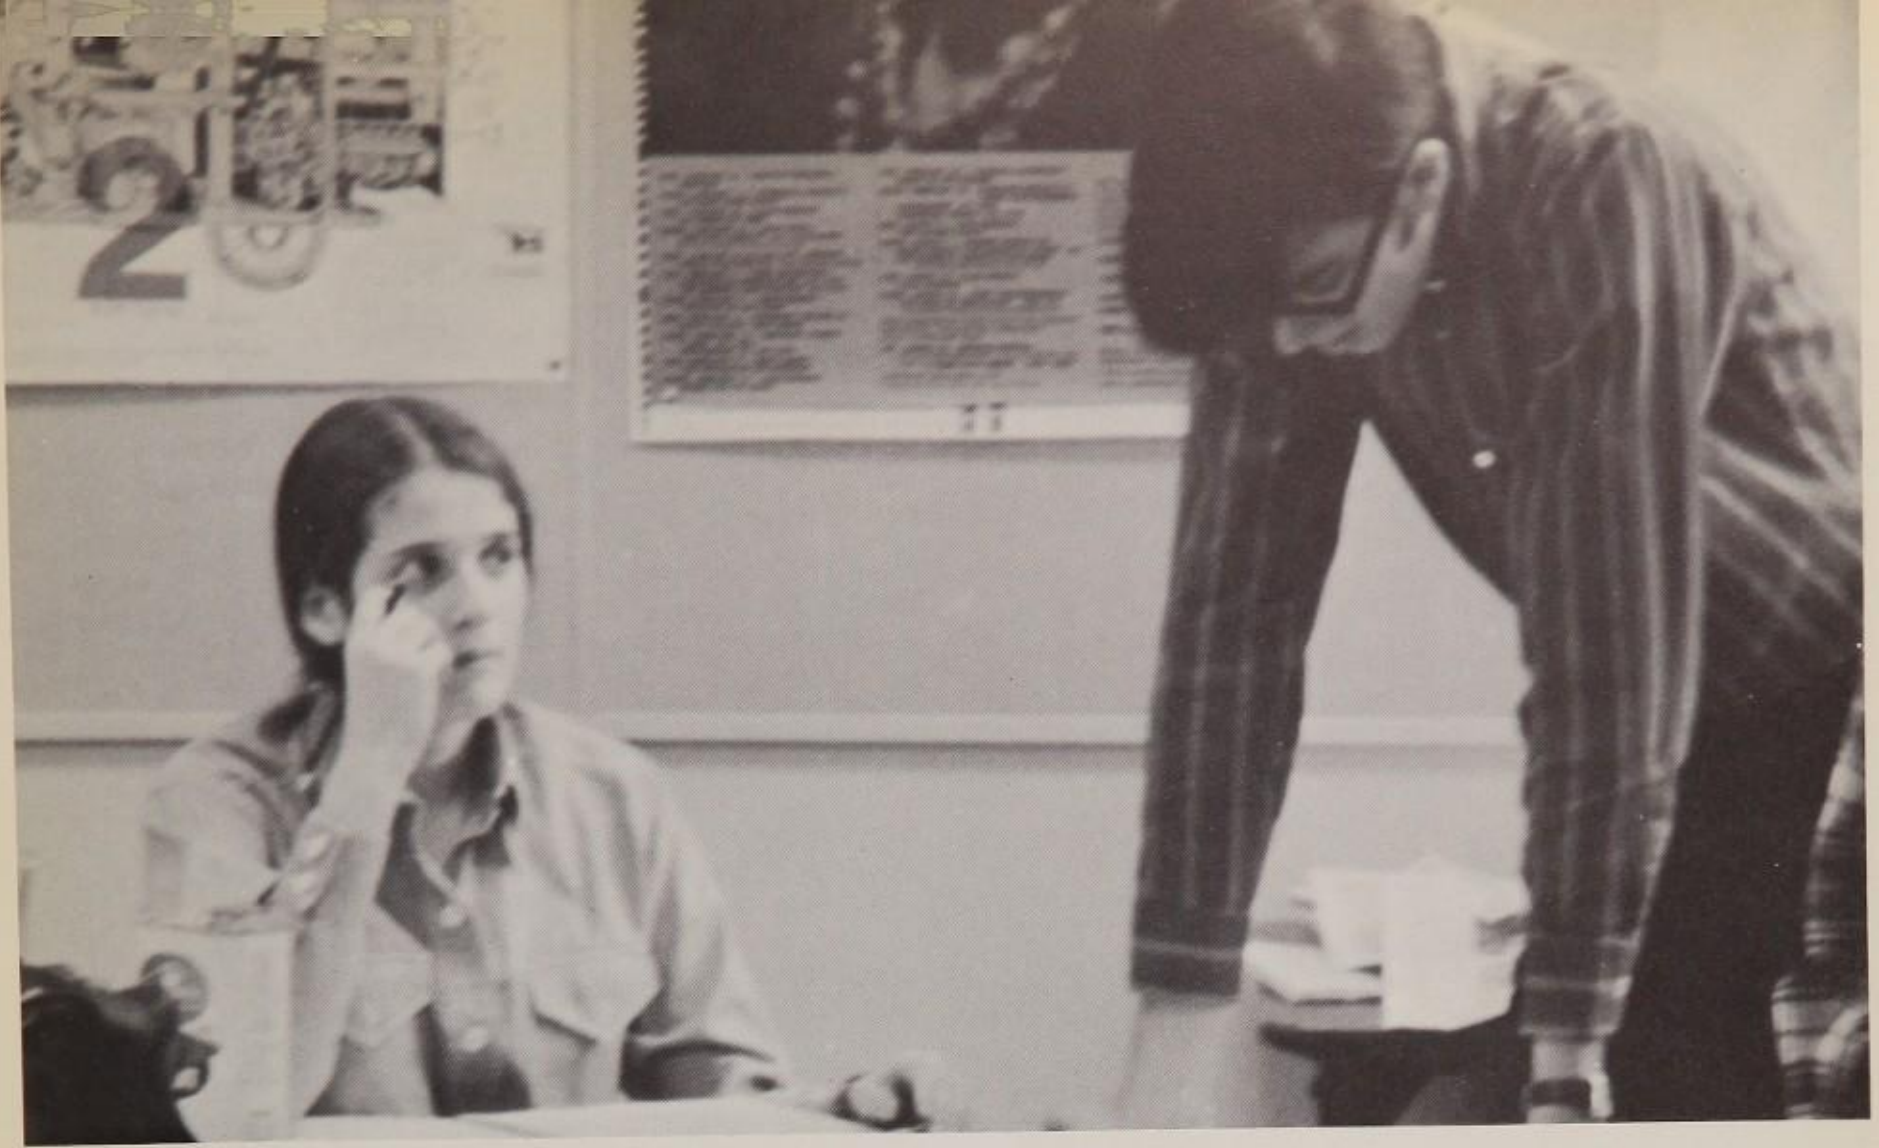

Training sessions were begun in the spring of 1969 in the process of the selection of the junior staff for the 1970 KEY under the direction of Editor-in-Chief Peter Baranay and seven senior editors.

"Growth and Expansion" served as an overall theme for the book, which itself was expanded this year with the adoption of a later distribution date. Student photographers took a greater part in the KEY this year in providing pictures for the new senior candid section and for the illustration of the newly computerized index. More color pictures were used in the opening section to complement the accompanying free verse copy style.

The yearbook was distributed late in August, 1970 to seniors at a reunion as opposed to its former June delivery, enabling the reporting of the entire year's activities, making the 1970 KEY truly a "year" book.

Varsity Gridders take second in Suburban League

Refusing to let a bad start get them down, the Wildkit gridders came back from two early losses to take second in the Suburban League.

Losing two out of their first three games to Rich East and Oak Park, the Wildkits won the remaining games to finish the season with a 6-1 record in conference play.

The Kits maintained a strong running game with backs Ben Bridges, Bill Hoover and Sam White. All-State Quarterback Kit Basler and back-up quarterback Bill Royal led an effective passing attack connecting with All-State End Orestes Arrieta, Joe King, and Jim Archier. Coach Murney Lazier's traditionally strong defense put on a particularly dramatic display against New Trier East.

The gridders renewed their rivalry with the Green Wave in the final game of the season. In a dramatic goal-line stand, the defense stopped the New Trier offense at the one yard line on four consecutive plays and protected Evanston's 12-6 lead.

Wildkits take state; finish season 15-0

Coach Robert Krohn gave the credit for this year's championship to an "all team effort." With a 15-0 record the Varsity soccer team won the Suburban League title for the second consecutive year and went on to win the State championship.

ETHS beat New Trier East in two of the most exciting games of the season, with the Wildkits taking the Indians 2-0 in the first game and 3-2 in a double overtime in the second.

Many records were broken by the championship team, with Chuck Weisberg only allowing six goals to be made. Bob Thompson, together with co-captain Bob Burkland and team members Lionel Jean-Baptiste, Mario Garretto and Steve Hoffenberg, made All-State, with Jay Engeln and Mike Baez receiving Honorable Mention.

Harriers finish exciting season on low note

Running stride for stride, Steven Van Swearingen and Drew Mearns lead the Evanston pack.

Evanston's Cross Country team took Suburban League with an undefeated dual meet record this year, but failed to qualify for the state meet.

Following a victory in the District meet, the harriers failed to place a man in the top 10, and finished fourth in the sectional meet. A third place finish is necessary to qualify for the state meet.

In mid-season, the Kits foreshadowed their Suburban League win by capturing first place in the Mattoon meet with 74 points. The team then placed first in the Cross Country SL finals with a team point total of 31, and Drew Mearns, Steve Van Swearingen, Dave Ingraham, Ron Fick, and Larry Bates finishing among the top ten.

The team's success was in part due to the lack of injuries on the team. Coach Ken Olsen attributed this to "pool training," a concept he introduced this year. It is a method of training runners which requires them to run in a small pool filled with knee-high water. It strengthens the muscles without the wear and tear of running.

Kit swimmers win fourth consecutive SL crown

In what Coach Dobbie Burton described as "one of the great Evanston performances of all time" the tankers, led by co-captains Ekkehard Schoettle and Grant Denton, tied New Trier East in the Suburban League meet. Having beaten the Green Wave in dual meet competition, the Wild-kits were awarded the title; Coach Burton's fourth consecutive Suburban League championship, and his fifteenth in 23 years.

Exceptional performances were turned in by Seniors Dale Stemple, Tom Coldren, Phil Binnie, Jeff Simpson, Jeff Edman, and Mike Repsold, and juniors Randy Whitchurch, George Kennan, Gary Price, and Hugh Hoffman.

Wildkit gymnasts, led by all-around performer Bruce Keeshin and Ray Duplessis on the side horse, ran away with the Suburban League title for the eighth consecutive year.

The team swept through the sectionals and nailed some routines on the second day of the Districts for a catch up victory. The Kits wound up the season with a strong third place finish in the State meet.

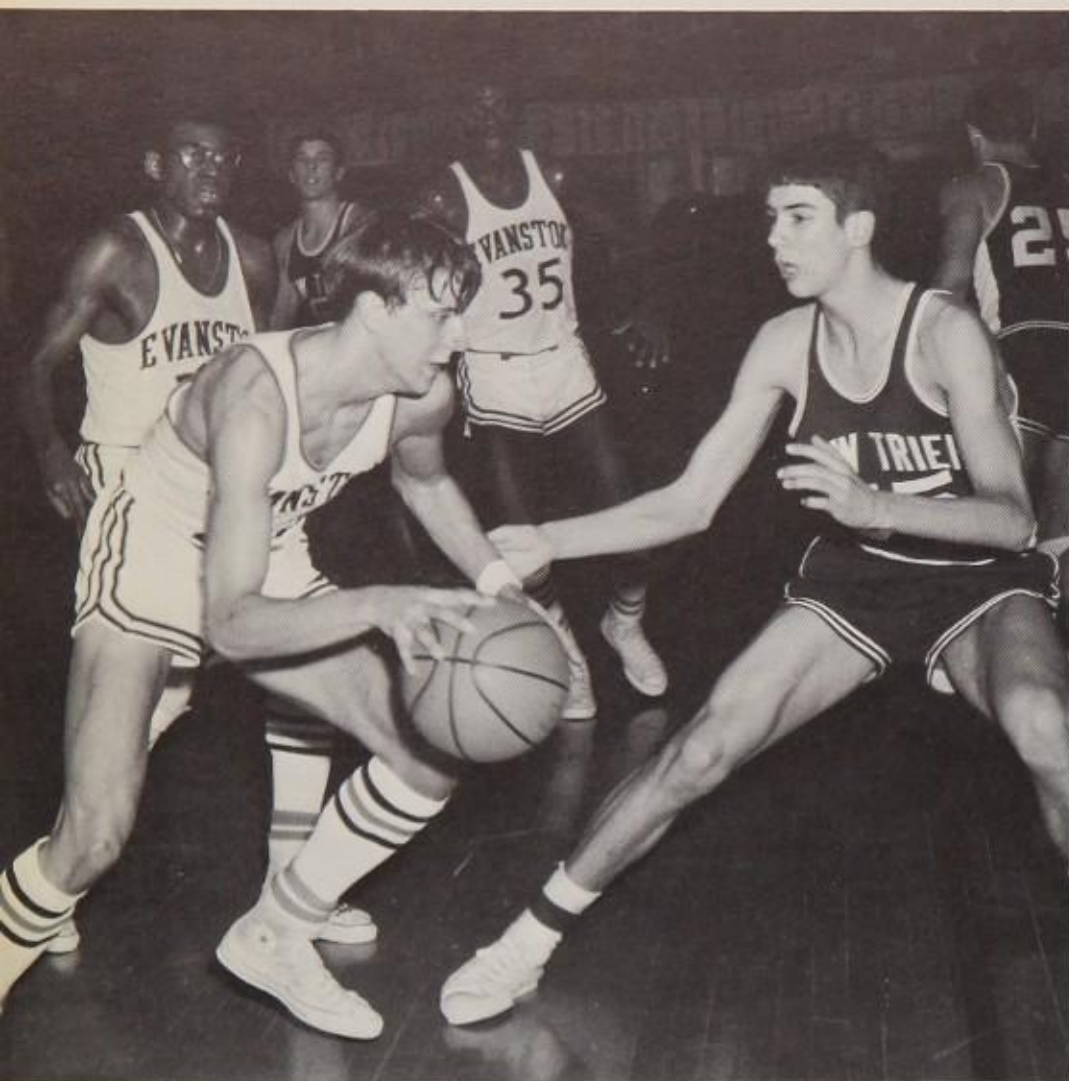

Evanston led the competition with two individual champions: Bruce Keeshin on the high bar, and Jay Zeman on the trampoline. Marty Krein, Steve Schwartz, Chris Licht, and Eric Newman also contributed to the point total.

Coach Jerry Fontana who watched the meet from a wheelchair while recovering from a bloodclot in his leg, credited the team with developing a "new gymnastics" in helping to build up the program in both excellence and importance.

Sidehorse specialist Ray Duplessis executes the required scissors in his routine.

Varsity Cagers finish season strongly

Forward Jim Mathisen drives downcourt around the New Trier defense.

Finishing the season with a 10-4 record, the Wildkit cagers held onto a third place tie with New Trier East in the Suburban League scramble for first place.

Coach Jack Burmaster led the team to two wins in the Regional Tournament using a rotating line-up with Orestes Arrieta, Jim Mathisen, Willie Miller, Larry Johnson, Jim Godwin, and Peter Gibbs, before bowing to Notre Dame in the championship game.

Wrestlers pin down second in Suburban League

Losing only to Waukegan, which won its tenth straight championship, the Wildkit matmen finished second in Suburban League with a 6-1 record. The wrestlers won the District meet and placed fifth in the Glenbrook South Sectional.

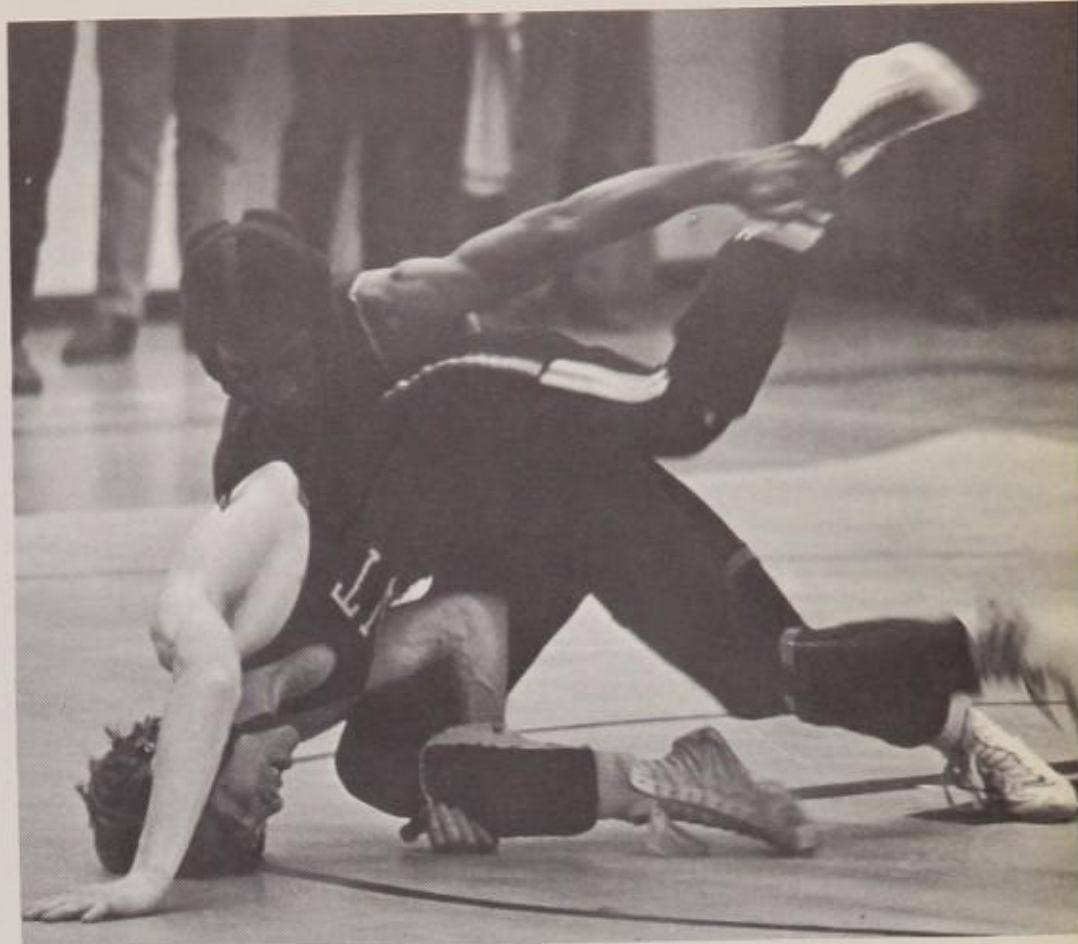

Coach Elias George used his six returning lettermen as the foundation of the squad. Two of them, seniors Fred Wideman and Lamont Harris emerged from the Sectionals to compete in the State meet. The other returning lettermen were seniors Dennis Eason and Dan Harris, and juniors Herman Ruff and Albert Meredith.

Coach George said of the squad's twenty-fourth place finish downstate, "We could have placed better if we were more represented."

Cinderman take SL, Districts, State

Evanston's track team won the state championship for the first time since 1966. Freshman Howard Jones led the team with victories in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, and anchored the winning 880 relay. Providing the winning margin was Steve Van Swearingen with a third in the two mile event.

The Wildkits took the Suburban League championship in spite of a loss to Oak Park in the SL outdoor meet which was the team's lone loss. Other outstanding contributors to the winning season were distance runners Ron Fick and Dave Ingraham, hurdler Bill Hoover, and the two relay teams.

Second in Districts
Tied for second in SL

The ETHS Baseball team suffered from the same malaise as the other spring sports. The frequent rain-outs disrupted the player's continuity and restricted the amount of situation play they practiced, but also allowed them to pitch their number one starter, Roger Pettinger, more often.

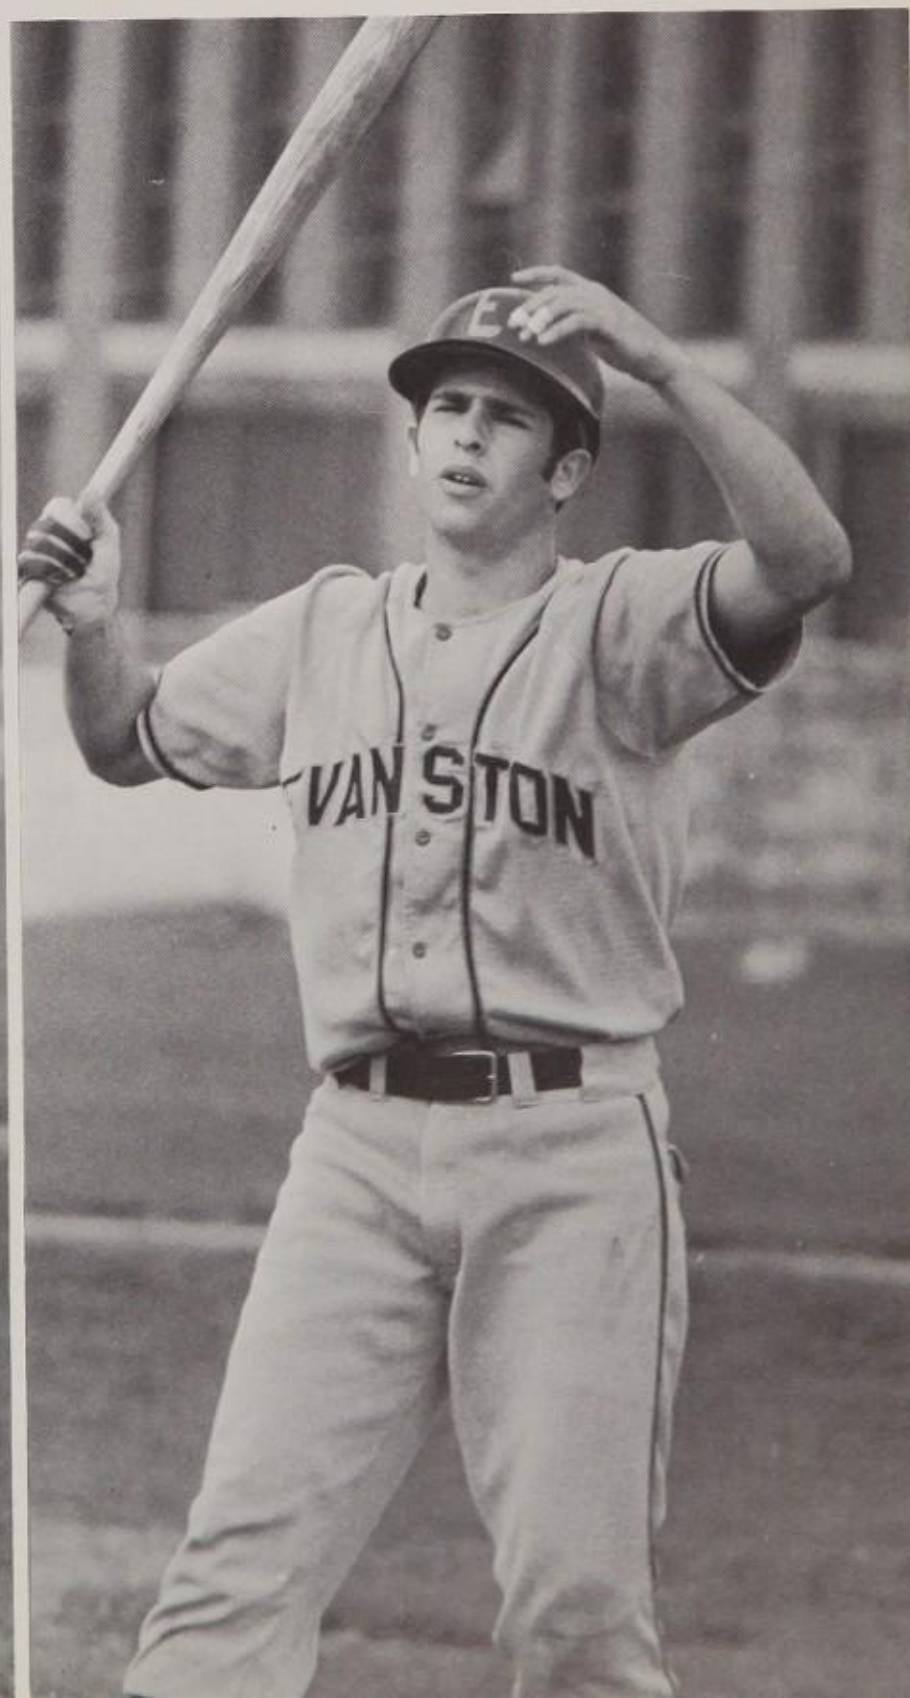

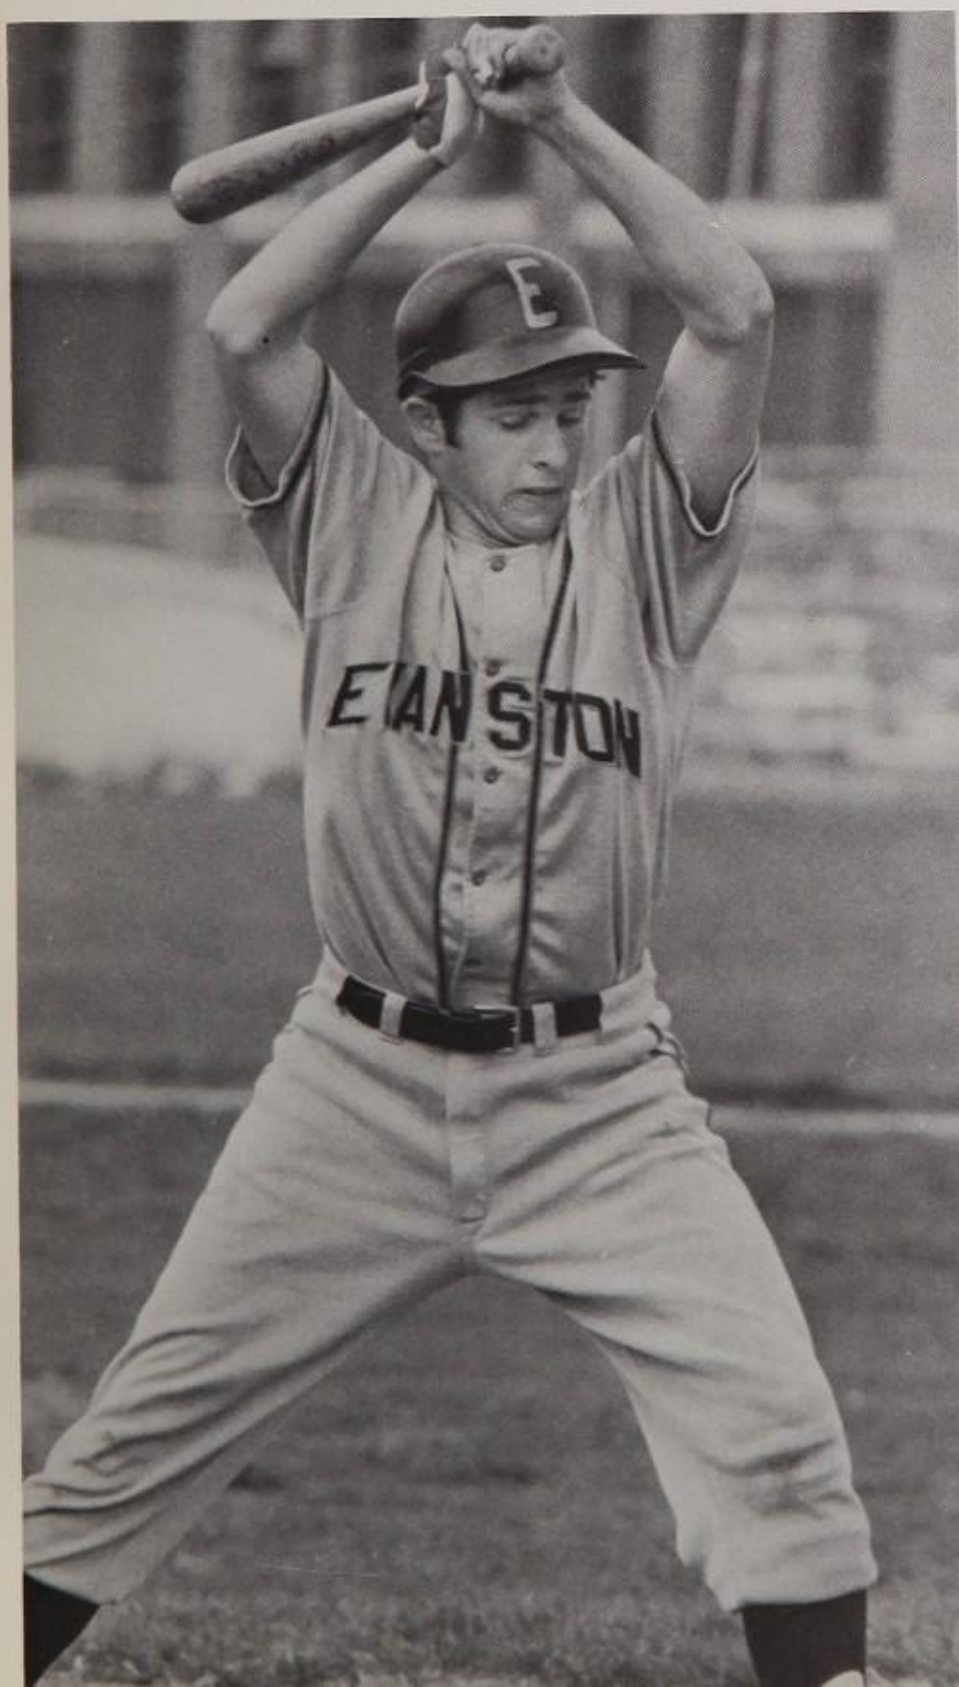

After winning the majority of their early games, the Kits then skidded into a losing streak that seriously compromised their chances for the Suburban League title.

In a bid for the state championship, the team progressed through the districts with little difficulty until the final game which they dropped to Niles North 4-0. This loss effectively destroyed the Kits' hopes for a state championship, so they turned their hopes to the Suburban League. Finishing strongly, in a close race typical of the SL, the Kits secured a tie for second place with an 8-6 record.

Although such valuable players as Orestes Arrieta, Kit Basler, and Chuck Weisberg are graduating this year, Coach David Keefe will have a strong nucleus on which to build next year's team. Among those returning are David Kauppi, Ken Wolf, and Ron Pettinger.

Catcher Chuck Weisberg jerks away from a brushback pitch aimed at his gut by the opposing pitcher as a reaction to the previous batter's excellent performance at the plate, and grimaces in a combination of annoyance and relief.

Tennis captures state title; golf wins SL meet

Varsity Tennis got off to a slow start this year with the team's losing its first two meets but finishing strongly with the state championship. The Kits qualified both singles and doubles teams to win the district meet handily. In the state meet, only the doubles team of Eric Friedler and Bob Thompson reached the final round, although other ETHS qualifiers picked up points in earlier rounds.

The team's early problems were due in part to the weather and in part to injuries. The cold and rainy weather plagued all spring sports since events had to be postponed and pre-season practice was limited. Injuries also contributed substantially. At one point, Coach Keith Anderson was without his number one, three, and six singles players.

The Varsity Golf team, coached by Mr. Dobbie Burton, also had problems with the weather but came on to win the Suburban League meet by a close margin. The team as a whole placed third in the districts, but Bill Post finished second individually in the meet and thus qualified to compete downstate in individual competition.

Evanston's Lacrosse team continued under the supervision of Murney Lazier this year. The team played the two New Triers, beating NTW twice by scores of 16-1 and 20-0 and splitting with NTE. Accusations that Mr. Lazier was using lacrosse as a spring training for Varsity football, faded as the sport became more popular with other schools.

Co-ed, competitive intramurals boost participation

Students need no longer participate in intramurals only to build beautiful bodies. Girl, or boy watching has become an accepted after school activity while playing co-ed volleyball or "powderpuff" softball.

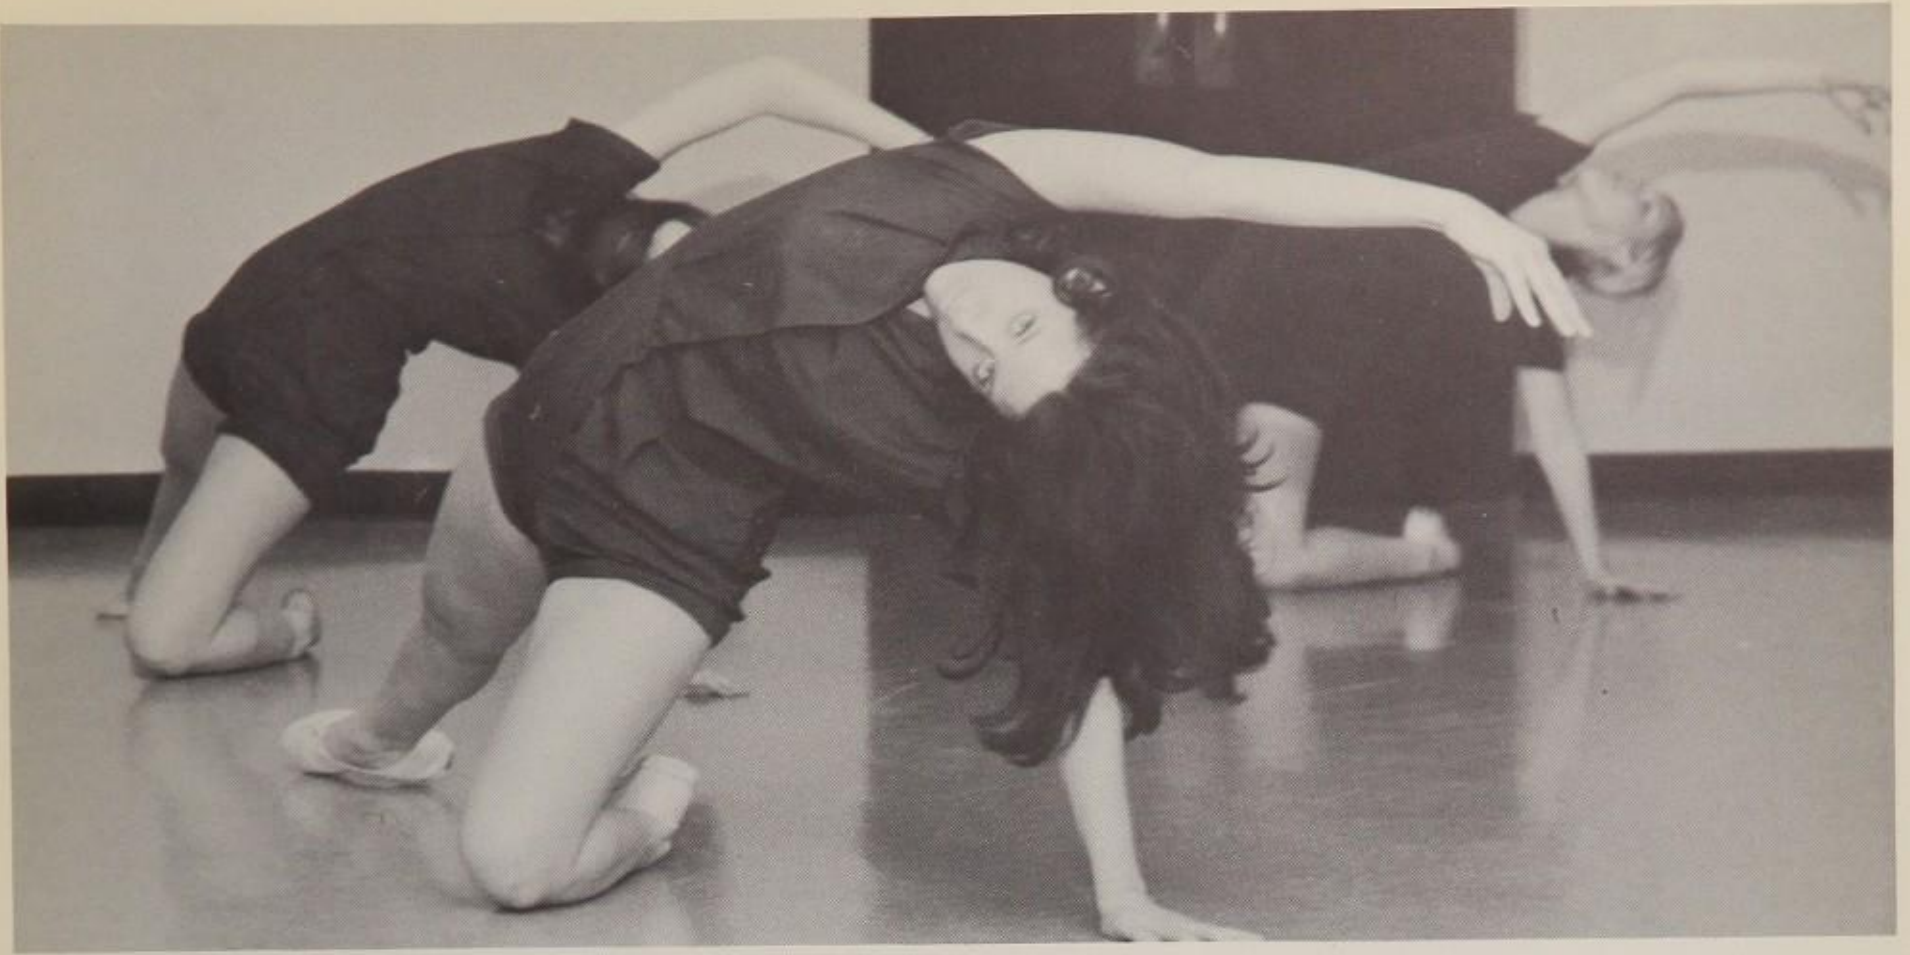

Individual and team competition has become more of an incentive than self-improvement this year. As well as girls' Olympics, the girls could participate in swimming and gymnastics meets, badminton and tennis tournaments, in addition to basketball, softball, speedball, and track. There were new activities offered too, such as body shop, a general exercise program.

Boys' intramurals also centered around the many tournaments. In football, soccer, basketball, and baseball, teams fought it out to determine school championships.

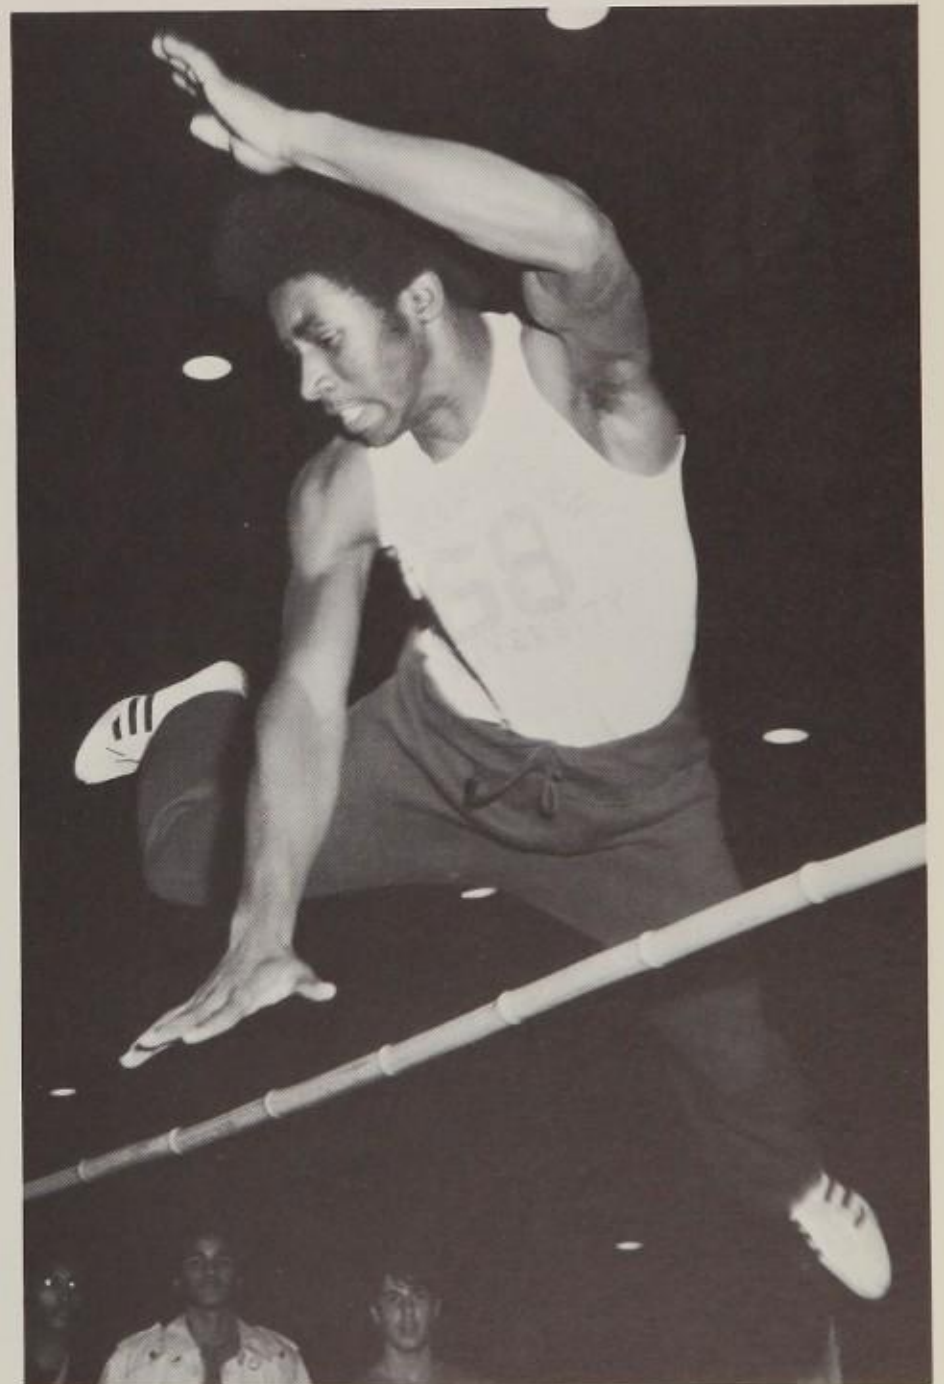

In the interscholastic girls' gymnastic meet, an Evanston team member executes an arabesque on the balance beam.

Keeping limber, Judy Miller stretches out her muscles during girls' body shop.

Are we vicious . . . ?

Willie says, "Hell yes."

Willies, Cheerleaders, and Yell Leaders altered their standard operating procedure this year in an effort to give more and better coverage to athletic events, and thereby improve Evanston's waning school spirit.

The Willie Wildcat squad, made up of ten girls selected through written applications, training sessions, and tryouts, broadened its base. Under the sponsorship of Miss Judith Jahant, a Boltwood English teacher, and with the assistance of Captain Janet Parks, the Willies updated their image of Evanston's mascot. For the first time, the personification of school spirit attended soccer, swimming, baseball, lacrosse, and track events as well as the usual football and basketball. Next year, the Willies hope to cover all athletic contests in an attempt to popularize the minor sports.

Directed by Miss Tricia Hammer, the cheerleaders introduced a new format. Rather than having a Varsity squad of twelve and a sophomore squad of six, they were regrouped to eight and eight. Next year, further changes are planned with the introduction of a JV squad and a reduction in size to six members. The cheerleaders were selected on the basis of crowd appeal, appearance, agility, and overall performance in the preliminary and final tryouts. Girls were given the opportunity to practice the two required cheers and work out the cheer they had to design at workshop sessions held after school.

Yell leaders appeared at Evanston after a one year absence when John Walsh and Jay Engeln bought sweaters with money from the Boltwood treasury, put Varsity E's on them, and turned out for football, basketball, and baseball games to augment the cheerleaders' efforts to excite school spirit. The Yell Leaders, both Bacon seniors, were sponsored Mr. Paul Moore, a social studies teacher in Michael school.

Sports Boards publicize, improve intramurals

Girls' Sports Boards continued this year with a board from each school under the supervision of Mrs. Ann Stevens. The four boards worked together to form, organize, publicize, and improve after school sports, winter and fall desserts, and the Olympics.

Each school competed for the highest number of points earned by girls participating in intramurals. These points counted toward individual and school recognition. Girls also received individual awards for the total number of points they had accumulated over four years of participation.

Service groups expand, contract

Assisted by members of the ETHS Trampoline Staff, a young gymnast takes off.

The Trampoline and Aquatic staffs expanded their instructional services to the Evanston community this year, while Letterman's Club suffered the pains of student apathy and disinterest.

Under the direction of Mr. Jerry Fontana, the Trampoline Staff gave gymnastics lessons on Saturday mornings to children of Evanston and Skokie citizens. In a much larger program than in previous years, the staff, consisting of interested and skilled girls, instructed young gymnasts in the mysteries of gymnastic coordination.

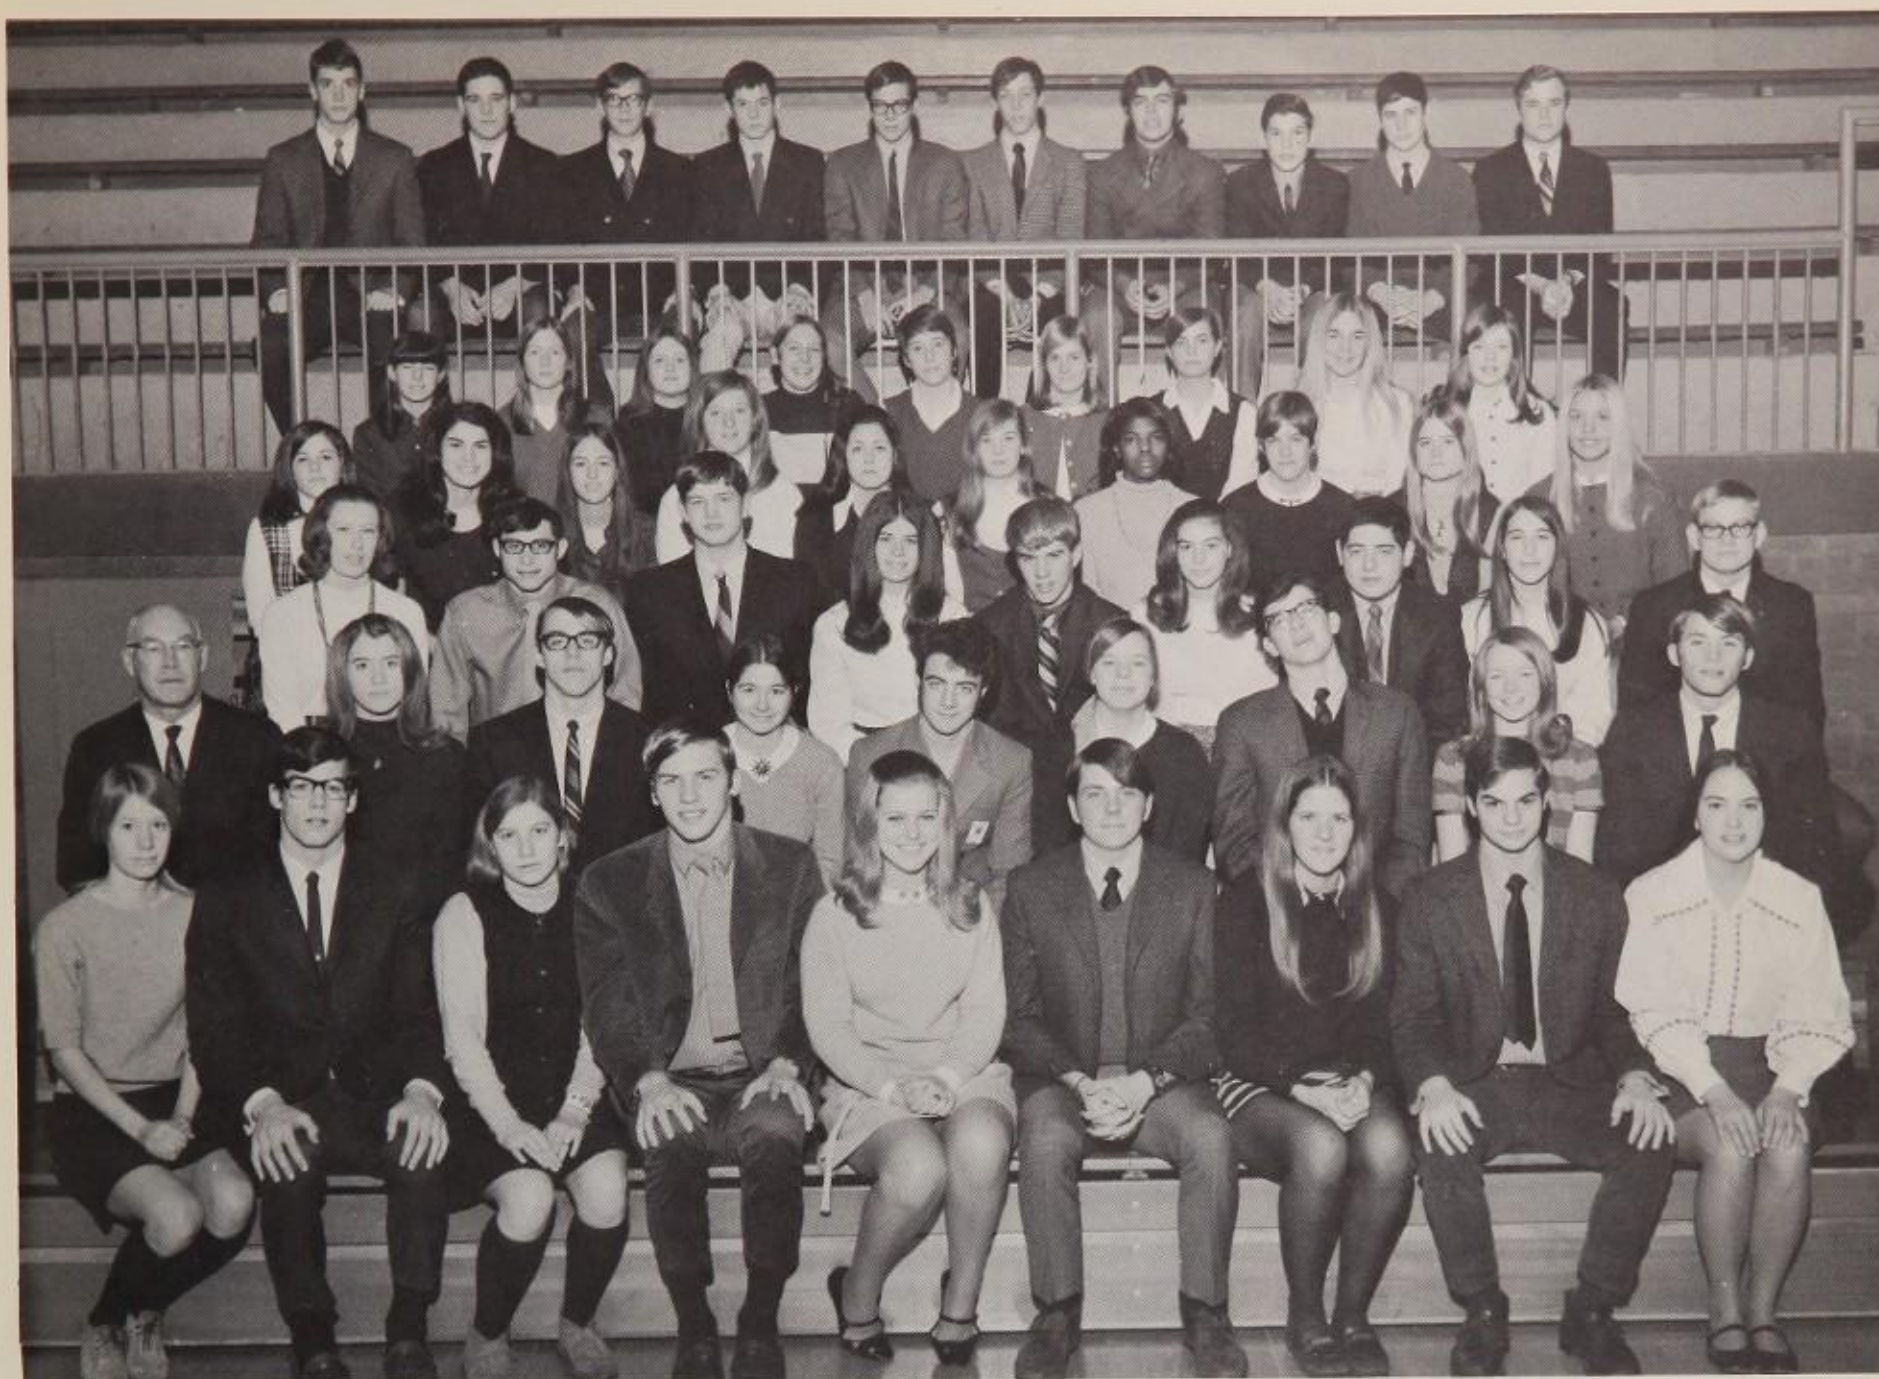

The Aquatic staff, directed by Mr. John Terhune, continued its program of swimming instruction that has been so successful in the past. This year proved to be no exception when registration for the Saturday morning lessons overflowed onto a lengthy waiting list. Grade school children learned the rudiments of advanced skills such as life saving and diving as well as fundamental water safety and swimming.

Letterman's Club, a group consisting of male students with Varsity letters in interscholastic sports, suffered from the malaise of apathy that earmarked other school organizations during the year 1969-70. As a unit, the Lettermen attended a Bulls' basketball game in January, and helped with freshman football. Other than this, they sponsored no service project. The Club's sponsor, Mr. Rick Legue, attributed the lack of interest to a diffusion and diversity of interests that made a group activity unfeasible.

Class of '70 Senior

Seniors 1970:

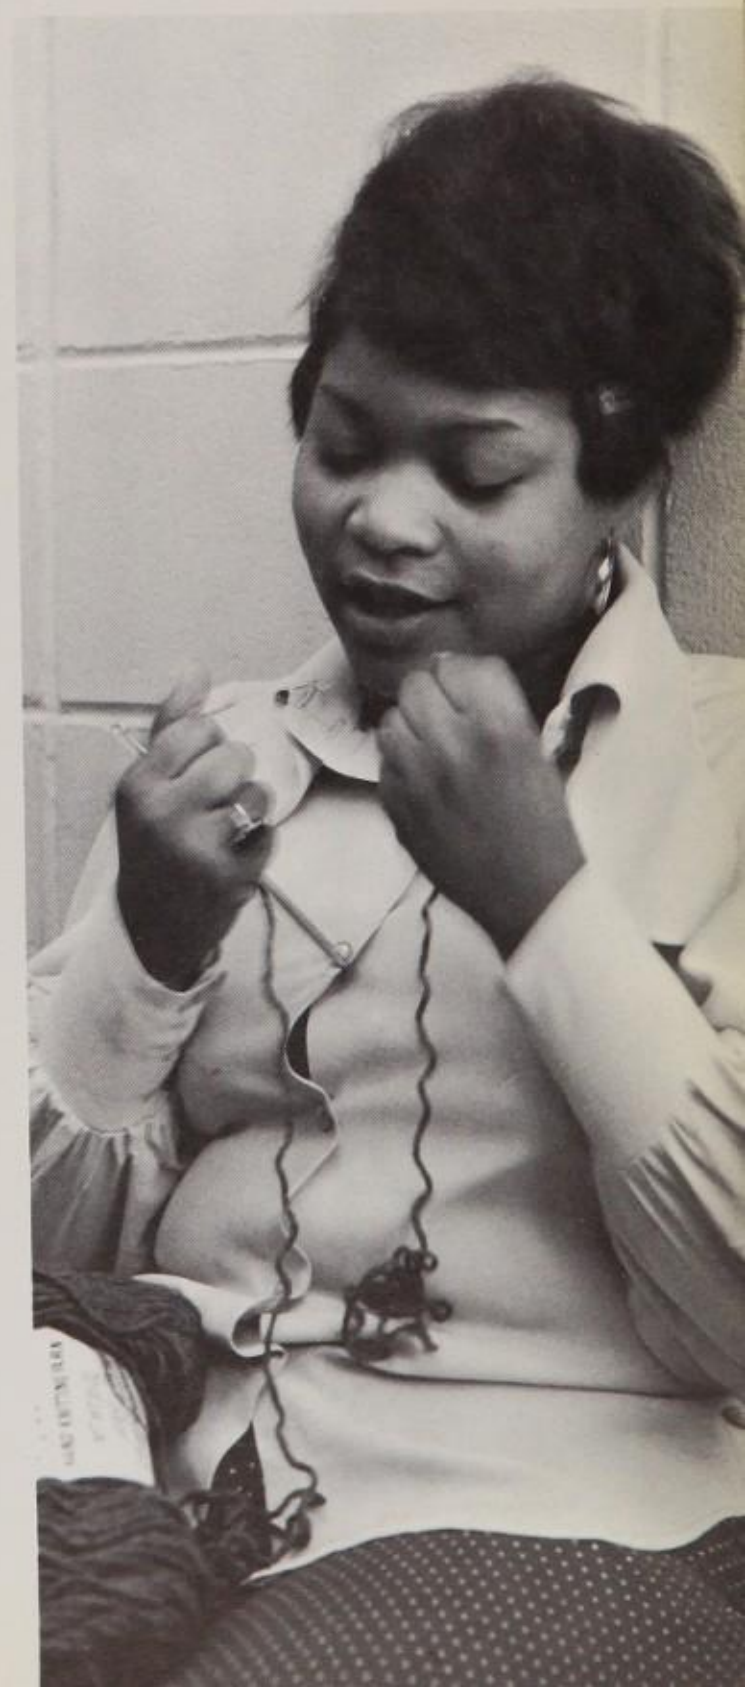

discussing,

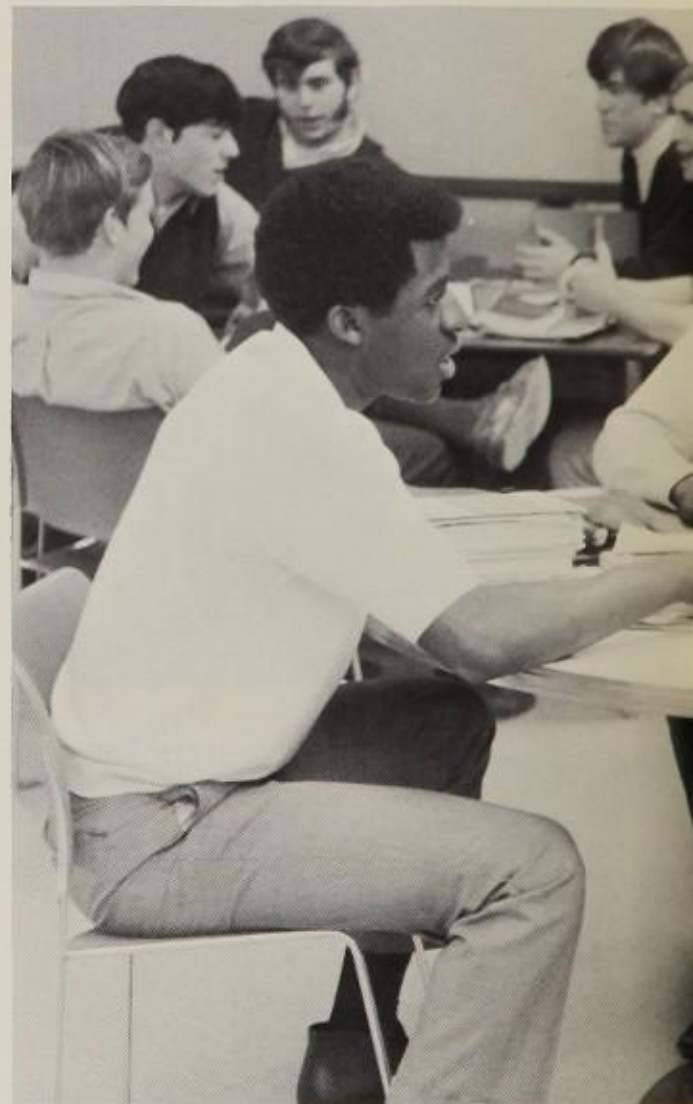

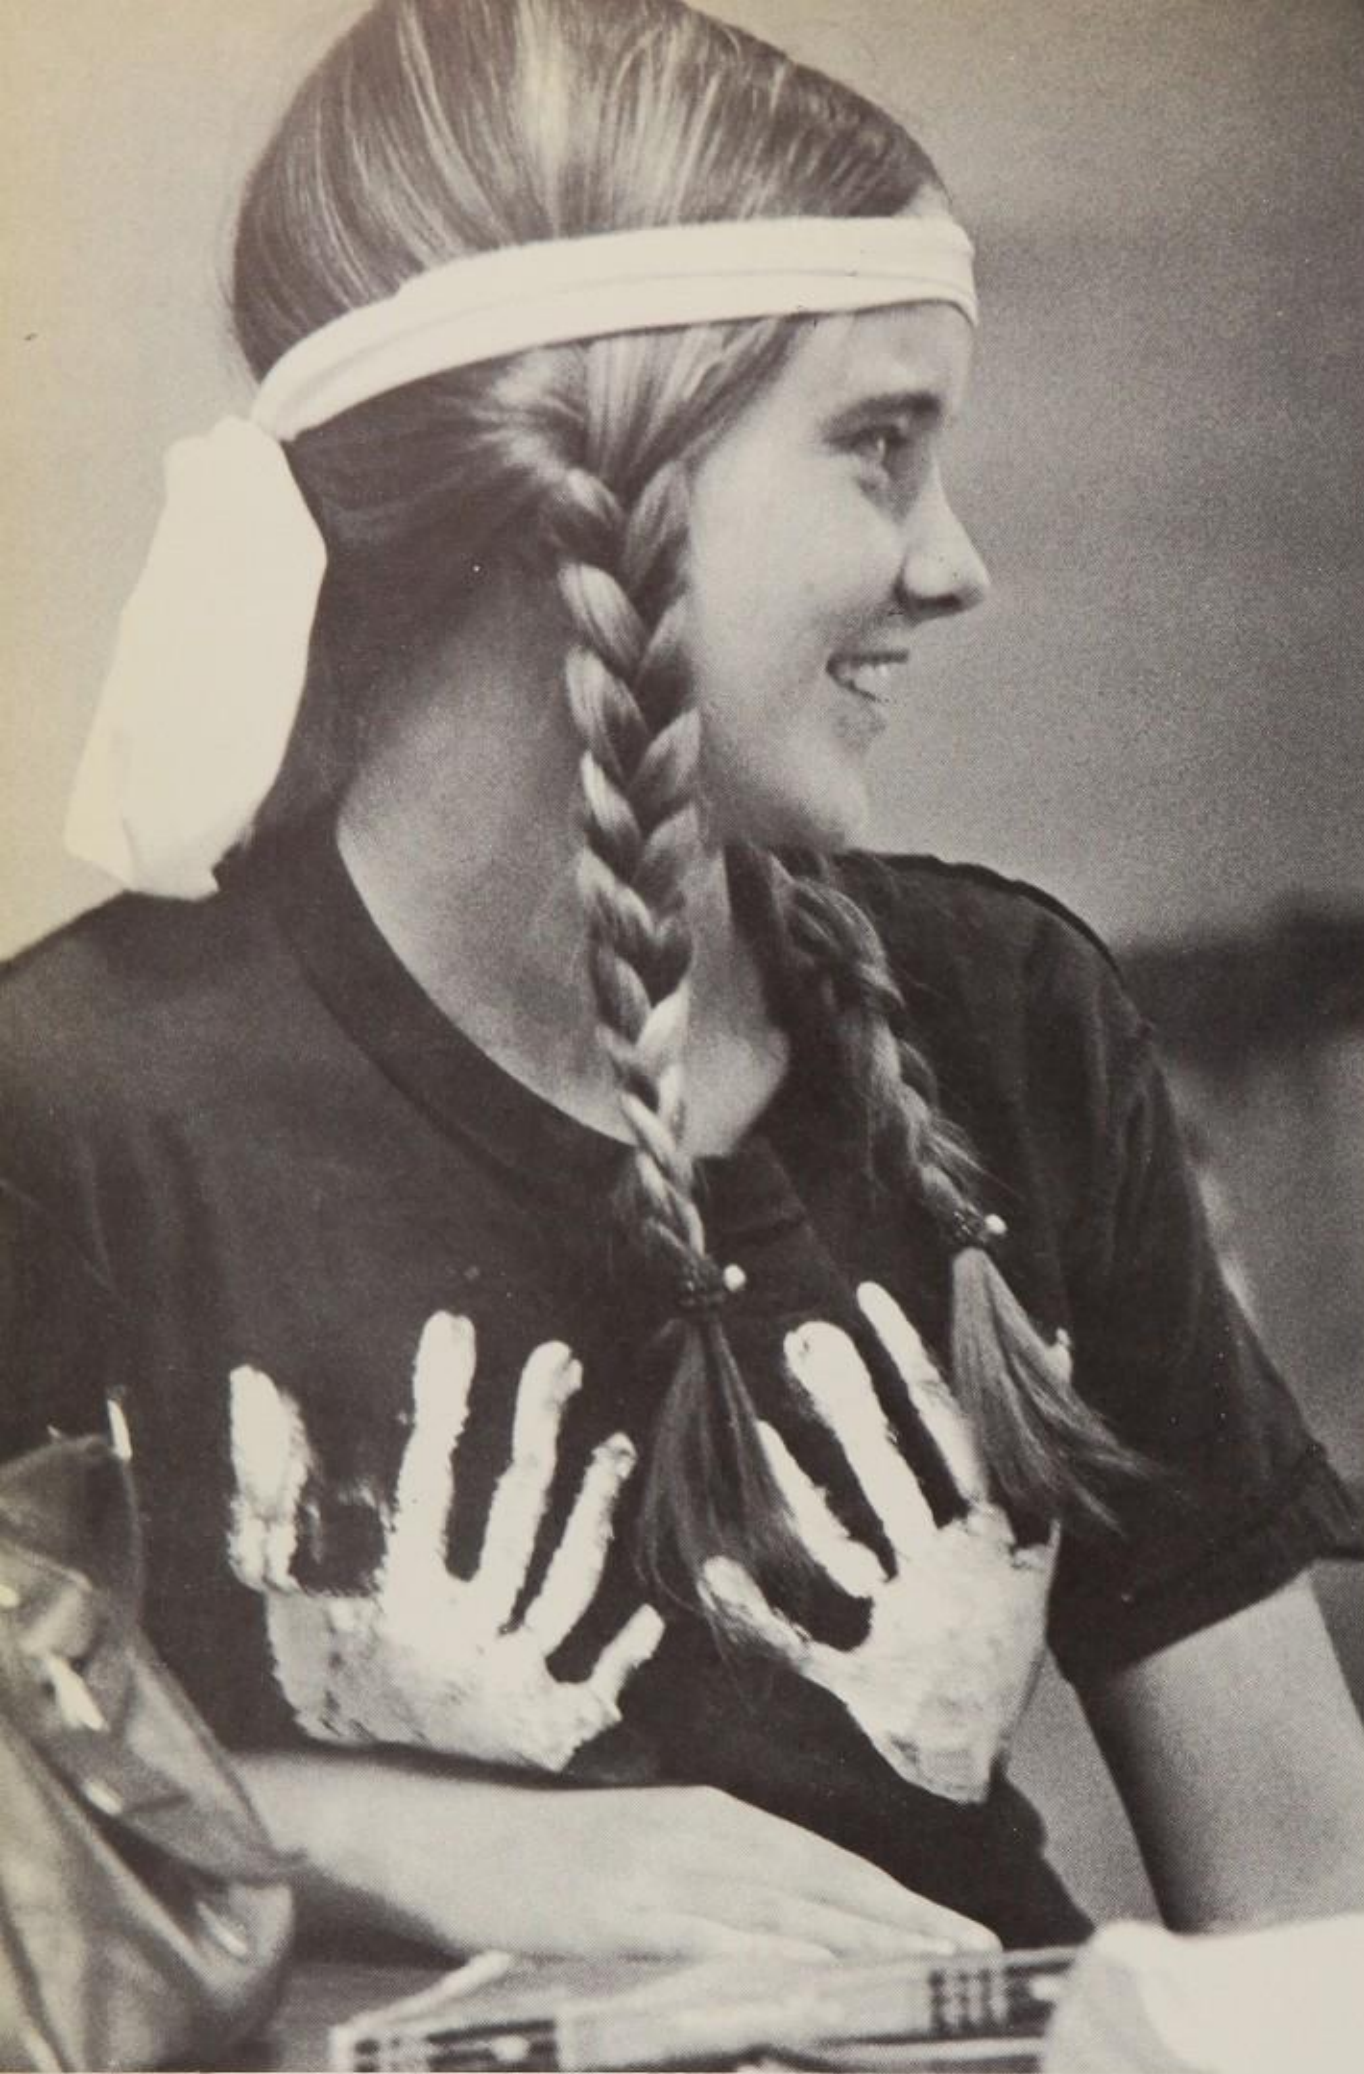

glaring,

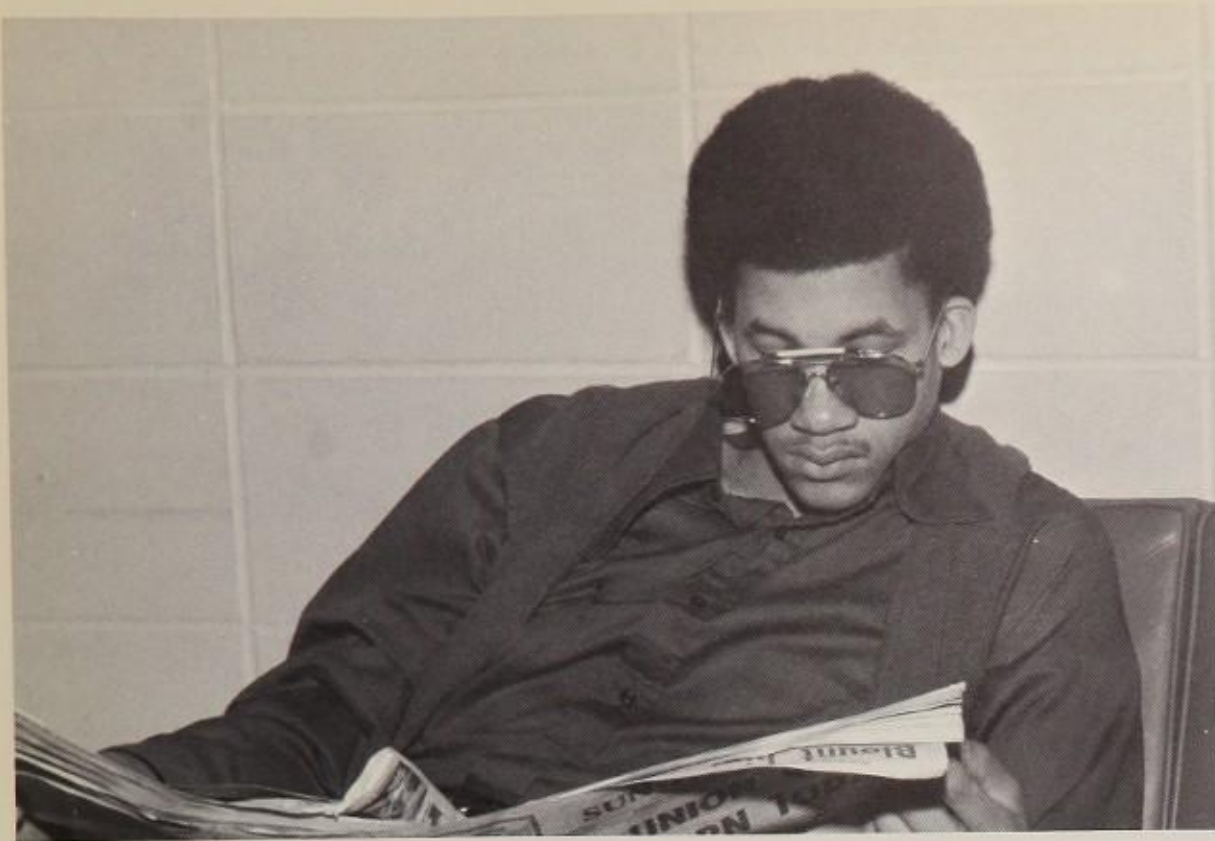

creating,

learning,

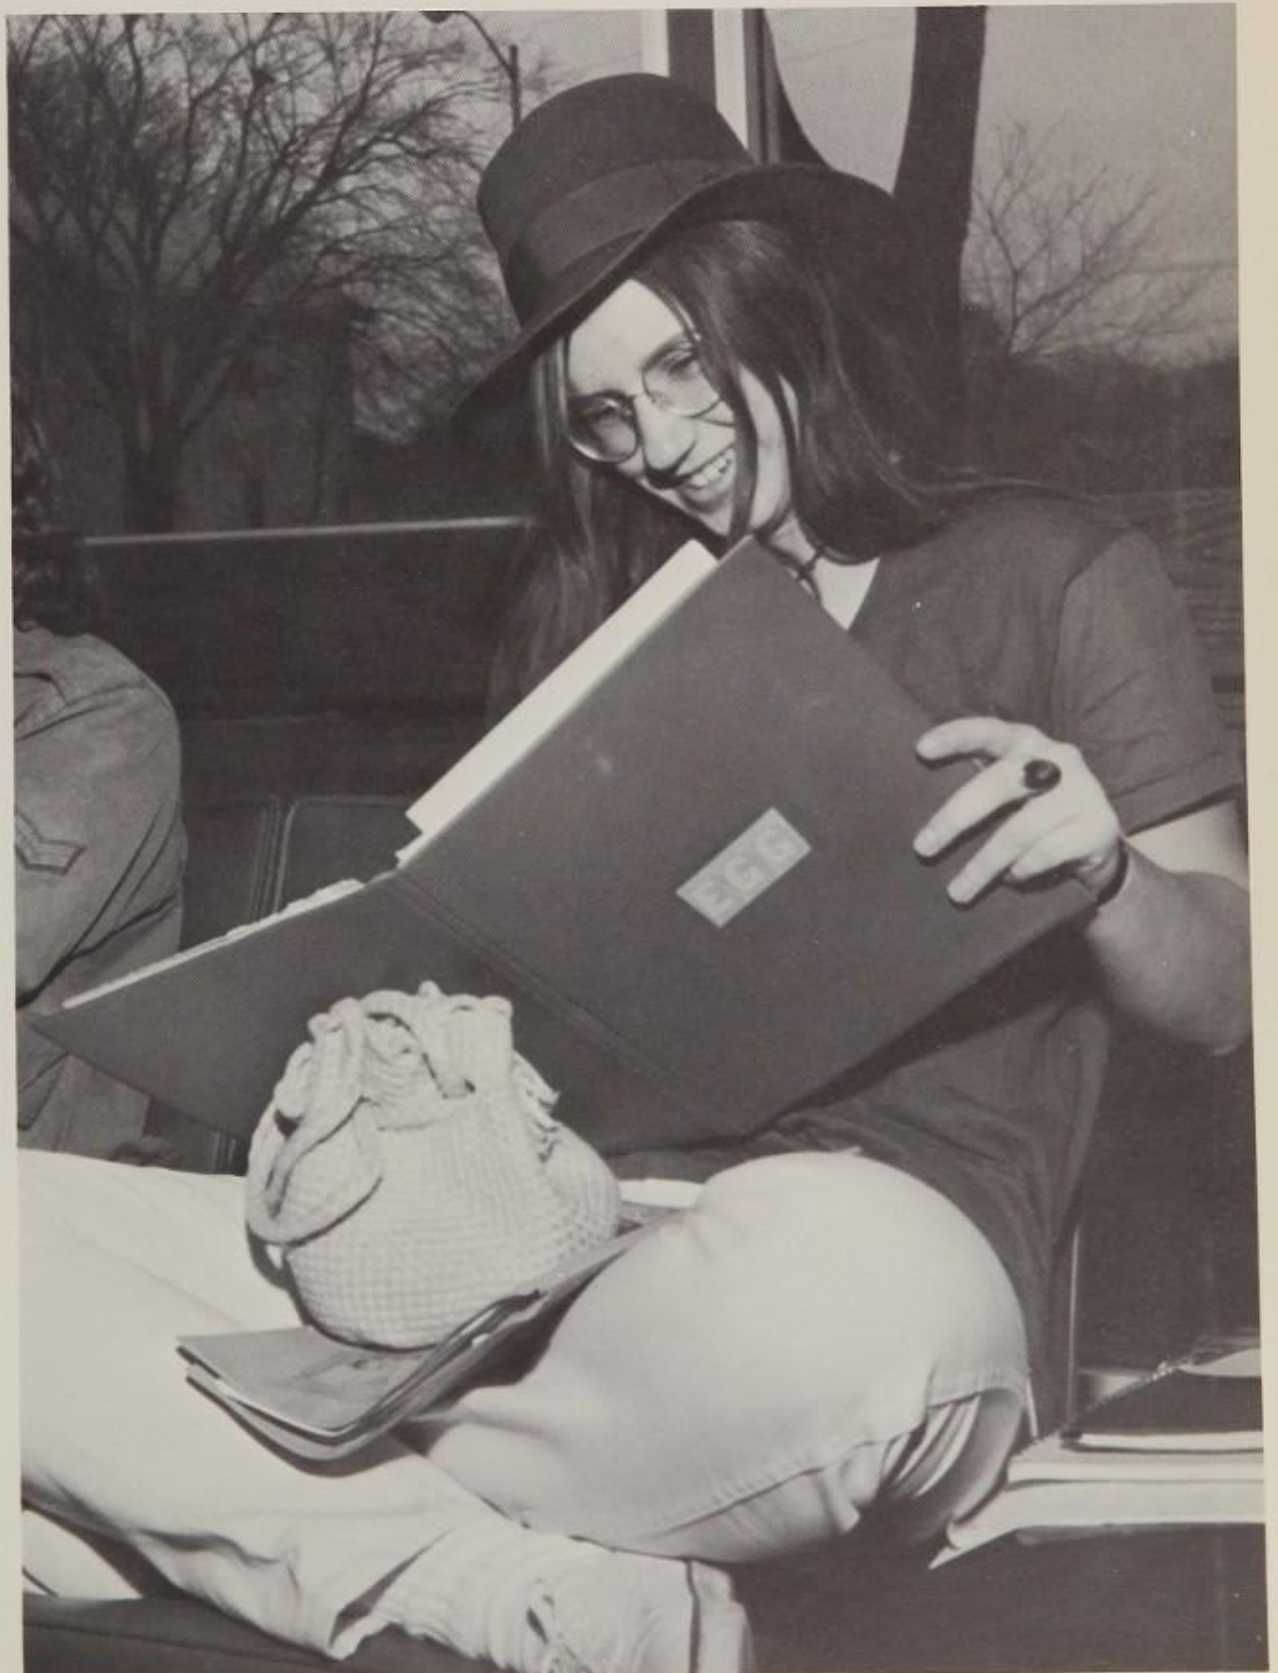

loving. . .

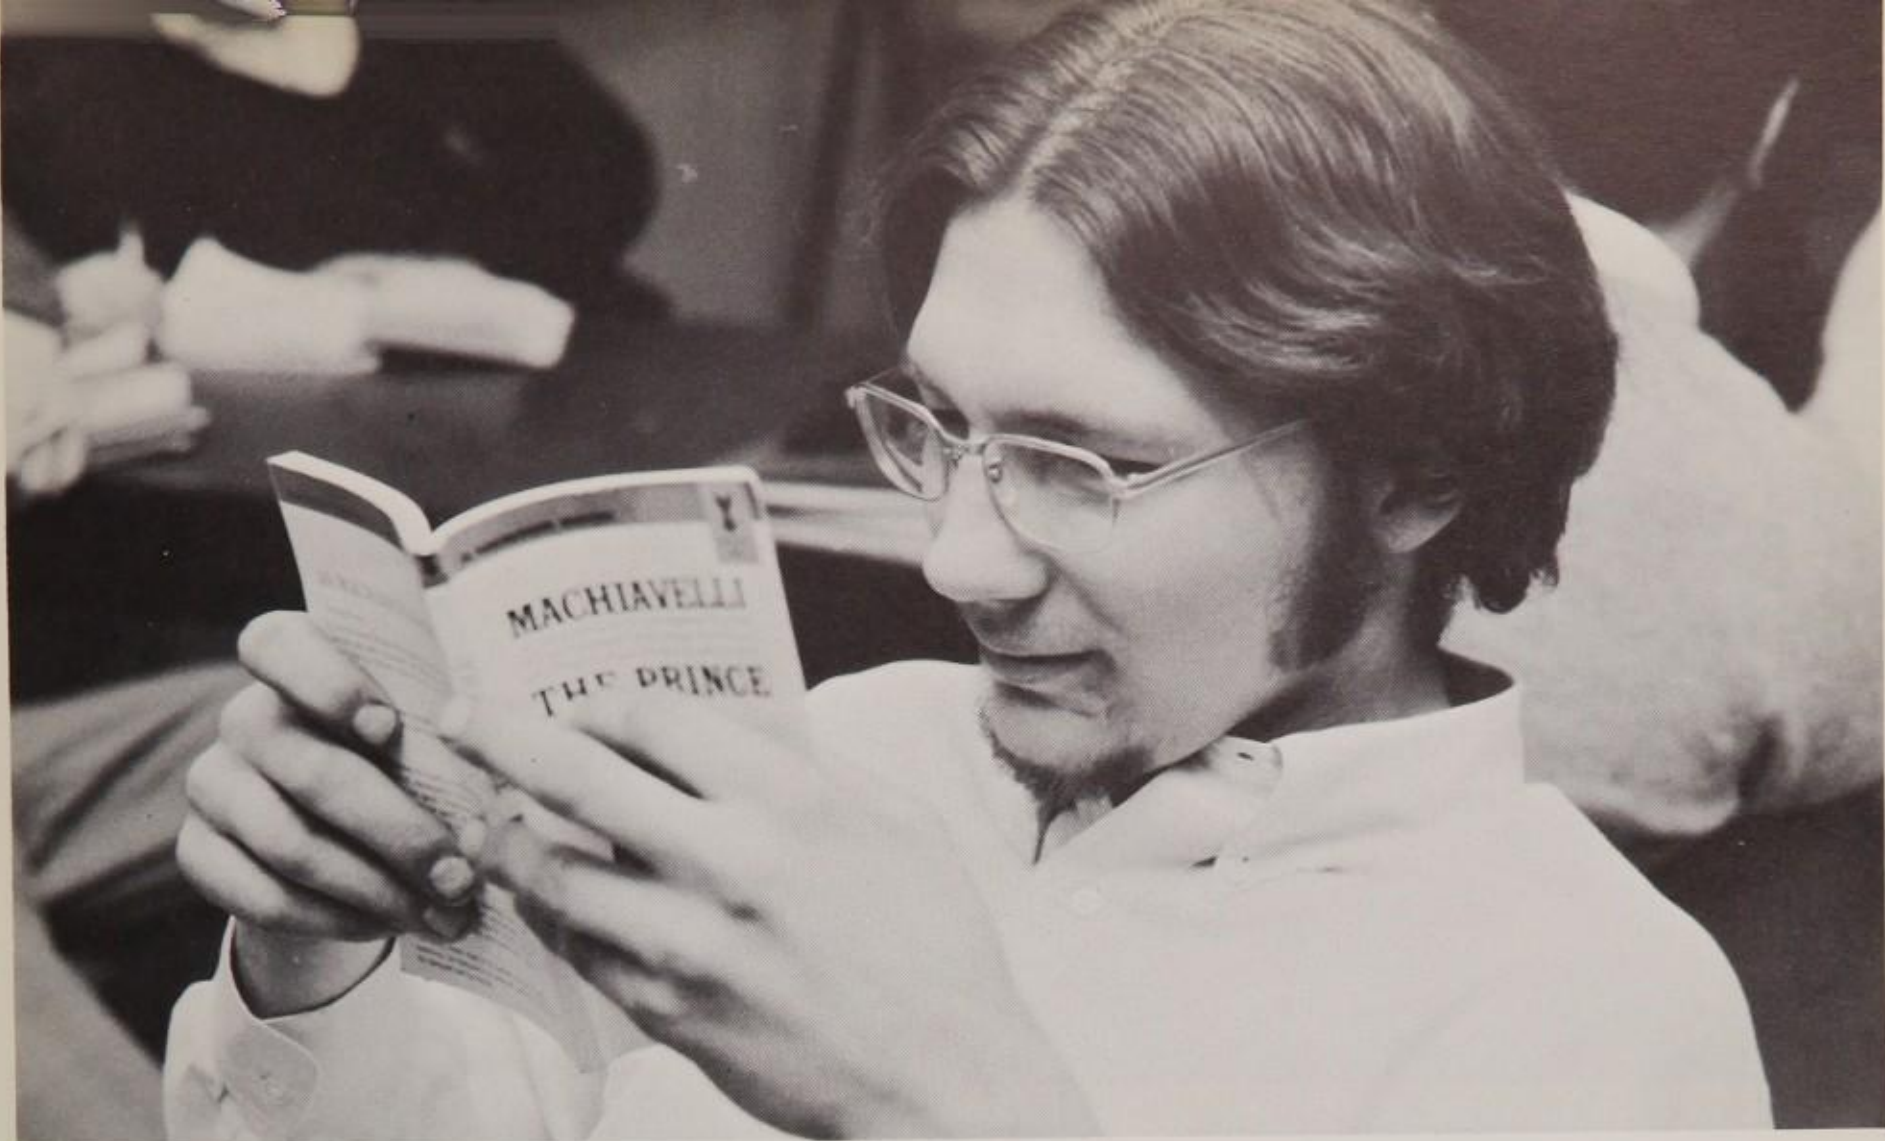

... fooling around,
wondering,
arguing,
exploring,
vegetating. . .

... contemplating,
relaxing,
laughing,
pondering,
grinning.

Four graduation ceremonies follow varied themes

Orchestra members listen to Denise Walther's graduation speech during the Michael School commencement.

ETHS Seniors took a greater part this year in planning the four school commencements. Michael and Beardsley School Commencements were held June 10 and the Boltwood and Bacon School Commencements were held June 11 in the auditorium, immediately followed by a reception in the Michael cafeteria and court.

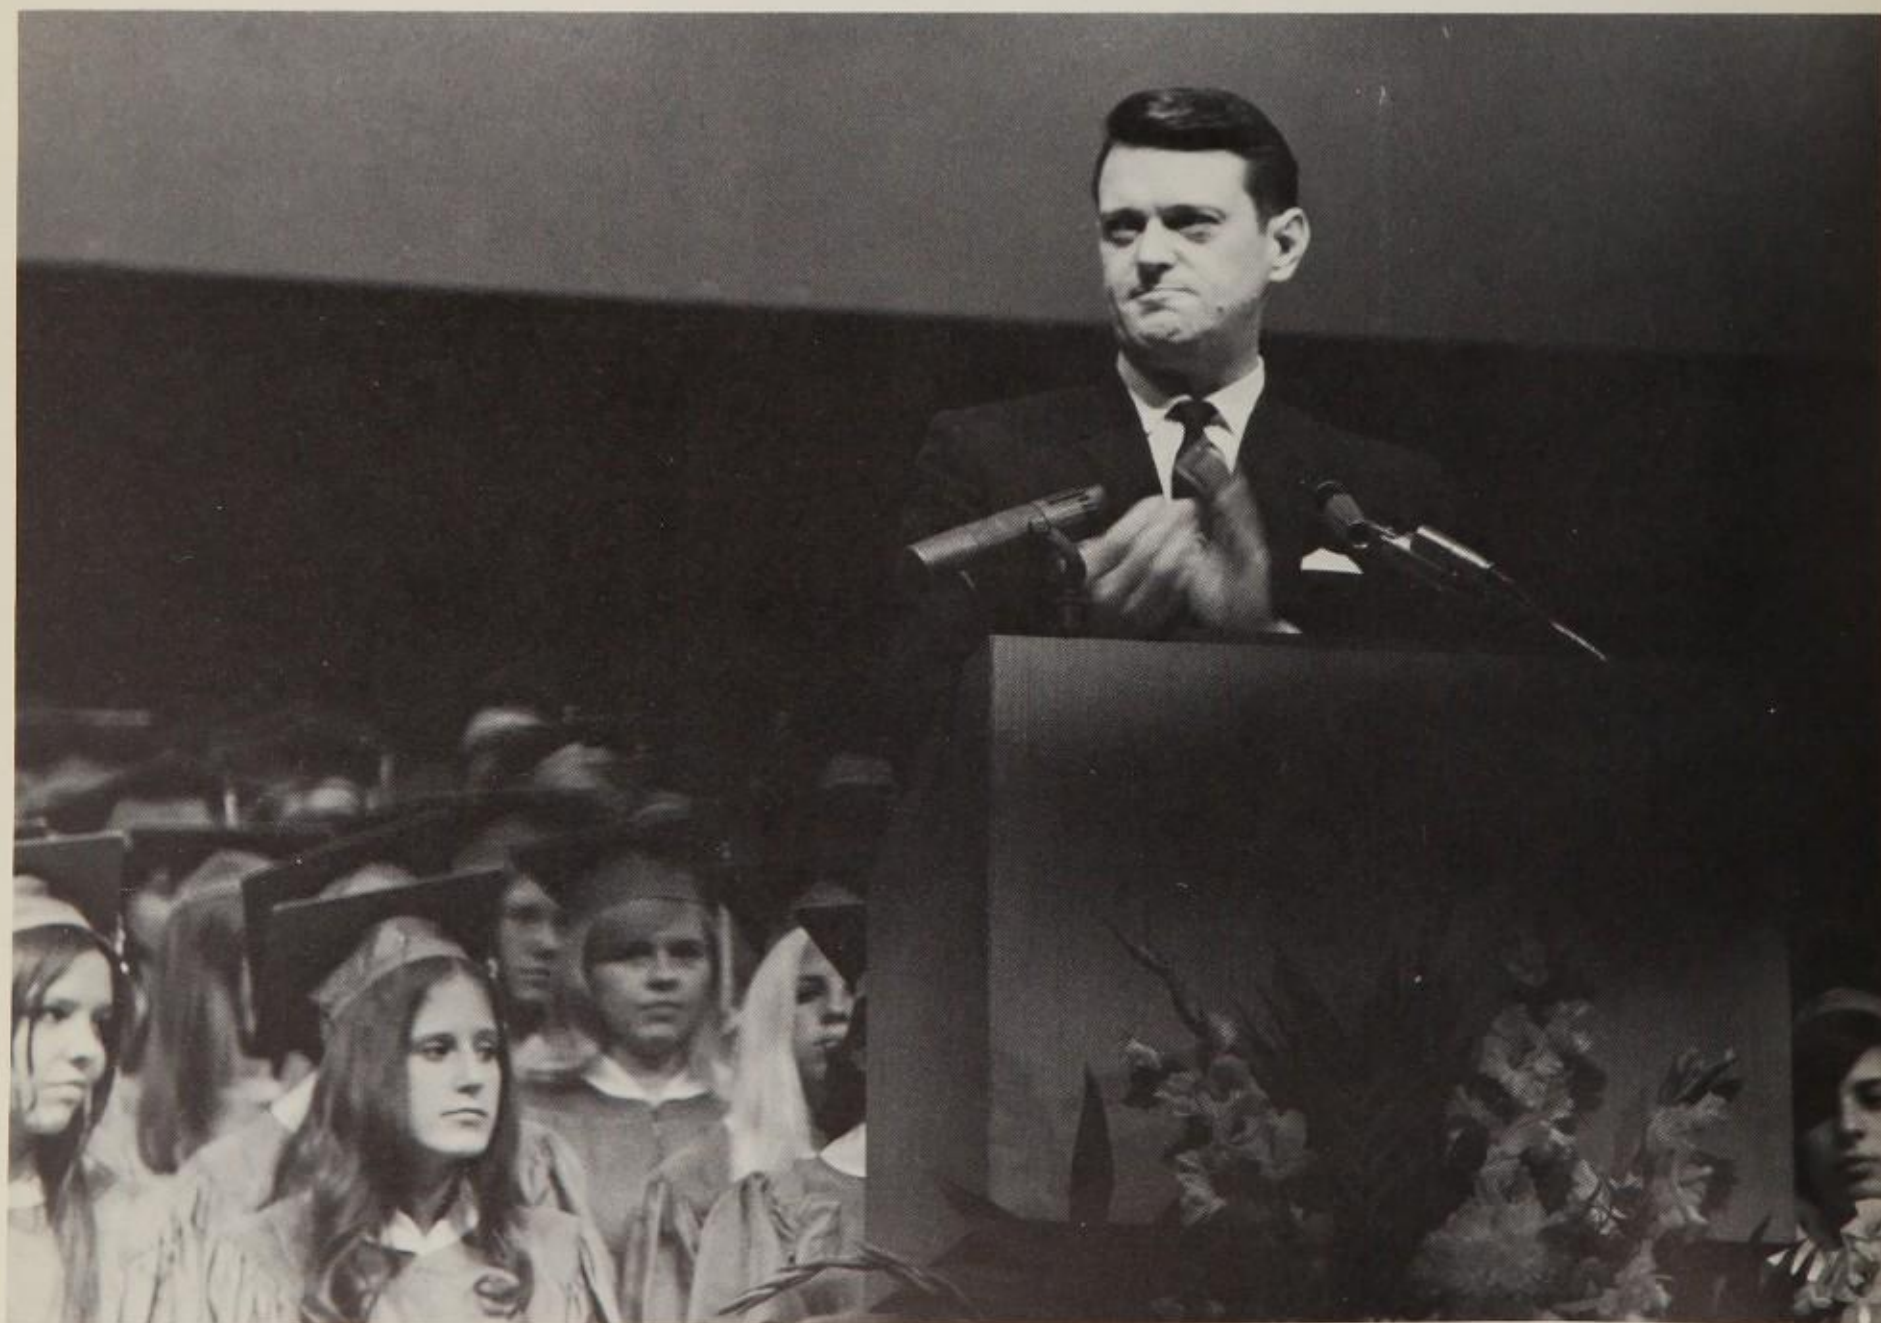

Michael School Commencement featured speakers Ken Yale and Denise Walther, and the Symphonic Wind Ensemble and Michael School Vocal Ensemble.

Beardsley School Commencement was planned by a joint committee of students, teachers, and Principal Mr. Philip McDevitt. Graduation speakers Leah Komaiko and Mike Fishl dealt with the graduating Senior's reactions to their years at ETHS.

Boltwood Commencement featured speaker Robert Massello and instrumentalists Veronica Berkes, Nancy Hair, Elizabeth Mason, and Robert Weiss who played Mozart's "Flute Quartette in D. Major."

Bacon School gave its interpretation of "Revolution in the 70's," as viewed by seniors James Kinzer, Bill Geiger, Gwen Stevens, and Bill Royal. Jeff Pietrangelo performed a trumpet solo and Ben Bridges gave both the invocation and benediction.

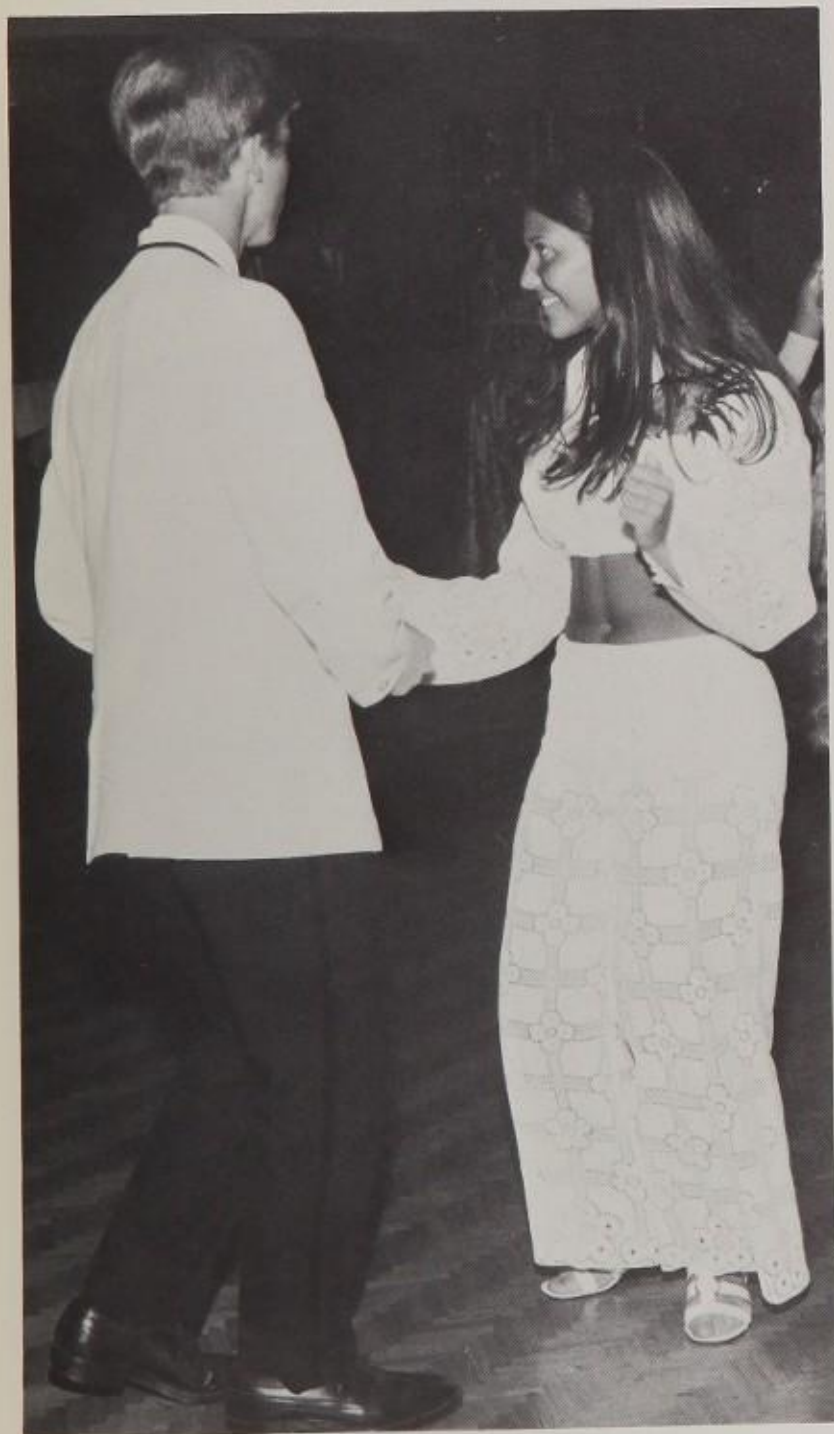

Senior Prom was held at the Sheraton-Chicago, the first time that prom had been held out of Evanston. Entertainment was provided by the Orphanage and the Esquires, which was preceded by an optional seven-course dinner.

Graduating Beardsley Seniors pay varied amounts of attention to commencement speaker Principal Phillip McDevitt.

Bob Burkhead and Kathy Kuttner enjoy the dancing space provided by the Sheraton-Chicago ballroom.

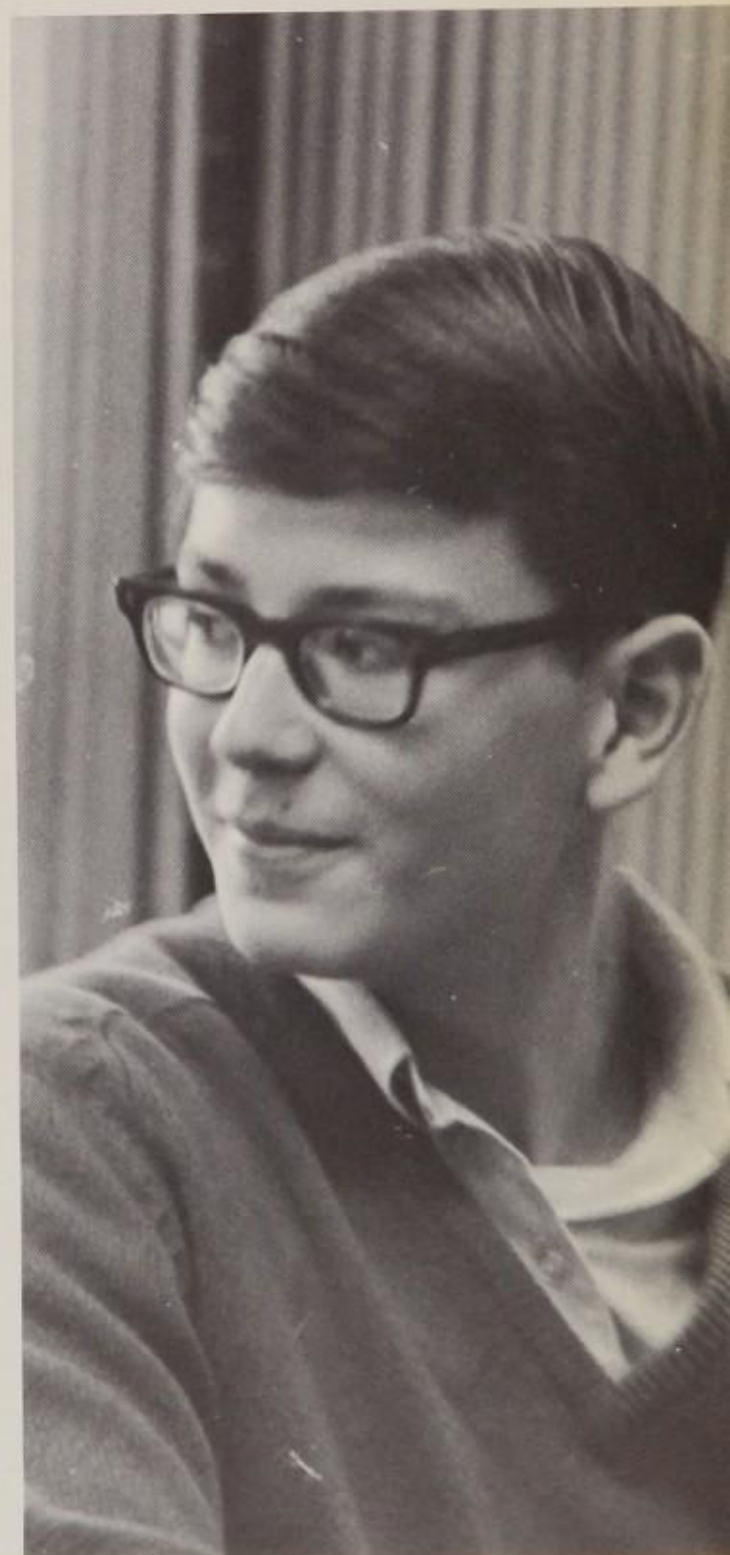

With instructions from Leah Komaiko, George Haas pours a cup of punch for his prom date Colette Dick.
